March 27, 2002 — The validity of the city's part 41 sewer permit, issued by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), was called into question when the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association filed a contested case with the MDEQ.

May 23, 2002 — The Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association filed a lawsuit against the city, claiming the city is unlawfully constructing the sewer line.

April 16, 2002 — Judge Richard Allen Griffin, presiding over the appellate court, entered an order, remanding the case back to Pajtas for "further proceedings."

June 7, 2002 — Pajtas reversed his September 2001 decision ruling it is unlawful for proceeds from the $18.8 million bond to fund construction of a new high school to pay for the city sewer extension to the site.

June 7, 2002 — Pajtas denied the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association's request for a preliminary injunction against the city of Charlevoix to stop construction.

June 8, 2002 — Charlevoix City Council met June 8 and voted to put the project on hold until funding issues are worked out.

June 24, 2002 — Charlevoix School Board approved a settlement agreement with Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association and a new contract through which they will maintain ownership of the sewer line.

took place until commissioners on the committee turned in their own meeting minutes.

According to those minutes, committee members discussed creating a County Administrator position, including salary for this position, benefits and retirement programs. Commissioner's present were: Behling, Price and former commissioner Joan Blanchard.

Brandon believes she was not informed of this meeting because the commissioners did not want her to know what they were discussing, the report states. Brandon was reportedly against the creation of a County Administrator position.

When Price was asked about the meeting, the report says, "He said he recalled the meeting, but did not know who took the minutes. Further, he did not know they were turned into the Clerks' office. He could not recall specifically why the meeting was held and added this was not the normal course of business."

Behling told the investigator he could not recall the situation in regards to why that meeting was not posted or why it had not been reported to the clerk's office.

The report also indicates commissioners may have been discussing hiring Jarema as the county civil attorney, in order to avoid a lawsuit by Jarema over his termination, before and after the March 6 meeting.

Smith called Commissioner Shirley Roloff at her home, on March 5 — the night before the Personnel Committee meeting in question — to tell her that he had a possible solution to hire Jarema as the county's civil attorney, as a "compromise to resolve the matter."

When asked what he meant by this, Smith said the county had been in civil litigation with another terminated employee and that employee had been awarded a large amount of money. He said he was trying to avoid this by hiring Jarema.

Commissioners also planned to fight any charges.

In response to this, Kur wrote the attorney general's office stating, "I feel strongly:...that if these guys are allowed to get away with this and sort of pick and choose (based on what they are talking about) when they need to comply with the law...that they effectively can always circumvent the Open Meetings Act."

CARDS OF THANKS 070

THANK YOU Charlevoix City and Charlevoix Township Fire Departments for, what we believe, was a miracle - that is saving (for the most part) our "family" home of nearly 100 years from total destruction while I was recuperating in Boulder Park Terrace. Your cooperative work is to be commended - hats off to both departments. Thanks to neighbor, Amy Venniman, for calling 9-1-1, and to the K&D Swanson Truck Drivers, Brad Eaton and Scott Peebles, for checking to see if anyone was in the house. Thanks too, to family, neighbors and friends who participated in removing the main floor contents, and the Dennis Dominic family for the pizza and pop. Your caring and help is appreciated more than words can express.

Clyde Cunningham & Family

SCRAPBOOK

ODDS 'N Ends

By Fran Martin

Gee the things you don't see around these days. Couldn't believe my eyes the other day when I saw a car driving through town with all things, a cute little monkey sitting in the open window watching all the people gaping at him and probably looking like, well, people. Anyway, we had a witness to it so don't say we had one too many at the nearest pub.

And probably visitors are just as amazed at seeing Buttercup on the street. In case you haven't seen the little lamb who lives at Sunset Lodge. He's got a cute black face and ears, four black stocking feet and legs. Anyway, as you know, he gets himself dyed regularly to keep that pretty yellow coat. There are splotches of the white around his ears that have to be dabbed with the dye and don't always take the dye as readily as they should. Anyway, one day last week when Mrs. B who is asked a million questions when she takes him out, had someone ask her about the white spots around his ears that didn't look too yellow. She quickly explained to the interested party that the cotton didn't take the dye as well as the wool and the lady answered with a surprised, "Oh." Wonder what her reaction was when she'd given the answer some thought?

Anyway, Buttercup made a "grand entrance" at, of all places, the Michigan Veterinary Medical Society show. We'd been afraid one of D.V.s would have decided to use him for a guinea pig, but nothing happened and all the ladies oohed and aahed and Buttercup just looked cute as he rode around in the 150-year-old baby buggy in which he was presented. Oh for the life of a lamb.

Understand we might have some more livestock around when and if Judge Supp carries out his plans to become a rancher.

Wasn't it just like summer last week with all the people in town for the conventions? The Beach Hotel was really jumping and it certainly made our all-too-short season seem a little longer.

About the rustic bridge... remember we mentioned last week that it looked as though it were being raised. A call from E.J. Edwards of the club told us that it was vandals who had damaged both ends of the bridge by literally tearing the familiar old structure apart. The club is having it reinforced and rebuilt so we won't be without one of the favorite old spots. Our apologies to Mr. Edwards for not checking with him before using the story.

We know it doesn't seem possible, but the summer band concerts in the park will begin next Wednesday night. These concerts are a big attraction here. Charlevoix is one of the few cities in the states that has a city band which presents weekly concerts for free. The band has been rehearsing all winter and has an extensive repertoire for your entertainment this summer, so come Wednesday night, how about dropping around and giving the boys and girls a hand, they give their services for your entertainment so show up at the concerts as a way of saying "thank you," to the band and its director, C.A. Odmark.

How about that storm last week. Out at Hayes, it developed into a miniature tornado and did a lot of damage. And the rain... how it rained. We understand that just scads of fields were flooded and the seeds washed out. The Sneathens have had their bean field washed out twice this spring we're told and there are others who have suffered equally as much. As someone said the other day, about the rain, it's getting to be just like the tropics. It rains every afternoon and then turns hot. For our money, we could do without the electric storms too. We don't mind saying we don't like 'em, but like weather in general, it's something you can't do much about.

Swabies, dozens of 'em. Did you see them around over the weekend? If you didn't, you just weren't in town for they were everywhere. A Naval Reserve training ship with 50 enlists and an equal number of trainees plus officers, spent the weekend here. As their ship laid off the piers because, for some reason, the skipper decided he couldn't bring her in. Didn't he know we had PCEs in here before? Anyway, the sailors were here, ship or no ship, with the liberty launch working overtime running a passenger service every half hour or so.

If you've never seen an orchid cactus, you're in for a treat as we were the other day when we stopped by to see the one owned by the Floyd Supps, in full bloom. That is, one of some 25 buds was in bloom and it's beautiful. Having a flat leaf that also forms the stem, the buds appear on the ends of these stems, a triple layer of petals shaped like a trumpet and centered with a soft green and a speck of orchid from which it derives its names. The petals are a red red and are just out of this world. And believe us, it's much lovelier than our description 'cause we don't know too much about flowers except we love them and they're pretty. But if you're making a slide collection of beautiful blossoms, don't miss these.

This is a story of three skunks. It is not our story but we will tell you about it as it was told to us. Seems there were two boys who live on the north side, Joel and Eric Arrival, who were en route home from the movie the other night when they saw a big old skunk making its way across the street to the Weathervane. Joel said he thought it was just another skunk until he distinctly heard a tiny voice call "Mama." He looked again and here were two baby skunks calling their mother who by this time had gone up the small step to the front of the building. The small fry were having trouble making the step so the mother came back down, picked up each by a paw and hoisted the pair up the step. Skunks are known to make sounds, but as we said, this is the story as it was told to us. P.S. Eric doesn't verify the story to a point where he agrees the skunks called, "Mama."

The Girl Scout Council concluded two successful programs last week — Troop and Day Camp. We think a big vote of gratitude is due those people who work all year with the Girl Scouts to make the program such a success. They give their time and talents so the girls of the community can enjoy an outstanding program. Incidentally, a nurse is required to be on hand at all times in the event of an accident. Only causalty this year, was a fractured foot. The victim was the troop camp nurse, Mrs. Robert Bergmann.

We don't know how he does it but our harbormaster, Captain Joe Howard, is sure a favorite with the gals around town. And if you don't believe us, we have witnesses that a group of pretty cute tricks were serenading him on Bridge Street one day last week. Soon, all the yachtsmen will be back and Captain Howard will be busy rolling out the red carpet as only he can.

From now on we're going to have a healthy respect for every strawberry we eat. They happen to be our favorite berry and in a year, we consume quite a few. After doing a story on strawberry growers this week, we'll appreciate them a little more for now we have an idea of all the work that goes into the raising and marketing of the scrumptious red berries.

Dockside Press Is Opened by Bill Ratigan

The Dockside Press, owned and operated by author Bill Ratigan opened this week in an old shanty along Shipyard Row on Belvedere Avenue.

A retreat for visiting artists and for all those, young and old, who like to browse among old books and curiosities, the Dockside Press, so aptly named by John Cook, talented local artists, will display everything from a 5 cent Russian tea caddy to a unique gold coin scale valued at $5,000 according to Mr. Ratigan.

An outstanding feature of the shop is the old fashioned hand press brought to this region from a Colorado mining camp. Joint owner the press and former Denver and Hollywood radio writer, Mrs. Ratigan, thinks it particularly appropriate because her grandfather was an across-the-plains pioneer to the Rocky Mountain gold fields who founded Denver's famous Elephant Corral, and because her great uncle owned the equally famous Antlers Hotel in Colorado Springs, a world renowned resort and probable site of the West Point of the Air he was instrumental in founding.

The Dockside Press also is supposed to be the office of the author of "Soo Canal" but it is doubtful he will accomplish much in his new surroundings for he has already found several exciting books among the hundreds displayed which he did not know he had. He has also spent a great deal of time since the opening earlier this week in displaying the wall pictures of regional fishing catches and old time fishing scenes.

The owner of the Dockside Press, Mr. Ratigan, has also announced that books and other reading material will be given to deserving cases. This week, the first youngster to give Fran Martin of the Courier staff a good reason for wanting the books, will be presented with a 10-volume set of the World's literature.

Wacky Red Hat Society has first meeting

RED

be the start of a long relationship dedicated to laughter, camaraderie and the pursuit of wackiness.

"We talked about everything under the sun," she said, as a girlish grin stretched across her face.

Readers may ask, "What's wacky about tea?"

Well, nothing, but it's the signature Red Hat Society head-to-toe wardrobe that livens things up.

Before making their way to the Mason Street antiques and pastry shop, each member slipped into a deep purple ensemble.and situated a bright red hat on top of their groomed coif.

Heads turned as passersby took notice of the ladies' familiar faces framed with red feathered hats and bright red net boas. Vandenberg said, when the well known faces met those of friends who wandered by, perplexed expressions accompanied by friendly waves followed.

VandenBerg said her husband's response was supportive, but many ask, "Why a club based on what one wears to meetings?" Well, according to VandenBerg, the outfits fit the aim of finding and revealing a person's over 50 spunk, while lightheartedly embracing maturity.

Now the "red hatters" plan to be out-and-about monthly. Their July stop will be at Christel Gibbons' house where she is planning a garden tea.

But, plans for months to follow the Gibbons tea haven't been set in stone and that lack of meticulous pre-planning is the cornerstone of the society's draw.

"All of us have been in clubs for so long, we're more or less tired of duties and jobs. We're still dedicated volunteers, but this is something for fun — no dues, no jobs, no rules," VandenBerg said.

Even the tea theme isn't set in stone, VandenBerg said you may even see the group at the local pancake house.

Oh, there is just one rule — to wear the coveted red hat you must fulfill one rite of passage....age. Only ladies 50 and over can cap themselves in red. Women under 50 are welcome, but are asked to wear a pink hat and lavender outfit until the big birthday when they will be honored with the coveted "reduation."

The Charlevoix chapter joins over 30 other Michigan Red Hat Clubs and thousands of women nationwide in pursuit of social fun, with no strings attached.

VandenBerg first heard of the Red Hat Society while reading the newspaper in Panama City Beach, Fla. where a Red Hat group had formed. She later read about a second group in the Grand Rapids Press and knew Charlevoix, her home for the past 16 years, had to have its own.

The inspiration for the society originally came from a poem written in 1961 by an English woman, Jenny Joseph, titled Warning:

When I am an old woman, I shall wear purple
With a red hat which doesn't go and doesn't suit me.
And I shall spend my pension on brandy and summer gloves
And satin sandals, and say we've no money for butter.
I shall sit down on the pavement when I'm tired
And gobble up samples in shops and press alarm bells
And run my stick along the public railings
And make up for the sobriety of my youth
I shall go out in my slippers in the rain
And pick the flowers in other people's gardens
And learn to spit.
You can wear terrible shirts and grow more fat
And eat three pounds of sausages at a go
Or only bread and a pickle for a week
And hoard pens and pencils and beer mats and things in boxes.
But now we must have clothes that keep us dry
And pay our rent and not swear in the street
And set a good example for the children.
We will have friends to dinner and read the papers.
But maybe I ought to practice a little now?
So people who know me are not too shocked and surprised
When suddenly I am old and start to wear purple.

The poem has since made its way from friend to friend, and onto mugs, t-shirts and other merchandise. Then its booming popularity was discovered in the 1980s by Sue Ellen Cooper, a California resident, who after reading Warning, passed a vintage red hat and a copy of the poem, on to a friend for her fiftieth birthday, starting the Red Hat phenomenon.

The trend has since moved across the nation and Michigan hosted its first state Red Hat Society convention in September of 2001 in Frankenmuth.

House numbering an issue

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Complying with Charlevoix County's house numbering rules could save your life and non-compliance could cost you some cash.

So the answer seems obvious, properly post your property number. But Charlevoix City Fire Chief Doug Carver said it's not that simple and property numbering problems have caused delays in emergency service to Charlevoix County townships.

Carver said when someone is experiencing a medical emergency or there is a fire, every second counts. And emergency personnel are losing precious time searching for the correct home address.

When calls are made to 9-1-1 an address corresponding to the property tax identification number from the telephone where the call came from will appear. But knowing the house number and finding the house with ease do not go hand in hand.

Carver said in the city of Charlevoix, houses are closer together and it is easier to search out an address, but in the country, where homes are farther apart, emergency personnel are struggling.

The search is less common in cases of fire where smoke is visible. But fire personnel have run into situations where there is no physical evidence, like in a case of carbon monoxide alarms or internal smoke in a building, and the building isn't properly numbered. This means the crews end up passing it.

These emergency delays prompted the Charlevoix County Commissioners to step in and amend the county's house numbering ordinance.

Settlement ends school sewer issue on Marion

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

For now, the two year Marion Center Road sewer battle has ended.

On June 26, Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas approved a consent judgment entered by Charlevoix Public Schools, the city of Charlevoix and the Charlevoix Area Natural Resources Preservation Association.

Pajtas' approval officially shuts three cases the environmental group brought against the school and city, including a case pending in the Michigan Court of Appeals, a contested part 41 Michigan Department of Environmental Quality public sewer permit and an extension of the contested permit case against the city.

The cases may be inactive right now, but that doesn't mean the three parties won't some day be back in court for these same cases.

According to the environmental group's lawyer, Karen Ferguson of the Traverse City firm Olson and Bzdok, a consent judgment differs from a settlement in one important way, the case is never closed.

"The judge maintains jurisdiction, so if the judgment is violated, it's straight to court," she said.

After Pajtas signed the judgment even Joseph Seidel, a member of the environmental group who has been outspoken about his disdain for the sewer project, was smiling.

"All of this achieved a very good balance. It got the school to expend proper funds to build the sewer and will successfully control growth and

Wacky fun at Horton Bay

By J.C. REINDL
Special to the Courier

No matter what you may have heard otherwise, Hemingway never did see a parade like this one.

The annual Horton Bay Fourth of July parade will take place at 1 p.m., tomorrow, July 4 in downtown Horton Bay.

Although Horton Bay has on occasion been home to a parade from as far back as Hemingway's time and even the late 1800s, it was not until the early 1970s that the Horton Bay Parade began to take on the absurd and farcical character that it does today.

The entry lineup this year begins at 12 p.m. and parade organizers advise spectators to come early. While formal tallies have not been taken in recent years, long-time parade participant, organizer and Horton Bay resident G.T. Long muses how "past crowds have usually been less than a million" — though 15,000 people would be his best estimate.

The parade route begins at the Horton Bay Road intersection and continues past the Horton Bay General Store, where entries are allowed a 2 minute presentation to the crowd and judges. After much deliberation, the judge panel will award a prize to the favorite parade entry.

This year's parade theme is Horton-America Ethnic Fest, a celebration of Horton Bay's ethnic diversity.

John Rohe, czar of the Horton Bay Parade Committee, says the Art, craft shows this July

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

The Fourth of July is a time to celebrate freedom and independence and these attributes can also be enjoyed during two upcoming art shows where artists create unique pieces freely.

The Fourth Annual Downtown Charlevoix Art Festival will be from noon to 9 p.m. on July 5 and from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on July 6 in East Park.

The Art Festival will feature more than 150 artists, some who have been published in art magazines, according to information provided by Jeanette Rodriguez, communications director for Howard Alan Events.

The public will be able to buy and view various items such as paintings, sculptures, photographs and much more.

A festival wouldn't be complete without music. Entertainment will be provided by sitarist Stephen Mikes, steel drummer Doug Walker and vocalist and keyboardist Kayte Wolf.

The following weekend tents and booths will be set up as the Charlevoix Thirty-fourth Annual Craft Show kicks off.

The craft show will carve its niche in the Charlevoix community on July 13 and 14.

According to the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, many local artists will be featured at the Craft Show.

Local artists from Charlevoix are: Mary Lee Huber, Florence Peterson, Anne Russell and Rick and Carol Torres. Artists from East Jordan are: Kristine Busk, Marvin and Sylvia Christner and George Johnson. Artists from Petoskey are: Susan Borowiak, Aaron Hamel and Barbara Liddicoat.

At the craft show, visitors can purchase and view various items ranging from folk art and baskets to birdhouses and rustic furniture.

Food and beverages will be available during the show.

Charlevoix to have its annual July 4 parade

The combined Color Guard and Rifle Squad of the American Legion Post #226 and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post #1153 will host the 2002 July Fourth parade in Charlevoix.

The parade will kick off at 10 a.m. when the groups leave the American Legion Hall on East Garfield in the city and they will travel to Charlevoix's East Park where a celebratory ceremony will take place.

The local veterans will be joined by Vietnam Veterans who have traveled to Charlevoix from Saginaw to join in the Independence Day festivities.

Those with groups who would like to be included in the parade are asked to contact Charlie Butcher at (231) 547-4724.

Only groups which include veterans or follow in the theme are asked to inquire.

Local man dies in crash

A 59-year-old Ellsworth man died after a one-vehicle accident around 4:30 p.m., June 30 on West Upright and Park streets in Charlevoix Township.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said Terry F. Boss's vehicle ran off the road and struck a utility pole and large rock, before rolling over. Boss was dead upon arrival of the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service.

Lasater said there is a possibility Boss died before the crash occurred. He said his department is waiting for the medical examiners report to determine the cause of death at this time.

The crash remains under investigation.

Corrections

Several readers called in to inform us there was an error in last week's "Why is That?" column on page 6.

They said the Charlevoix Venetian Festival has had music and fireworks for many years, not just in the last 10 years.

Plus, in the editor's column on page 5, the city does not give discounts to residents on their water bill for watering their lawn. According to Charlevoix City Treasurer Rick Brandi, the city of Charlevoix gives discounts to residents who water their lawns on their sewer bills.

Keep Charlevoix beautiful, clean up

EDITORIAL

Summer is the time of year when Charlevoix's beauty shines.

The beaches are packed with people enjoying the lakes in the hot summer afternoon. The dark blue color of the water mixes nicely with the colorful boats cruising along the surface. At dusk, the sun paints the sky and water brilliant oranges and reds, before disappearing below the horizon.

But, too often, mixed in with this splendid scenery is the dull dirty contrast of cigarette butts, fast food wrappers, various candy wrappers and the occasional used baby diaper.

Litter is simply spoiling the beauty that is Charlevoix this summer.

It baffles us why people would want to muck up our northern Michigan environment with their waste. We are unsure why they can't take it to a trash barrel, instead of tossing it on the beach or at the side of a road.

Perhaps it is laziness. Perhaps they are jealous of the beauty we have around us. Whatever it is, please stop.

We urge all visitors to Charlevoix to help keep the area beautiful for future generations. Take those food wrappers, candy wrappers, empty bottles and baby diapers to the trash. It is usually a short walk and, besides keeping the area clean, it will give you some beneficial exercise.

This trash list also includes cigarette butts. Recently, we received a call from a reader — who is a smoker — wanting to let us know about the horrible amount of cigarette butts she has found on the beach.

It is not hard to save the butt when you are done with your cigarette and take it to a trash can. You can even put the butt back into your cigarette pack until you have a chance to dispose of it.

Keep Charlevoix Beautiful is not just a group that promotes the planting of flowers along Bridge Street. Keep Charlevoix Beautiful is a reminder, it takes all of us to keep this area free of litter and looking glorious.

Take some time to enjoy the swallows around Charlevoix

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

Life in Northern Michigan provides so many opportunities to commune with the out-of-doors that it is sometimes difficult to decide what to look at.

I have an opportunity to add to your list: Watching the cliff swallows on, around or under the South Pier causeway here in Charlevoix.

Cliff swallows build nests under the overhang of cliffs, under bridges and occasionally under the eaves of houses. You won't see the nests under the causeway without a mirror on a long stick or from a small boat moving up or down the channel.

There are a lot of nests under the causeway and at least a few of them persist from year to year. Some swallows return to the same nest each season. In early summer when they arrive — many of them on the same day — you can see them picking up mud from the edges of puddles and carrying it back to the causeway to repair or replace last year's nest. The nests are shaped like upside-down, slightly off-center clay vases, with a narrow opening at the bottom.

At this time of year, the adults are busy feeding young swallows in the nests. The food is mostly small insects picked up over the water of the channel or Lake Michigan. During days without much wind, the adults swoop up over the piers, drop down to within an inch or so of the water surface and fly at about 30 miles per hour while scooping insects out of the air with their open mouth.

Imagine doing that yourself. If you have ever read Richard Bach's book, "Jonathon Livingston Seagull," you know something of what such free, swift flight is like from the bird's point of view. If you haven't read "Jonathon Livingston Seagull," do so before watching the swallows.

The swallow's mastery of flight would put a seagull and most other birds to shame. They speed over the lake surface for 100 yards or so and when they have a full load of insects, they soar high and turn toward the shore. For the sheer joy of it they turn and swirl under the causeway a few times before managing to stop at just the right nest with the provisions for their young.

If your ears are better than mine, you might even be able to hear the young swallows calling to their speeding parents: a call different enough for each young one so the parent bird recognizes it.

An adult cliff swallow weighs just over one ounce, and has more wing surface per unit of weight than almost any other bird on earth. Its wings are narrow and angled back like those of a jet fighter. What that means is that it can do things in flight that other birds only dream about.

In flight it hardly seems to flap its wings unless it is trying to stop at the home nest. Close to the water it uses the cushion of air within a fraction of an inch of the surface to help propel itself. Its speed and grace are impressive.

Many years ago — so many that our planes had propellors — I flew for the U.S. Navy. I always wanted to fly with the grace and apparent abandon of the swallows, but I never managed it.

It is well worth a half hour during your lunch break to see something of the great joy of flight. Visit the South Pier. Watch the swallows. It will lift your spirits.

Letters to the editor

Love God and others

Editor:

Every so often, I stop, look around and take stock of just how I feel about certain things. Today I find myself thinking of my country, the United States — all 50 of them.

Yes 50, for sometimes I forget that we have added two new and exciting states. Exciting because of their contrasts. One being new and north — a last frontier; the other old and south but beautiful beyond description. Two places that whet the appetite of young and old alike. And our own 48 states, its vastness and beauty is world famous, and yet there are people who live in a little world of their own, full of self-pity and fear and doubt and from this little world they are oblivious to nature's wonders.

It saddens me to think that they pass this way but once, and are blessed with everything that nature can endow, and yet in hatred they narrow their world down into a "hell on earth."

You see some of these people every day in our land, going about blind, never giving or helping the other guy — just the self centered grab instead of give attitude is far too common.

These people have not heard Christ's message of love, for many others also have problems and a hard life, but are still able to rise above these things because of their belief in God.

For the rest of the world and others in general it is not necessary to be a Christian, if you are Christ-like in your attitudes; for God's mercy towards the sinner is infinite as most of us already know. So the next time you see one of these poor wretched creatures, pity and help them if you can, and then they too will some day see God's light.

LETTERS

The late Charles Bousquet

(Editor's note: Charles Bousquet died over a year ago, but his widow, Joan Bousquet, asked us if we could publish this letter for the Fourth of July.)

Help keep the flowers pretty

Editor:

Recently, hundreds of our flowers have been killed by the use of herbicides near the beds. The overspray or drift, gets on them and poisons them. We are appealing to all property owners along US-31 to please wait until at least Sept. 20 to do this if you feel it's necessary.

Also, to the people who are in this spraying business, will you kindly not spray properties in the vicinity of the petunias, as it just isn't compatible with the flowers. Even though you think it may not touch them, it does and then we have dead or dying flowers and poisoned beds for the rest of the season.

I realize that as we become a more affluent society, people are trying to rid their lawns of weeds, but it is impossible to have a beautiful crop of flowers if you have your lawn zapped by these potent killers. We spread 15,000 gallons of water daily, seven days a week, to have these flowers flourish and just can't fight with poison on lawns anywhere near the beds.

Please help us. A little hand trimming along the back of the beds would help in keeping the flowers looking their best. I would compare it to washing a car without washing the whitewalls.

If you would ask your lawn person to carefully mow up to the flowers, it would be great. So many people ask why the grass isn't trimmed behind and many a time I have gone down and done the job myself.

Let's all work together and see if we can really make the flowers look their best.

How to get news into the Courier

If you have a news item you think would be perfect for the Charlevoix Courier, feel free to call 547-6558, e-mail charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com or visit the Courier office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

News items include events sponsored by non-profit organizations. Please inform us of your event at least two weeks in advance.

Our coverage area is the city of Charlevoix and its immediately surrounding areas, including Beaver Island.

Because of space limitations in the newspaper, we generally try to avoid publishing "check-handing" pictures or "ribbon-cutting" pictures. However, we will work with your organization to get a picture that reflects the event and is visually interesting to our readers.

Due to time constraints on the staff, we cannot attend every event we are notified of. If you have a picture of your event, we will gladly consider it for publication. But, please, contact us before your event.

It should be noted, each story and picture is dealt with on its individual merits. Any policies outlined above may be suspended by the editor or general manager of the Charlevoix Courier if necessary.

Church dedication planned

A dedication of the new Bethany Lutheran Church, located at 11906 US-31 North, Charlevoix, will take place at 3 p.m., July 7.

The celebration will review the humble beginning of the church on Bridge Street in Charlevoix that opened over 50 years ago.

In July 1947, a group of Lutheran Christians met together for worship in Charlevoix for the first time. After a generous donation of land by Trina Nelson, the cornerstone for the church was laid on April 10, 1948 for what would later be called Bethany.

Prior to building their own church, members met at both the Charlevoix City Hall and the Charlevoix High School.

After over 50 years, the congregation has outgrown its knotty pine paneled sanctuary.

On Oct. 22, 2000 a groundbreaking service took place at Bethany's new location.

Pastor Michael L. Teuscher and the congregation members invite and encourage everyone to join them for this event.

Events planned to support area hospital

Two annual events supporting Charlevoix Area Hospital are in the final planning stages.

The fourth Annual Symphony on the Green has announced that once again its concert will feature the Traverse Symphony Orchestra under maestro Kevin Rhodes who is starting his second year as the orchestra's music director.

This year's program entitled, "No Business Like Show Business," includes familiar Broadway and Hollywood music. The show will take place at 3 p.m., July 14 at the Barn at Dunmaglas Golf Course.

Proceeds for this year's concert will support the Charlevoix Area Hospital Expansion Project.

Selections for this year's concert include "standards" by Leonard Bernstein, Leroy Anderson, Henry Mancini and George Gershwin. Additionally, tenor Mark Planner will be featured performing medleys of Julie Stein and Irving Berlin songs.

The orchestra will end the program with maestro Rhodes conducting George Gershwin's classic "American in Paris."

Patron tickets are $200 — including a $120 tax deductible contribution — and include preferential seating under the tent, post concert cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and a gourmet buffet dinner.

Reserved seating under the tent is $50. Seating on the green is $25, or $15 for students and seniors. Lawn ticket holders may bring blankets and lawn chairs for their own comfort. No food or beverages may be brought on the grounds, but beverages will be available and box lunches may be reserved.

The Barn at Dunmaglas Golf Course is located five miles east of Charlevoix on the Boyne City Road. Grounds open at 1:30 p.m. Call (231) 547-8685 for additional information and tickets.

Then, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., July 17, the Charlevoix Area Garden Club will host its fourth annual Garden Walk featuring seven "Old Fashion Gardens" on Charlevoix's north side. Proceeds of the event currently support 10 public gardens and gardening programs in Charlevoix, including the Meditation Garden at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The 2002 Charlevoix Area Garden Walk includes the Adams Garden on Michigan Avenue, the Unbehan Garden at 103 Prospect, the Blossom Garden at One Thistle Downs, the Elrich and Bergmann Gardens on Lewis Street, the Hack Garden at 501 East Dixon and the Chavez Garden at 107 Burns. All are within walking distance of each other.

Tickets for the Garden Walk may be purchased from any Charlevoix Area Garden Club member or, on the day of the event, at any of the Garden Walk homes.

Successful fund-raiser given

One hundred thirty-five people attended the Moveable Feast brunch at the Grey Gables, June 23, for Keep Charlevoix Beautiful.

Attendees feasted on a beautifully presented selection of specialty items including hand carved roast turkey and honey glazed ham, made to order omelets and crepes and a dozen other delicious dishes. Bagels were flown in from New York especially for the event.

The proceeds will be used toward the purchase and maintenance of the petunias and the new petunia truck.

As always, community support and participation is what made this fund-raiser successful.

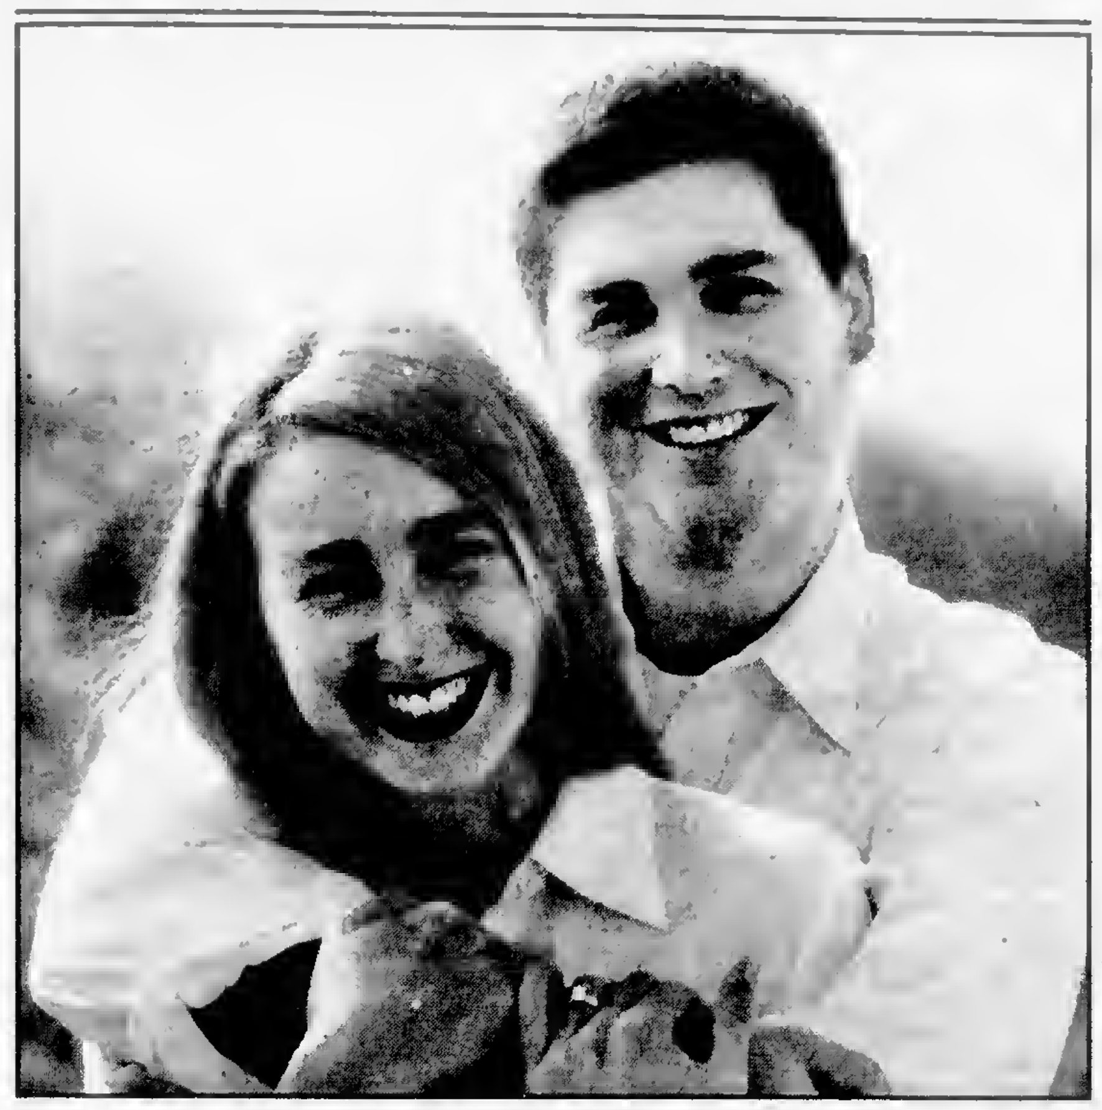
Engagement



Kelly — Guglielmi

Jennifer Kelly and Michael Guglielmi, both of San Francisco, Calif. are engaged to be married.

Jennifer is the daughter of Rich and Ann Kelly of Charlevoix: Michael is the son of Joe and Barbara Guglielmi of Saratoga, Calif.

A wedding is being planned for Aug. 3, 2002 at St. Francis Church in Petoskey.

The bride-to-be graduated from Michigan State University. She is now associated with Battery Ventures in San Mateo, Calif. In September, she will attend the California Culinary Academy in San Francisco, Calif.

The groom-to-be graduated from Boston College. He is currently the vice president of sales and business development with Ultra DNS Corp. in San Mateo, Calif.

Reindl joins Courier as a monthly summer writer

The Charlevoix Courier has added one more person to its staff for the summer.

J.C. Reindl, 21, of Bryan, Ohio, will be writing stories on a monthly basis for the Courier. He is staying in Charlevoix for the summer with his grandparents, Polly and Earl Oberlin.

Reindl is an English major at Yale, going into his senior year.

"Having an English degree doesn't make you special for one thing, you can do many things with it," he said of his major.

In addition to his studies, Reindl is the captain of the cross-country team at Yale in the fall. He also runs track, as a distance runner.

It is his love of running that is partly the reason he came to Charlevoix for the summer.

Reindl's grandparents have a condominium unit in the area and have been coming to Charlevoix since the early 1900s. Reindl has been visiting them during the summer and winter since he was born.

But, this will be the first time he has stayed in the area for the entire season.

He said he decided to come to Michigan for the summer because it is the last time he can have a "low key" summer before graduation and Charlevoix is the best distance running environment he said he has ever been to.

As for after graduation, Reindl said he is still not sure what he is going to do. He said he will probably pursue a career in journalism.

"I have always enjoyed writing and I read newspapers and magazines all the time. I wouldn't mind doing this for a living someday," he said.

J.C. Reindl

Reindl will be writing two stories a month for the Charlevoix Courier throughout this summer. He is also working at the Black Bear Cafe in downtown Charlevoix.

Trying for the big one

Community Band may be one of the oldest

By J.C. REINDL
Special to the Courier

The Charlevoix Community Band has become very popular with residents and visitors. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

In 1904, Belvedere Hotel was open for business, the town railroad bridge had traffic on it and participation in the Community Band was flourishing.

Nearly 100 years later the only Charlevoix landmark of these still around is the band, and bigger than ever before.

At 8:15 every Tuesday night from now until Aug. 15, the Charlevoix Community Band will be performing in downtown East Park.

The Community Band is composed of musicians who live in the Charlevoix area during the summer months. Some members commute to Charlevoix from as far away as Traverse City, while others are in town only for the summer.

Band membership has been steadily increasing in recent years and at 60 members, for this summer, the band is the biggest one on record.

The band is directed by Gary Stutzman, who also serves as band director for Northwest Academy, and by Evelyn Wujcik, the band director for Charlevoix High School. Although Stutzman and Wujcik have been affiliated with the band for 40 years or more, they both started off their careers in the band as musicians before becoming directors.

Aside from being one of Charlevoix's oldest organizations, the Community Band is also one of the most age diverse, with musicians whose ages range from 17 to 80.

Aside from common summer residences, according to Stutzman, the greatest similarity between every member is "they are all musicians who love to play."

The Community Band could be the oldest band of its kind in Michigan. Stutzman and Wujcik are positive the band is at least 100 years old, although no one is certain yet as to its exact age.

Members and friends of the band are researching this detail at the moment.

One of the earliest records of the band discovered, so far, has been from a 1960s Charlevoix Courier article that included a band photograph from 1904. Such a finding strongly suggests the band was in existence long before the photograph was taken.

Both Stutzman and Wujcik believe that the most crucial aspect to the Community Band's longevity has been local citizens' support.

Every Tuesday night before any of the audience arrives, both directors already know where they can expect to find the band's most devoted fans. Looking under certain trees, corners and rows in the park, one can always find lots of the same faces in the same places each week for every performance.

"We can look out in the audience and tell where people will be sitting," Stutzman said.

Over time these devotees have earned unofficial "reserved seats" with their regular attendance at every Community Band summer concert. While many show up for the band, simply because they heard it was a good show, Wujcik said, "A lot of those who listen every week, once played in it (Community Band)."

Though vacationers make up a substantial part of every concert's crowd, the directors consider the locals as the heart of the audience.

Along with bringing greater awareness and prestige for the Community Band, Stutzman and Wujcik admit that one of their prime motivational factors for each week's performance is the opportunity to play "for our own people." Both directors appreciate seeing so many familiar faces each week, along with the feeling that the band is providing a great service for the community.

Making the Community Band one of the outstanding bands in the country is an ultimate goal for both Stutzman and Wujcik. They believe the band possesses the necessary talent for the feat, as shown when people are willing to travel from all around the area to play in it.

One of the new events helping make this happen is the band being invited to play at Beaver Island for a possible upcoming weekend trip. Although the Community Band usually limits their traveling to one concert at Lakes Of The North each summer, the Beaver Island invitation is an exciting possibility for the band to make themselves even better known.

Another future idea still in planning is the possibility of having exchange concerts with other bands.

"This will increase our venues and potentials for traveling around, along with our possibilities," Stutzman said.

Charlevoix hires Swem as new city engineer

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Don Swem has lived in Charlevoix for over 20 years and was recently appointed to a new position with the city of Charlevoix as city engineer.

Don Swem

"It's a new challenge. I've been working with the city on and off for about 10 years, almost exclusively for the last couple years," he said.

While working at Charlevoix's Performance Engineering for the past 10 years, Swem was hired by the city for several engineering and inspection jobs.

These have included acting as inspector during major renovations that were done on Bridge Street. He also performed engineering for street projects on Upright, Lincoln, May, Hurlbut, Carpenter, Mech, Mercer and State streets.

He said its the extensive amount of work the city of Charlevoix does on its infrastructure that prompted him to accept the position.

"It's expensive to keep things in great shape and not many citys spend the money. That's excellent. It's a lot of work to keep Charlevoix, 'Charlevoix the Beautiful,'" he said.

When city administrators were preparing the 2002-2003 budget, they allocated funds to hire a city engineer. City Manager Mike Wiesner explained the new position saves the city money — rather than paying Performance Engineering top dollar for Swem's services, the city decided to bring him on board.

The budget proposal for the position states, "Presently the cost of engineer design is in the $70-$80 per hour range and it is anticipated the cost of the engineer position would be a maximum of $35 per hour, with all fringes. Hence a significant cost savings can be realized."

Swem, 47, was also brought on to prepare the city for the probable retirement of electric and water superintendent Ed Whitley, which may occur in 2005, and the unknown official retirement date of city electric consultant Roger Westenbroek.

Wiesner explained the primary focus of this position is for Swem to gain familiarity with the city electric department and to ultimately be head of the department.

Major endeavors Swem is currently coordinating include creating an electronic inventory of infrastructure and homes within the city of Charlevoix, called a Graphic Information System (GIS). This system will map the city's utilities, properties and zoning maps.

He will also be in charge of redoing the city's infrastructure master plan.

Swem moved to Charlevoix in 1977 to work for Big Rock Point Nuclear Power Plant after graduating from the University of Michigan with a degree in Nuclear Engineering. He worked at Big Rock for 10 years.

After branching out on his own with a car wash business, he returned to engineering and took a job with Charlevoix's Performance Engineering.

Since early spring when he officially started as city engineer, Swem has overseen the Belvedere and Michigan avenue street projects which are nearing completion.

He is also currently overseeing work on the north side electrical substation being constructed by the city, off Martin Road in Charlevoix Township.

Swem currently resides in Charlevoix's Hayes Township with his wife, Laura, and daughter, Michelle.

Mobile home park may replace wind turbine plan

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

> "All the naysayers said we would rather have high density housing than windmills, so if that's what you want, maybe I can oblige you."
> Dawson Way,
> Eveline Township property owner

Opposition to wind turbine generators in Eveline Township has prompted two property owners to move in another direction — a mobile home park.

Dawson and Barney Way, father and son respectively, applied to the Eveline Township Planning Commission June 24 to have their property rezoned from agricultural to R-4, a residential zone that accommodates mobile homes.

The request applies to two pieces of township property spanning over 150 acres, located adjacent to one another, with frontage on M-66 and Brock and Ferry roads. Ferry Road divides the two.

Dawson said he and Barney made the rezoning decision because they're ready to make peace in Eveline Township.

"I have to do something with the property, so I'm trying to make peace in the township. All the naysayers said we would rather have high density housing than windmills, so if that's what you want, maybe I can oblige you," he explained.

The "war" started in December 2001, just after Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower, located in Suttons Bay, entered a request with the township board for a special use permit to construct a wind monitoring tower.

After a six month delay, Smiley's request was granted by the township board in early June, only to be challenged by residents who filed for a review by the zoning board of appeals.

According to chairman of the zoning board of appeals Chris Carson, the review has been scheduled for 7 p.m., July 11 at the township hall located at 08525 Ferry Road in East Jordan.

The temporary tower would stand for at least six months, testing wind speeds to see if the property is a viable location for commercial wind turbine generators.

But, when Eveline Township residents heard of the plan which could eventually lead to five of the turbines being placed on the Way property and two on his neighbor Ralph Richardson's property, they were enraged.

The group claims the turbines are unsafe, noisy, unsightly and just plain don't belong in a residential area.

So, in order to quell the ration of anger the residents have doled out, the Ways are opting to go in a new direction, R-4 zoning.

As of June 28, Smiley hadn't been directed by the Ways to drop the wind monitoring request.

According to Eveline Township Planning Commission Chairman Eric Beishlag, the R-4 zone is meant to accommodate mobile homes. The township's R-3 zone is for apartments and condominiums — multiple family dwellings.

Beishlag said currently there is no area in the township zoned R-4 or set aside for R-4 zoning.

Way said he was approached by township supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski, who said there is no other large tract of land in the township that would accommodate high density housing and the change could alleviate wind turbine tension.

"They (residents opposed to wind turbines) are the ones that brought up housing at a meeting several months ago. They said they would rather see a housing project," Skrzeczkoski said. This was also reported in the March 13 edition of the Charlevoix Courier.

He said after driving through the township with Beishlag, in search of wind turbine districts, he realized the Way land wouldn't be a bad spot for housing.

Turbine opponents may seek recall of officials

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Eveline Township residents are considering mounting a recall campaign, possibly aimed at removal of township board supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski and township clerk Don Hayden.

The group of an estimated 40 residents met two weeks ago and discussed their options in their fight against commercial wind turbine generators being located in the township and recall was one of them.

"It's an option. The group said why not pick up the language on recall," Eveline Township resident and ardent opponent of the township's wind turbine issue, Nancy Ferguson said. "We don't think part of the board is representing us."

After the recent resident group meeting, Ferguson went to the Charlevoix County Clerk's office where she picked up recall literature.

According to chief deputy clerk Sherry Browe, at the time she visited the office, Ferguson was unsure whether a recall is imminent, but she and other residents are interested in reviewing the possibility.

"We're trying not to do things hastily; we want to look and see what good might come of this," Ferguson said.

The recall threat comes after the board approved a zoning ordinance change that opened the door for electricity generating wind turbines to be allowed, by special use permit, in agriculture and forest zones in October 2001.

But, when the first request came in November 2001 for placement of a wind monitoring tower on Dawson Way's Eveline Township property, near Ferry and Brock roads, tempers hit the fan.

The tower would measure whether or not adequate wind velocities exist in and around the Way property to support a seven turbine wind farm.

The angry residents said they weren't informed of the project or the zoning change that paved the way for the project and a bitter

HEALTH

The causes and treatment of conjunctivitis

Edward Newcomb, M.D.

'Your health'

Conjunctivitis is a very common cause of red, irritated eyes and the most frequent eye problem seen in primary care physician's offices.

Non-medical persons will use terms such as "pink eye," "cold in the eye" or "eye infection" to describe this condition.

The conjunctiva is a membrane that covers the inside of the eyelids and the white (sclera) of the eye and when it becomes inflamed it is called conjunctivitis. The symptoms are those one would expect of irritation of this membrane and can include tearing, light sensitivity, dilated (bloodshot) vessels, a foreign body sensation and sometimes a thick discharge.

The cause of the inflammation is usually one of the following: viruses, bacteria, allergies or chemical exposure. The most common of these is viral conjunctivitis. The adenovirus which also causes "colds," is the most frequently identified virus and the symptoms it causes, in addition to eye irritation, usually include runny nose, sore throat and other upper respiratory problems.

The virus is spread by air droplets (from sneezing or coughing) and from contact with fingers (rubbing the eye). This condition often occurs in community epidemics most noticeably in day-care and school environments.

This form of conjunctivitis will often cause lymph nodes in front of the ear to swell. The treatment is symptomatic and may include cool compresses and short term use of over the counter eye drops that constrict the dilated vessels such as Visine, Clear Eyes and OccuClear. Antibiotic eye drops cannot treat viral infection, but are sometimes prescribed when it is not completely clear that infection is viral.

Viral conjunctivitis can last 7-10 days and is contagious. It is recommended that children stay out of school until the inflammation has resolved and good hand washing can help prevent spread.

Bacterial causes of conjunctivitis are less common and usually are due to Streptococcus, Staphlococcus or other respiratory bacteria. Symptoms are similar to viral conjunctivitis, but there usually is eyelid swelling and purulent (think green-yellow) secretions that can cause the eyelids to stick together. Topical antibiotic eye drops are often used to treat this form of conjunctivitis.

Allergies can also be a cause of "pink eye" and the symptoms are a little different from infections. Usually both eyes are involved and itching is a predominant symptom. There is often a history of exposure to the source of the allergy such as freshly cut grass and tree pollens. The treatment is to avoid the source of the allergy as much as possible, but cool compresses, oral antihistamines and topical eye drops designed for allergies may be needed.

Chemical conjunctivitis is usually diagnosed based on a history of a red eye occurring after an exposure to a chemical. A very common mild form of this is the red eye one gets after swimming in a chlorinated pool. Anything that may come in contact with the eye or the area around the eyes may trigger this reaction such as make up, eye drops or fumes. Treatment consists of removal of the chemical and if that is not enough to solve the problem, physician evaluation is important.

Fortunately most forms of conjunctivitis are mild, self-limited and not sight threatening. However if symptoms are severe, last more than a few days or if there has been exposure to potentially caustic chemical, then urgent medical evaluation is warranted.

Plans for East Park to be presented soon

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Three plans for renovations to Charlevoix's East Park are expected to be ready for community review July 9.

Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner has scheduled a public input meeting for July 16 at which time the plans which will be on display at city hall will be discussed. A meeting time and place were not scheduled by press time.

"The plans will be presented prior to the meeting, so people will have time to study and think about them rather than just reacting at the meeting," Wiesner said.

East Park renovations designer Peter Pollack, principal engineer for park planners Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor, said the three alternatives span a wide range of change, some with very little changes and others with extensive changes. And the final plan could have pieces taken and mixed from the three alternatives.

"By producing alternatives that are conservative and some bold you present a range of possibilities and accept the best in the series of options," Pollack explained.

Pollack met with the city's downtown park renovation committee June 20 at city hall to discuss concepts that are incorporated into the three alternatives.

Committee members are: Wiesner, city Mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, second ward city council member Bill Bellows, downtown development authority (DDA) chairman Hugh Mason, DDA member Jeannine Wallace, harbormaster Hal Evans, city police chief Dennis Halverson, city planner Gerry Harsch and city street superintendent John Martin.

The plans generated by the Pollack group were developed following a December 2001 public input meeting.

Some renovation ideas Pollack will present include ways for land dwellers to look at the park from the water and ways for boaters to better utilize the park. The alternatives will include the idea of a pier or boardwalk extending into the water with the harbor taking off from the pier, rather than from the bulkhead.

"Everybody who comes has their own reasons for being here and sometimes boaters need land and land based people need water," he said.

He also found one thing the park is lacking, an icon.

"The center of the community doesn't have an icon, a harbor typically has a lighthouse or something that might be added that all of a sudden becomes a rallying point or identity point," Pollack said.

That icon doesn't necessarily have to be an object, Pollack said, "The green in and of itself could be what the people see and has meaning."

The park, which spans two blocks running 614 feet north to south and stretches 284 feet at its widest point, presented topographic challenges for its designers. Pollack said they grappled with how to accommodate its terraces and level land and the needs for festivals and tents.

But he didn't seek just to accommodate busy festivals and art fairs, he said they also took into account green space and year-round park use.

"We were careful to provide amenities for people to use and to invite participation, but to do this by not doing too much and making the park too fussy," he explained.

Cost was not accounted for in the design phase.

"We're still deciding what we are going to do. Cost won't be established until the total integrated plan is established," Wiesner said.

Pollack added that, "Now is the time to focus on what and why rather than cost of specifics."

East Park is destined to face many changes in the near future as planners work on design options for the park. The options will be presented to the public very soon for comment. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Wiesner said the city will pursue grants once securing finances begins and added that the city's primary funding source will likely be the Waterways Commission.

Much of the city's park renovation fund was expended on the purchase of the Wharfside for $1.2 million. The city's share of the purchase and demolition of the building was $172,000.

In November of 1982 the city began working specifically toward renovating the park and attached marina. The DDA followed up in 1998 by developing renovation plans for both East Park and nearby Veteran's Park.

The first visible step in the East Park renovation process was completed in 1996 when the city purchased and demolished the Parkside building, which sat across Mason Street from the Wharfside, which was purchased and demolished by the city in early June of this year.

According to Wiesner, the purchase and demolition of the building's was the culmination of the city's longtime effort to open the park's view corridor and will make renovations more flexible.

According to city archives, it purchased the first piece of Round Lake waterfront property in 1896.

Wiesner said the joint city council/DDA meeting, at which possible plans will be presented for administrative consideration, will take place July 30. With a possible direction being offered by city council on Aug. 5.

Wiesner said the Aug. 5 decision date is not set in stone and is subject to any delays that may come about as a result of the July 16 public input meeting.

The first public input meeting for marina renovations has been tentatively scheduled for July 31.

Nominations sought for second annual eddi awards

In recognition of eddi Wrigley-Offield's personal and positive impact on the quality of life afforded to the people of Emmet and Charlevoix counties, the Crooked Tree Arts Center is hosting the second annual eddi Awards Banquet.

In 2001, the Board of Directors of the Crooked Tree Arts Center established this annual series of awards recognizing excellence in the arts in northern Michigan. The eddi Awards ceremony will take place at 7 p.m. on Sept. 20 at the Bay View Inn in Petoskey.

eddi Wrigley-Offield was a much loved and admired patron of arts and culture in Northern Michigan, especially of the Crooked Tree Arts Center where she spent so much of her personal time and energy as a volunteer in support of the center's programming.

The process by which award recipients are nominated and selected has been carefully constructed to include nominees from all over the two-county area.

Nominees are not required to have an affiliation with any particular organization. A panel of judges representing a wide array of arts and cultural constituencies within Emmet and Charlevoix counties will determine the award recipients. The eight specific award descriptions are as follows.

Award Categories

- Visual Artist Award: Given to an artist who has consistently made an impact using his or her artistic discipline for the benefit of the citizens of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.
- Performing Artist Award: given to an artist who has consistently made an impact in the areas of theater, music or dance for the benefit of the citizens of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.
- Arts & Cultural Organization Award: Given to an organization for outstanding contributions to arts and culture for the benefit of the citizens of Charlevoix and Emmet counties.
- Arts in Education Award: Given to an institution or an individual who has provided extraordinary leadership and creativity in advancing arts and cultural education in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.
- Arts and Cultural Leadership Award: Given to a volunteer member of a board of directors of an arts and/or cultural organization who has demonstrated leadership in advancing and supporting arts and culture in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.
- Individual Patron Award: Given to a patron who is an exemplary advocate for the arts and culture in Charlevoix and Emmet counties.
- Benefactor Award: Given to a business, foundation or organization in Charlevoix & Emmet counties that has given extraordinary support to artists or cultural organizations in the two-county region.
- Lifetime Achievement Award: Given to the individual who has been prominent in the arts and culture of Charlevoix and Emmet counties throughout his or her lifetime.

Corporate sponsorship is available and individual ticket prices are $85 each. Champagne and hors d'oeuvres will begin the evening, followed by dinner and dessert. Eight awards will be presented during a dessert program.

Nomination forms are available at the Crooked Tree Arts Center, on-line at www.crookedtree.org/eddiform.html, all area Chamber of Commerce offices and area libraries.

The nomination form will also be printed in the Petoskey News-Review. Nominations must be received by Wednesday, Aug.15, at the arts center. For more information or to reserve a ticket, please call the Crooked Tree Arts Center at 231-347-4337.

Township officials may face recall soon

RECALL

fight ensued.

Now, the township is being sued by John and Nancy Cisne and 29 other residents who have joined the Cisne suit.

And it looks as though Skrzeczkoski and Hayden may have to fight for their board positions.

Skrzeczkoski said he is surprised to hear recall is on the minds of residents, because many of the same people helped mount the write-in campaign that landed him in the supervisor's seat in 2000.

In 2000, Skrzeczkoski faced Norm Miller and lost in the primary. But, then he said droves of township residents asked him to consider running as a write-in candidate. And with the help of 80 residents, he mounted a campaign that worked.

Now he believes some of the same people campaigning to have him unseated are those that helped get him there in the first place.

Ferguson said she was a major contributor to Skrzeczkoski's write-in campaign, but has since disagreed with actions he has taken on the wind turbine issue.

"I campaigned actively for him. But if you have something as big as wind turbine generators going on, and don't consult the people at all, I think that's wrong," she said.

Skrzeczkoski feels, in some cases, recall proceedings are being used improperly and township boards are realizing that when votes come in that people don't agree with, they could be ousted.

"I didn't get into this for money or power, I just did it for community service," he said.

Skrzeczkoski has been township supervisor for two years and served as board trustee for 12 years prior.

Hayden has been township clerk for six years. He feels the resident group's claim that they aren't being properly represented is unfounded.

"I plan to oppose it (a recall) vigorously. I represent 1,560 people in the township, not exclusively 20-30 people who are unhappy" Hayden said.

However, both Skrzeczkoski and Hayden said they also understand and support the recall concept.

"You have to have them; a township could end up with an official who abuses their position and they have to be move out," Skrzeczkoski said.

But he's disappointed to see things come to a recall, because even if he isn't ousted by voters, the recall itself will likely create a rift in the community.

"A good example is the Charlevoix School Board; it just causes another wedge in the community," he explained.

According to Browe, in order to get the recall ball rolling, residents must first work out the language they feel should be on the recall ballot. This wording then has to be certified by the Charlevoix County Election Commission. The commission is made up of county clerk Jane Brannon, county treasurer Joan Balch and county probate Judge Frederick Mulhauser.

If the wording is not initially certified, it can be resubmitted. After certification, residents have six months to secure signatures.

If Skrzeczkoski and/or Hayden were to lose in the possible recall election, another township resident will be appointed to the position/s until the next election, which is scheduled for 2004.

In the meantime, Ferguson and others in the group are hashing out the details and are researching their recall right.

She said the group has "things to think about," like who they would endorse to replace Hayden and Skrzeczkoski.

Ways want rezoning allowing mobile homes

WAYS

While Skrzeczkoski maintains he is trying to keep the peace and engage in township planning, one of the primary voices in the fight against the turbines, Eveline Township resident Nancy Ferguson, said he stuck his nose where it didn't belong in suggesting the Ways move for a rezone.

"It's punitive — we wouldn't go along on WTGs (wind turbine generators) and he went ahead and proposed this to Dawson (Way). How dare he be so presumptuous to represent what the people are thinking," Ferguson said.

In fact, she said this wasn't in any way what residents were hoping for and like the argument against wind turbine generators, this isn't the place for R-4 zoning.

"This idea of high density housing is a trailer park or condos, we're an ag (agricultural) community; people move here for ag reasons. I think you just might see a similar fight," she said.

The Ways have owned the property for about 10 years. But, Way said hay cultivation isn't paying the bills and another use has to be discovered.

"They're not the ones paying the taxes," he said of those opposed to his proposed land uses.

Beishlag said the planning commission has not scheduled public hearings at which this issue will be discussed.

Way anticipated the rezoning effort taking some time and added that if the R-4 status is granted he is unsure at this time what the land would be used for. He is sure that a sewer line to the site would be needed.

Skrzeczkoski said he doesn't anticipate the entire acreage supporting a mobile home park. He foresees its optimal use as a planned unit development (PUD).

However, the township's current zoning ordinance doesn't include PUD zoning. He said the planning commission will be looking into PUD possibilities once the wind turbine issue has been put to rest.

"I might develop it, but you have to get the horse before the cart. In the meantime I'll keep on farming hay, keep it looking nice," Way said.

Illegal dip

Ordinance tells how to display house numbers

NUMBERS

On June 12 the commissioners adopted the amended Charlevoix County Uniform Numbering Ordinance and now, if a property owner's correct address is not displayed in accordance with its requirements, a civil infraction citation could result.

According to Charlevoix County Equalization Director Carla Spencer, the citation could mean a $50-$100 fine, plus court costs.

The county is getting serious about its ordinance, which has been in effect since May of 1995, because some property owners still haven't complied.

Carver said he doesn't think those without posted addresses are refusing to comply, they either are unaware of the ordinance or are just lazy.

Spencer said since 1995, compliance by those constructing new buildings has been great. The ordinance requires anyone with a newly constructed building to comply and the building department won't issue a building permit until compliance is secured.

But it's older homes and businesses that cued the county numbering committee to recommend the latest change to the commissioners.

The committee includes: Carver, Spencer, Eveline Township Clerk Don Hayden, 9-1-1 Director Bob Bradley, Charlevoix County Commissioners Phil Johnson and Shirley Roloff, county building official Ken Doty and Charlevoix County Undersheriff Don Schneider.

"We're campaigning to get people to post their house numbers," Spencer said.

She explained one important change with the amended ordinance is its enacting of a bulk street numbering system that will be posted at major intersections to help direct emergency personnel. The system has been in effect in Hayes Township for some time and Carver said it has helped.

Other ordinance changes are related to how address numbers are displayed.

She explained that the emergency telephone system 9-1-1 is connected to the county's house numbering system. Those who are unsure of your assigned address can look at the first line of the legal description, which is part of your summer property tax bill, or call equalization at (231) 547-7230.

All county addresses are five digits and many start with a 0, which is part of the official property address and should be included in the posted address.

The new ordinance requires the number be no less than three inches tall per digit and the number itself must be in reflective white with a green background. It must be displayed on both sides of a post or mailbox.

Charlevoix City Fire Shift Commander and Emergency Medical Technician Bob Roloff said in several instances, mailboxes are numbered for mail delivery convenience, but aren't listed on the other side for emergency convenience.

Small street addresses posted in flower beds are also not considered compliant. Carver explained that in the winter these signs are often useless.

The Charlevoix Kiwanis Club offers its 9-1-1 House Numbering Project, whereby a Kiwanis representative comes to a property and posts a green sign that sits on a post with the address.

The numbering post is both created and installed by the club for $21. For information about the Kiwanis project call (231) 347-2135 or pick up a form at the county equalization office located at 301 State Street, in Charlevoix.

Spencer said area hardware stores also carry numbers that will comply with the ordinance. Most can be purchased for only $5.

Charlevoix County's Equalization Department will be sending notices with summer tax receipts to Charlevoix School District residents informing property owners of the requirements.

Cities in the county are subject to city property numbering regulations.

For information on Charlevoix city addresses and posting regulations contact Linda Weller at the city manager's office at (231) 547-3270.

Court action officially ends sewer debate development. Those were our two major goals," he said.

SEWER

Seidel smiled and nodded when asked whether members of the environmental group will be on the lookout for un-approved tie-ins to the line.

But Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock isn't worried about watch dogs. He maintained throughout the multiple lawsuits that the school is not in the business of promoting growth and the line was meant to service the new high school being built off Marion Center Road, not private development.

The consent judgment and downsizing of the sewer line under the new contract supports this claim.

The consent judgment allows potential users to tie-in up to the year 2010 if environmental factors or public harm is posed, warranting a tie-in. Then after 2010, potential users have to go before the circuit court judge and explain why a tie-in is warranted.

While the judgment restricts tie-ins, it does allow the district to tie other school buildings into its line with the circuit court judge's approval.

According to Sturock, school related tie-ins was one of the district's reasons for insisting on a sewer line, as opposed to building an on-site septic. The other reason was an environmental concern.

Sturock said when the district purchased the 72 acre Marion Township site, where the new high school is being built, they did so in an effort to promote long range planning.

"A septic system cuts down on how we could use the property into the future," he explained.

He added a high school spans 40 acres, a middle school 20 acres and an elementary school, 10 acres. No middle and elementary school Marion Township building plans currently exist.

During the morning of June 26, Charlevoix City Council met at a special meeting. At the meeting, the consent judgment and sewer line ownership transfer from the city to the district were approved 4-1. Second ward council member Gabe Campbell was absent and third ward council member Shirley Gibson voted against it.

Gibson said the sewer extension is "an inexcusable waste of taxpayer's money."

Aside from Gibson's opposition, Wiesner feels the consent judgment and the ownership transfer were in both the city's and the community's best interest.

"It's nice for the community to have reached a resolution," Wiesner said. "Under the court ruling, (Pajtas, June 7) the city came out in the best position it could have. We were able to recoup our costs — attorney fees, engineering fees and construction fees."

The city's transfer of ownership was not done by choice. Pajtas ruled June 7 that it was unconstitutional for the school district to use money from an $18.8 million bond passed by voters to pay for infrastructure it didn't own.

The school will be responsible for paying the city those fees and the remaining construction costs, which are estimated to total $400,000 or less. This cost is $140,000 less than it was originally going to expend.

Under the consent judgment, city council agreed to reimburse the school $127,000, money it spent on the Harbor Industries lift station and the sewer line the city ran at the start point of Marion Center Road.

"Those two things would have been there whether the school was a reality or not," Wiesner said.

The consent judgment doesn't restrict the city from extending sewer lines. At the special city council meeting June 26 Mayor Alvin Russell discussed a future extension along M-66.

Wiesner said the city's sewer master plan also includes an extension along US-31 south.

Any possible future extensions and how those will be dealt with in lieu of the recent ownership transfer concerned Gibson, who asked city attorney Jim Young whether council's decision set precedent for other developers who may run a private sewer line and "force" the city to allow them to tie-in.

"There is an honest difference between what is being done here and with other developments. No one should expect to construct any private sewer they wish and force us to connect a private sewer line to the city's system," he responded.

However, Ferguson said precedent, for school districts in particular, was somewhat set.

"It is very important because it is an opinion out there that people concerned about the same issue can look at. I think other schools attempting to do the same thing will look at it for guidance as well," she said.

Horton Bay Parade has a tradition of humor

PARADE

theme's selection was based upon the massive phenomenon of cultural diversity in Horton Bay, for a town with the population of 27. Rohe feels that despite such large obstacles in a small environment the fact that, "they (Horton Bay's residents) have survived without any ethnic strife is amazing."

He added it was this impressive accomplishment of Horton Bay's citizenry which created the inspiration behind this year's parade.

While it can always be assumed thousands of spectators will arrive, the number of entries in this year's parade will not be known before parade day. The additional possibility for surprise only adds to the parade's poppycock atmosphere.

"Until the morning of the parade, we have no idea who is going to show up," Long said.

Since its rebirth, the only rule of the Horton Bay Parade has been that no commercial or serious political entries are allowed.

Rohe feels that many parades nowadays seem like an endless procession of billboards, constantly reminding parade-goers to buy something. Since the Horton Bay parade then cannot rely on any corporate sponsorships for funding, it forces an atmosphere of resourcefulness on the part of parade entrants and organizers.

All floats must fit into each entrant's personal budget and Horton Bay is financially responsible for nearly all parade festivities.

Long said any city revenues stemming from the parade each year go wholly towards renting portable toilets for the following year's parade.

James Hartwell, owner of the Horton Bay Book Store and the brother of John Hartwell, the modern parade's first organizer, said that while the day's focus is the actual parade, each Fourth of July Horton Bay comes to resemble a giant block party.

Festive spectators arrive early and stay late, lining any open land on both sides of the street. Every resident's front yard is presumed public on parade day, as "they don't own their property at that point," Hartwell said.

Every year, there is a new version of the same story of someone on parade day discovering a stranger walking out of his hall bathroom remarking, "Oh, just using your toilet."

The Horton Bay Parade has gained the reputation as one of the most unconventional and outrageous parades in Michigan since Horton Bay resident John Hartwell brought about its rebirth in the 1970s. Hemingway's summer retreat aside, the Fourth of July parade has resulted in Horton Bay becoming known around the state as being "Home of the Best Little Fourth in the North."

Past parade themes have included the celebration of Horton Bay as the fifty-first state, a "Have You Heard?" rumor recognition day, presidential election year comedy and in 1992 the 501 anniversary celebration of Columbus's landing in America.

Horton Bay commemorated 501 years while the rest of the country celebrated 500 because, as Rohe put it, "Everyone knows Columbus landed at Horton Bay first."

The more popular entries from past years include: a 40-foot high Jimmy Buffet volcano, a lawnmower precision drill team, the Cocktail Party and the Dhali Llamas.

Junior Golf program teaches about life

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf program offers life's lessons, instruction in golf and a link between children and adults in the community.

The Junior Golf program was designed seven years ago by Junior Golf Director Dean Davenport, to teach children about etiquette, time management, respect and other valuable attributes that will be handy later in life.

"The program started by some people who saw the need to teach youngsters golf," Davenport said.

Davenport really stresses life's values through his Junior Golf program.

"The golf is almost incidental," Davenport said.

The true nature of the program is to learn the rules of golf and rules in life, which is aided by golf mentors.

Golf mentors are adults who volunteer their time during the summer program. Some are Charlevoix residents while others are only here in the summer.

Kim Shanahan, a fifth year mentor, calls Charlevoix home during the summer and lives on the Mississippi Gulf Coast during the winter seasons.

Shanahan, who retired in 1995, said he likes to volunteer his time and services, which he also does in Mississippi.

"I love to work with these kids," he said.

Shanahan said the mentors do not instruct the children, but leave that to the golfing professionals involved with the program. However, he added that the mentors are there to instill the rules of the game.

"We just make sure the children are observing the rules of golf behavior and etiquette," he said.

He added that the mentors make sure the golf courses are respected by the program participants.

Shanahan, who has been playing golf for about 50 years, said that a good mentor is someone who is a golfer themselves.

He added that if a mentor doesn't know the rules of golf and how the game is played, it is hard to impart that knowledge to the children participating in the program. During the program, Shanahan said the mentors don't have a specific group of kids they work with.

"We go where we're needed," he said.

According to Shanahan, a majority of the children participating in the program are from Charlevoix, but others are from Petoskey and Boyne City. He added that some are summer residents and come from various places in the United States.

Shanahan said the nice part about the program is that the various golf courses allow the events to take place on their courses.

According to Davenport, most Junior Golf programs are sponsored by one course.

The Charlevoix Junior Golf program rotates between five different courses, which are: Antrim Dells, Belvedere, Charlevoix Country Club, Dunmaglas and the Charlevoix Municipal Course.

According to Davenport, the National Junior Golf Association ranks the Charlevoix Junior Golf program among the top 15 programs in the United States.

Davenport said some of the other programs come from much larger cities such as: Phoenix, Ariz.; Minneapolis, Minn.; and St. Louis, Mo.

Shanahan and Davenport both said a great thing about the program is that the children who participate are eligible for a full scholarship to a summer golf program at Ferris State University.

Davenport, who is a retired director of athletics of Ferris State University, said children are eligible if they attended at least half the classes during the program, fill out an application and show a lot of interest in the game of golf.

The program rewards its mentors who attend at least five sessions. Davenport said the mentors receive five free games of golf with a partner and a cart from the Belvedere Golf Course.

Davenport said most mentors might have been interested because of the reward, but the true reward of volunteering their time wins out.

"Instead of quitting after five sessions, they stay with the program all the way through," Davenport said.

ANNUAL DRINKING WATER QUALITY REPORT
OF THE
City of Charlevoix Water Supply

June 2002

Here is this year's Annual Quality Water Report.

It is designed to inform you about the quality drinking water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. The sources of drinking water (both tap water and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally occurring minerals and in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

Our water comes from Lake Michigan, considered surface water. The State will be performing an assessment of our source water by the year 2003; we will inform you how to get a copy when it is available.

We are pleased to report that your drinking water is safe and meets all State and Federal requirements..

This report is a snapshot of the quality of the water we provided to you in the year 2001. Included are details about where your water comes from, what it contains, and how it compares to Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and State of Michigan standards.

If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Sam Creswell at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant, (231) 547-3256, or Ed Whitley at the Charlevoix Water Department, (231) 547-3278. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. The City of Charlevoix Water Supply routinely monitors for contaminants in your drinking water according to Federal and State Laws.

This report shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1 thru December 31, 2001. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents: Its important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and hacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals which can be naturally occurring or result from urban stormwater run- off, industrial or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture and residential uses.

Radioactive contaminants, which are naturally occurring.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals, which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban stormwater runoff, and septic systems.

The State of Michigan and Environmental Protection Agency require us to test our water on a regular basis to ensure its safety.

We met all monitoring requirements for the year 2001.

Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System personnel sampled and tested for over 100 contaminants that were NOT detected in our water supply. The following constituents were detected at low hut safe levels, well below thc MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level).

In the following tables you will find many terms and abbreviations you might not be familiar with. To help you better understand these terms we've provided the following definitions:

Parts per million (ppm) or Milligrams per liter (mg/l) - one part per million corresponds to one minute in two years or a single penny in $10,000

Parts per billion (ppb) or Micrograms per liter - one part per billion corresponds to one minute in 2,000 years, or a single penny in $10,000,000.

Picocuries per liter (pCi/L) - A pico equals one part per trillion, the measurement of radiation in water.

Nephelometric Turbidity Unit (NTU) - nephelometric turbidity unit is a measure of the clarity of water. Turbidity in excess of 5 NTU is just noticeable to the average person.

Action Level (AL) - the concentration of a contaminant which, if exceeded, triggers treatment or other requirements which a water system must follow.

Treatment Technique (TT) - A treatment technique is a required process intended to reduce the level of a contaminant in drinking water.

Maximum Contaminant Level (MCL) - is the highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology.

Maximum Contaminant Level Goal - (MCLG) is the level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is no known or expected risk to health. MCLGs allow for a margin of safety.

n/a: not applicable

NOTES:

 Turbidity - turbidity is a measure of the cloudiness of the water. We monitor it because it is an indicator of our filtration system.*

Lead and Copper - Lead and copper testing is on a three (3) year schedule, test results reported here are from the 2000 year; next round of testing is year 2003. (No lead was detected)*

Unregulated contaminants are those for which the EPA has not established drinking water standards. The purpose of unregulated contaminant monitoring is to assist EPA in determining the occurrence of unregulated contaminants in drinking water and whether future regulation is warranted.

We're pleased that your drinking water meets or exceeds all Federal and State requirements. We have learned through our monitoring and testing that some constituents have been detected. The EPA has determined that your water is SAFE at these levels.

All sources of drinking water are subject to potential contamination by substances that are naturally occurring or man made. All drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that the water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the Environmental Protection Agency's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at 1-800-426-4791.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno- compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly, and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by cryptosporidium and other microbiological contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

Please, call us if you have any questions

We ask that all our customers help us protect our water resources, which are the heart of our community, our way of life, and our children's future.

About our system. . . .

The City of Charlevoix operates a Direct Filtration Water Treatment Facility which uses water from Lake Michigan. With a capacity of approximately 3 million gallons per day, water enters the plant through a submerged intake structure. Storage includes a one million gallon above ground reservoir at the plant, and a 300,000 gallon elevated tank (water tower) on Charlevoix's north side. The City has approximately 32 miles of distribution lines serving approximately 5,000 customers in the City of Charlevoix and areas of adjoining Charlevoix Township, as well as the influx of summer visitors to the area. Present flow rates vary from around 400,000 gallons per day in the winter to as much as 2.5 million gallons per day in the summer. In service since 1987, it is a modern, efficient facility staffed by licensed, well trained operators. Charlevoix is continually improving it's distribution system assuring fresh water and adequate pressure throughout our entire service area. An electrical generator at the Water Plant assures normal operation at full capacity in the event of loss of electrical power. We at the Charlevoix Water Treatment Plant and Distribution System work around the clock to provide top quality water to every tap.

SCRAPBOOK

The company that gave Ironton its name

By BOB MORGRIDGE
Special to the Courier

Initially, Ironton was settled by a few woodcutters and some scattered homesteaders. It grew slowly as a settlers' community until the arrival of R.N. Cherrie who came from Chicago in the late 1870s.

Cherrie and his partner, S.R. Adams, recognized that the stands of hardwood on Holy Island and along the shores of Pine Lake (now Lake Charlevoix) would produce an abundance of charcoal necessary to manufacture cast iron. Cherrie purchased the acreage and by 1879 hired woodcutters who began felling and cutting trees into cordwood.

Woodsmen hauled the cordwood to the shores of Pine Lake and piled the wood upon scows. A tug pulled the loaded scows to Ironton. The cordwood was removed from the scows and piled on flat cars which were pulled over a tram to the wood yard. The wood yard was situated in a field just south of the Congregational Church.

The cordwood had to dry for a year before being burnt to charcoal. While the cordwood was being stacked and cured, Cherrie built a series of 22 kilns which were arranged in two rows and resembled beehives. The kilns baked the wood into charcoal and the charcoal produced the intense heat needed to melt the iron ore.

The operation of the kilns was simple. A tram ran from the dock between the two rows of kilns up to the wood yard. When the kilns were ready to be fired in 1881, flat cars filled with cordwood were pushed over the tram from the wood yard to the kilns. Workmen dropped anywhere from 15 to 20 cords of wood into each kiln from an opening near the top.

After the kiln was charged, a fire was started on the floor of the kiln with wood shavings and softwood. Around the bottom of the kiln were removal bricks. Workmen pulled more bricks out to gain more draft or a hotter fire. If the wood began to burn too fast, kiln operators replaced the bricks in order to choke down or smother the fire.

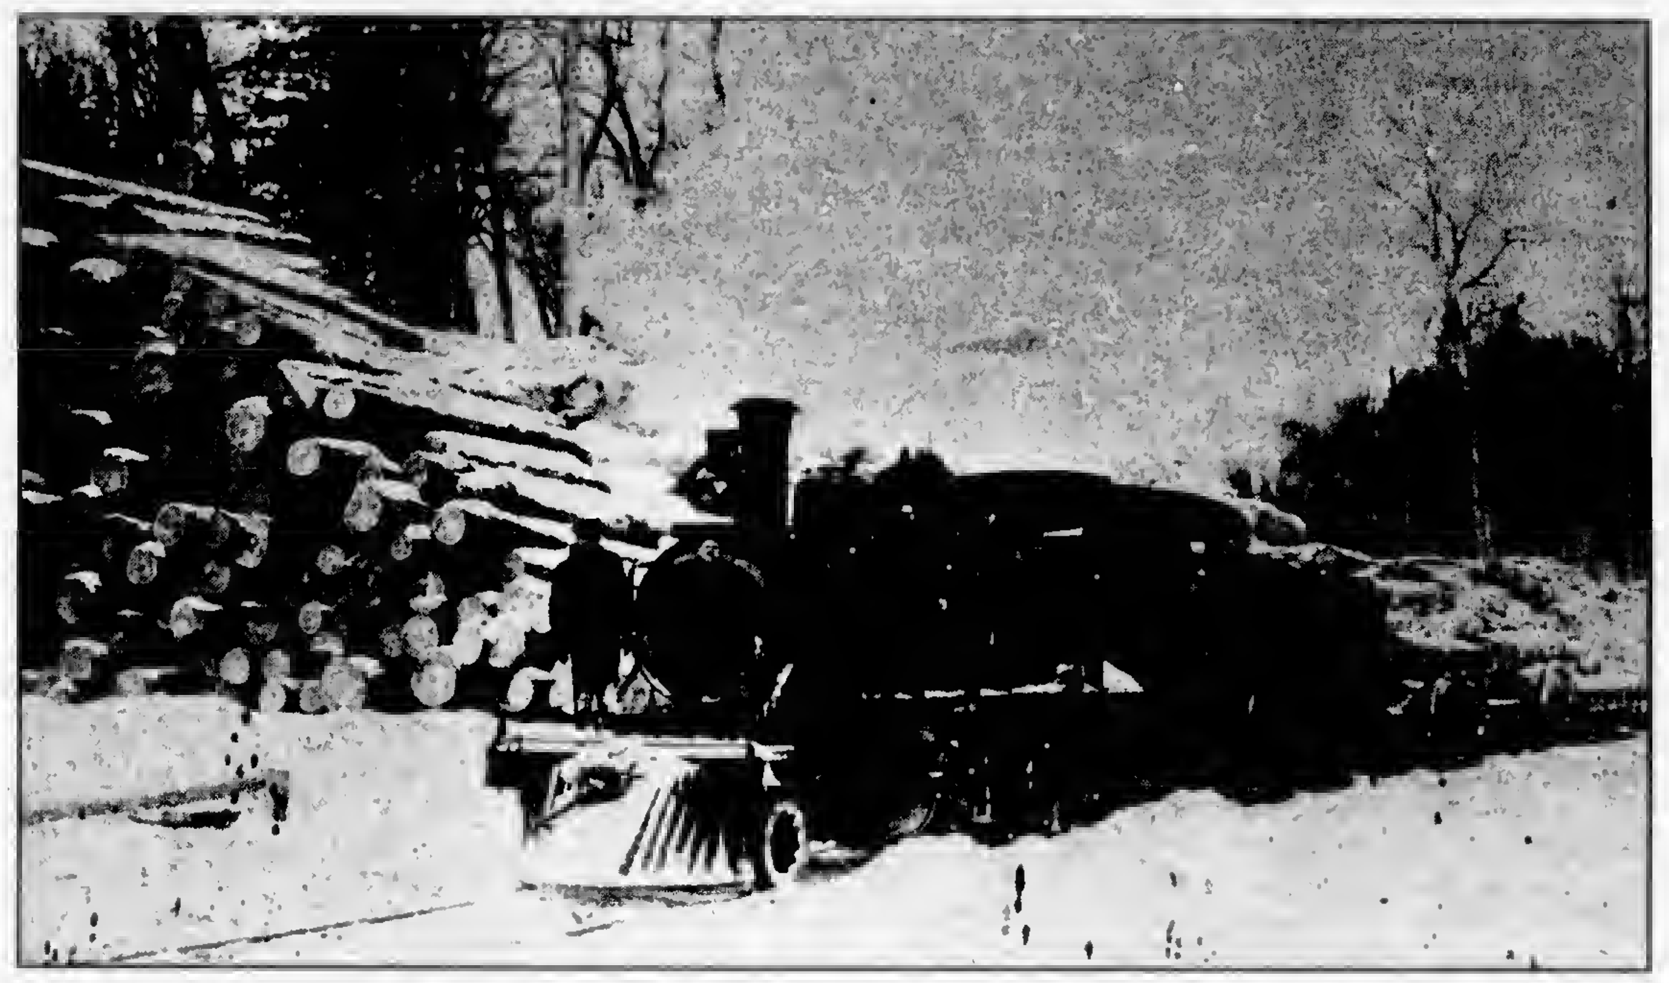
It took seven days to burn the wood and cool the charcoal. The kilns consumed 36,000 cords of wood yearly while producing 1,250,000 bushels of charcoal. Manufactured charcoal was shoveled into buggies and wheeled to the Pine Lake Iron Company's furnace near the lake.

Along the shore of the lake, and close to the dock, was a pile of iron ore. The iron ore was brought in by schooners from Escanaba. Approximately 30,000 tons were delivered each year to the iron furnace.

The charcoal and iron ore were poured down the throat of the blast furnace stack by means of a conveyer system. The furnace stack was charged with alternate layers of charcoal and iron ore up to the top. When the furnace was charged, the bottom layer of charcoal was ignited. As the fire burned its way up to the other layers of charcoal, the iron ore was melted.

When the iron ore liquefied, the door at the mouth of the furnace was opened. The molten iron ran out of the furnace and into the casting room. In the casting room the iron flowed by gravity down a network of sand-made channels into beds, or molds, formed out of sand to cool.

As the iron cooled, workmen, called "sandhogs," went into the casting room with sledge hammers and fractured the solidified cast iron into manageable bars, weighing approximately 100 pounds each.



The train rolls into Ironton for its only visit, as the track was never used again. (Courtesy photo)

After the cast iron bars, called pigs, cooled, they were loaded upon four-wheel buggies and pushed to the pig yard to await shipment. In 1884 dock workers strained to lift 30,000 pigs weighing 15,000 tons aboard waiting vessels. The destination of the pigs is not known. It is known that high grade cast iron manufactured at the Pine Lake Iron Company was especially good for making stoves and ranges.

Iron ore foundry sat on Ironton shores

IRONTON

Cherrie brought in a few experts versed in his operation, but most of the workers were local people. Occasionally, Cherrie employed drifters who worked only long enough to get a paycheck and then depart.

Consequently, Cherrie, who had built a general store north of the Iron Works, decided to pay his workers in scrip. In the store he stocked all the goods needed by his employees and required them to trade at the "Company Store." The result was that many stayed longer than anticipated.

The provisions for the store came by way of schooner and were delivered to a dock in front of the store. There was no road between Charlevoix and Ironton except a sandy trail.

Cherrie's Iron Works apparently prospered for a decade, because Cherrie decided to construct a railroad from Charlevoix to Ironton. The railroad was completed in 1892, but oddly enough only one train ever arrived in Ironton. Subsequently, Cherrie tore up the tracks and only parts of the railroad bed remain for posterity.

The rationale for this incredible event — except for possible financial woes — occurred as a result of the national election of 1892. Cherrie, who was a devout Republican, vowed that if Grover Cleveland was elected he would shut down his company.

Unfortunately for Cherrie and Ironton, the Democrats prevailed. Upon hearing of the Republicans defeat and terrified of a Democratic administration, Cherrie promptly closed the Pine Lake Iron Company, dynamited the machinery and left the town which still bears the name of his Iron Works.

During the time of the Iron Works, Ironton sprouted from a small settlement to a thriving community of about 1,200 people. Naturally, when Cherrie "pulled up stakes," others left in search of brighter horizons.

Today, down-state tourists and even area residents come to Ironton to ride across the nationally famed Ironton Ferry. But, few of the passengers are aware that on the little peninsula several hundred yards to the north of the ferry was the location of Cherrie's Iron Works.

On this peninsula, where the construction company of Hodgkiss and Douma pile their stone, is the decaying foundation that supported the blast furnace stack. A little closer to the Ferry's landing and in the public parking site, is the place where the two rows of kilns stood.

Finally, in a casual stroll along the water's edge, one can still see the weather beaten pilings on which rested the docks where busy workmen unloaded the cordwood and iron ore and also loaded the schooners and steamers that once plied the Great Lakes delivering the pigs.

Holiday success

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's July 4 celebration and the holiday weekend that followed kept retailers, lodging facilities, art fair vendors and even the city police on their toes.

Thousands flocked to town to shop, relax, soak in the sunshine and celebrate Independence Day. And even though Charlevoix didn't host a fireworks display, the town was certainly booming.

"The holiday was fantastic — there were wall-to-wall people in town, busy, busy, busy. It was a great long weekend," Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Director Jacqueline Merta said.

She said the wall-to-wall people were in-and-out of the chamber inquiring about lodging, restaurants and other amenities. And lodging facilities felt the high demand.

General Manager for the Weathervane Terrace Inn and Suites, Tom Pfeifle, said all 68 of the facility's rooms were booked solid. No vacancy signs at several other Charlevoix motels and hotels were also lit.

"Summer is off to a roar. The end of June was great and the July 4 weekend was packed. I'm optimistic about the rest of the summer," Pfeifle said.

He said the summer business season's "roar" can likely be attributed to the hot, sunny weather felt locally and across the state.

"If the weather is nice, they'll come," he said.

Merta agrees with Pfeifle's take on why this July 4 the streets and sidewalks pulsed with people — heat. And Charlevoix's water and beautiful beaches are known to beckon land locked tourists.

"It (the summer business rush) was much needed. It was warm before this, but 95 degree weather really made people leave home and come north," Merta said.

The mass exodus from surrounding areas to Charlevoix had businesses hopping.

Jacqueline Mabee, co-owner of local clothing stores which include Gear to Wear, Charlevoix Wear, Color Wear and Clothing Company said the weekend was "probably one of the best ever."

"There were a lot of shoppers in town," she said.

Mixed in with the summertime beauty of Charlevoix last week, was the annual Fourth of July parade and Downtown Art Show. Cemex works to clean up piles

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After one year of work, cleanup of nine cement kiln dust piles at Cemex is an estimated 80 percent complete, but abnormally high pH levels in nearby Lake Michigan have not yet decreased.

A Lake Michigan pH reading done by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) last year at this time near the Cemex shoreline was 11 and as of this spring that hadn't changed. But, as a result of a MDEQ cleanup mandate, the company is taking steps to ensure degradation of the water and its abnormally high pH become a thing of the past.

"We had to prevent any further degradation to the groundwater from the cement kiln dust piles. We determined, with the DEQ, the best technique to remedy the situation and are committed to doing it," Michele Buckler, Cemex environmental health and safety manager, said.

Janice Adams, a geologist with the Environmental Response Division of the MDEQ explained the problematic cement kiln dust is a byproduct of the cement manufacturing process. Its the composition of the dust itself and past disposal practices that have created problems for groundwater and consequently lake water.

"Cement kiln dust contains a lot of heavy metals — irons, leads and mercury — that get out and affect surface water," she said.

Water traveling down through the cement kiln dust piles picks up these heavy metals and alkalinity, which then leach into the groundwater and Lake Michigan. Lake water is turned a dark, "coffee color" by the contaminated water and in some areas has a high enough pH to possibly burn human skin.

Two injured in US-31 accident

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating a one vehicle traffic crash that happened at 7:35 p.m. July 2 on US-31 near Burgess Road in Hayes Township that left two people injured.

Richard MacNealy, 78, of Florida was driving his 2002 Lincoln four door vehicle when he went to adjust his sun visor, lost control and ran off the road. He over corrected, ran off the road again and the vehicle rolled approximately three times.

MacNealy was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service for a serious head injury. His wife, Shirley MacNealy, 71, was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix EMS with a broken collarbone.

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, both occupants had their seat belts on which greatly reduced injury.

The crash remains under investigation at this time.

Well-liked supporter of area fishing dies at 51

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix lost an icon of the fishing world, a devotee of the outdoors and a beloved family-man with the death of Joe Maltese, 51, of Charlevoix.

Joe was hospitalized in Petoskey after a heart attack June 29 during a fishing tournament in Manistee. He died July 3.

Joe was the director of the annual Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament, was a Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce board member, was actively involved with improving fishing conditions in the area, was a contributor to Mike Avery Michigan Outdoors Magazine on the Michigan Talk Radio Network with his "Sloppy Joe" Fishing report and he had just started an online fishing tackle business.

In addition, he was known as a passionate husband and loving father, who gave as much as possible to his children and friends.

"He probably had more integrity than just about any individual I know," said friend Terry Weber, of Boyne Falls. "Everything he did revolved around his family and friends."

Weber said Joe worked hard for his family and was a great friend. He described Joe's family as very "close knit."

"He always wanted to give more than he was likely to receive. Everyone I know is just crazy about the guy," Weber said. "He could be a friend to anyone."

Joe was a master plasterer who moved to Charlevoix from Dearborn in 1994. Weber said Joe moved to the area because of his love for the outdoors and his desire to raise his family in a safe environment.

He added, Joe was a very hard worker who was "just getting his life around to do what he really wanted to do." Specifically, Joe was getting his on-line fishing tackle business going and was very active in the fishing world, be it the Lake Charlevoix Trout Tournament or his weekly fishing report on Michigan Talk Radio Network.

In fact, on the day of the heart attack in Manistee, Joe's fishing tackle website, Big Water Fishin' Stuff, came online. The website's management will continue in memory of Joe. It is located at www.bigWFS.net. Singer Lures are the featured product.

In Charlevoix, Joe was one of six directors of the annual Lake Charlevoix Trout Tournament.

Dave Juilleret, one of the other six directors, said Joe came on board as a great master of ceremonics who got everyone involved.

"He was the kind of guy that was willing to do anything he could do," Juilleret said.

He was great at getting prizes for the tournament that were popular and worked hard at getting kids involved with fishing. In addition, Juilleret said Joe was an avid "big water" fisherman who liked to go after trout and salmon.

"A lot of the big fish out there will be able to relax for a little while now," Juilleret said.

In addition to directing the Lake Charlevoix Trout Tournament, Joe was the Fishing and Environmental Spokesperson for the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce. In this position, he initiated cooperation between the Charlevoix chambers to address water resource issues.

Joe's brother, Vince Maltese, echoed the others.

"(Joe) was really quite a gentleman," Vince said. "He touched so many people, it's beyond words. Everybody loved him. He would go out of his way for a total stranger."

His sister, Michele Maltese, added, "He was a very ethical and moral guy. You could trust him in a room with $10 million and he would find the owner."

Joe was married to Marlene Griffen on July 30, 1978. He had a son, Jason Joseph of Charlevoix and a daughter, Laura Nichole Shively of Elk Rapids. Joe's daughter was married just a month ago to David Shively, in the same church as Joe's funeral. His funeral was on July 6 at the Christ Episcopal Church in Charlevoix.

Marlene formerly worked full-time in the same intensive care unit in which Joe died. She is now a house supervisor at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

His son, Jason, is a radio producer for Michigan Talk Radio Network.

Marlene described Joe as a "wonderful, intense, passionate, dynamic husband."

In addition to his wife, son and daughter, Joe is survived by his parents, Roy and Dolores Maltese of Dearborn; in-laws, Thomas and Violette Griffen of Fenton; brother, Vincent; sisters, René and Michele Maltese, all of Dearborn; nieces, Andrea, Danielle, Rachel, Katie; nephews, Brian and Matthew, and brothers-in-law Christopher (Kathy) Griffen of Canton and Steven (Joan) Griffen of Troy.

Joe was a 1970 graduate of Edsel Ford High School in Dearborn. He was also in the Air Force Reserves; which on one mission he was one of those searching for the Edmund Fitzgerald off Whitefish Point.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Lake Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament.

How to have fun with the local rumor mill

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I was shocked when I first heard it.

"That person cannot stand you," my friend repeated to me. "They said they will never read the Charlevoix Courier."

As my mind raced feverishly trying to figure out who the person he was talking about — all names are being left out here — I asked, "Why?"

"Because they think you don't do enough for nonprofits," my friend said.

My confusion quickly rose as I began to grasp it.

"Some person does not like me because they think I don't do enough for nonprofits," I thought. "But, we only publish events that support nonprofits, I regularly take pictures of nonprofits in action and a good percentage of the newspaper is dedicated to nonprofit news each week. Plus, if an employee of the Courier can't cover a nonprofit event, we accept pictures taken by members of the group and try our darndest to get them into the following edition of the newspaper."

I always have a soft-spot in my heart for nonprofits.

On top of this news, I realized I had never even spoken to this person who couldn't stand me or ever received any event notices or press releases from this person.

I spent the rest of the day stewing about this — I know, I shouldn't.

Then it hit me. This person was probably reacting to an impression that they made about me, based on what others had told them. Maybe one time I turned down a nonprofit for something — it rarely happens, maybe I was having a bad day — and the person I spoke with was upset and thought of me poorly.

This is something that happens regularly in this job. When your name is out in the public, especially as a small-town newspaper editor, people get angry at you for things you don't even know about.

Sometimes those things they are angry about never even happened in the first place. They are rumors.

It seems the rumor tree is always full of "information." In the almost three years that I have been here, I have heard the Courier is going bankrupt (not even close), I have to work three jobs to make ends meet (I don't have time to do that), everyone hates me (depending on the day, sometimes I think this is true) and — most recently — I have quit my job at the Courier and am working at some office on the northside (I wonder if this other business has a paycheck waiting for me).

Another good rumor I hear all the time involves pretty much everyone in the media business. People love to think there is some sort of conspiracy in the media for various things or we have agendas. Liberals think the media is leaning too far right and Conservatives regularly chastise the "left-wing" media.

Yes, everyone in the media is in a conspiracy. We meet monthly at a secret lair in Ohio with the all-powerful Illuminate. We plan what stories we are going to cover for the next month and decide who we are going to destroy this time. Ted Turner usually makes great finger-sandwiches and the boards of the major newspaper companies bring Kool-Aid.

Rumors...what fun. I know the rumors will never stop and I am not the only topic of rumors. I hear great ones every day.

"So-and-so bought 1,000 acres of land that he is going to turn into an amusement park, filled with vicious attack dogs and featuring a boat ride through raw sewage." Later I find out that "so-and-so" really bought 10 acres of land and built a house on it and was bitten by a stray dog on the same day the septic system in his new house backed up.

While I wish I could say these things don't bother me, they do. I hate it when I hear someone doesn't like me for something I'm not. I make a living at trying to give people accurate information, not rumors, and it depresses me when rumors take top billing.

But, I am learning to take these in stride now and have decided to have fun with them.

I would like to encourage others to do the same. Since the grape vine will never end, let's join in the fun by starting some real outlandish ones.

Stuff like, "Aliens have taken over the minds of everyone on the Venetian Board and they are promoting the use of silly string at this year's Venetian boat parade."

Let's see what the local rumor mill does with these. It could be fun.

As for the person who thinks I don't do enough for nonprofits, give me a call so we can help your nonprofit get recognized. Maybe we could have a few laughs about the miscommunication.

Maybe we can even share our favorite rumors.

Strings program comes across local viola prodigy

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Everyone involved is really surprised but no one more so than 11-year-old Andy Tuck himself!

So much has happened to Andy in his short life since Karey Johnson showed up in the spring of 2001 at St. Mary's to teach an introductory class in string instruments to the fifth grade. No one had a clue that Andy had absolute pitch and that he would take to the viola like a duck to water!

Andy told me, when I interviewed him at home, that he enjoys practicing three hours a day on his great-grandfather, Loren Supernaw's, 100-year-old instrument. He merely listens to classical music on a CD and then proceeds to play it perfectly on his viola. He eagerly played the Spring Concerto by Vivaldi for me and I was overwhelmed by his smooth, impromptu performance.

Now, as a member of the Crooked Tree Youth Orchestra, under the direction of Johnson, he has already performed twice at the Bay View Auditorium.

When Johnson took a group of students to the Jordan Valley Fiddlers Jamboree of East Jordan, Andy applied for a scholarship through their auspices to the famed music camp, Interlochen. After auditioning with music instructor, David Holland, he was accepted and attended the first two-week session at camp.

He participated in an orchestra recital and a class on music theory in the morning. In the afternoon, students had supervised practice and an orchestra workshop. On Wednesdays, they had private lessons. Andy plans to return in 2004 to join the Intermediate Group where, to his joy, they offer more music and less camping to the youngsters.

Andy is the youngest of three.

Local boy has ear for music

GILBERT

His father, Tom Tuck, works in the emergency room at Charlevoix Area Hospital and his mother is a nurse in the Obstetrical Department. Both parents are surprised and thrilled with the recent turn of events.

Andy Tuck

His father feels this introduction to music, "Has been a Godsend! It has enriched Andy's life more than we could ever have dreamed!"

Johnson, who has a master's degree in Viola, is also surprised and delighted at her discovery. She not only gave Andy private lessons last summer, hut answered his steady stream of questions. In all the 25 years of teaching, she admits she's had only four students that she recognized as prodigies.

This month, Andy has been invited to play with the Jordan Valley Fiddlers Group at 7:30 p.m. on July 24 in Charlevoix in the park. He will also be playing with the Youth Orchestra Camp Concert at 12:15 p.m., Aug. 1 at the Concert in the Park in Petoskey.

To help support the Beginning String Program for students in Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet Counties, which is administered by the Crooked Tree Arts Center under the direction of Johnson, you may wish to attend the Symphony on the Green at Dunmaglas at 3 p.m. on Sunday, July 14.

Please call the Arts Center (231) 347-4337. Beverages will be available for purchase.

By the way, Andy will not be playing in the Symphony on the Green program this year. But, who knows, at this rate, anything can happen!

Letter to the editor

Improve traffic flow

Editor:

Subject — Improve traffic flow through town.

Problem description — After the bridge has closed and the traffic traveling north on Bridge Street starts to move and the light turns green for cars trying to go north from Clinton Street (especially coming from State Street) cars are then blocked by pedestrians crossing on the north intersection crosswalk. This restriction of traffic sometimes allows only about four cars to exit Clinton Street.

Solution — Prohibit this pedestrian crossing use during peak hours by posting two signs, east and west, one on each side of Bridge Street and reprogram the pedestrian crossing lights to show the do not cross hand continuously.

This will ensure that the pedestrians will cross Bridge Street on the south crosswalk of the intersection, thus improving automobile traffic from Clinton to Bridge streets traveling north.

Nettleton honored with special day

At the Charlevoix City Council meeting July 2 early Charlevoix pioneer, Rosa Nettleton, received a mayoral proclamation designating a special day in her honor.

Rosa Nettleton Day on July 12 honors the woman who was a historian, poet, artist, sculptress and costume designer. She was born March 6, 1868 and died Sept. 29, 1959 and was the wife of Charlevoix abstractor David Nettleton.

Nettleton's artistic works included early Charlevoix harbor scenes and old time schooners that visited our area. Her canvases also included beautifully costumed Victorian women, still lives and portraits. Her art work, poetry and her compilation of Charlevoix Sentinel records into a book left a rich history.

The Friends of the Charlevoix Public Library and the Charlevoix Historical Society are presenting an exhibit called "Rosa Nettleton — A Retrospective of Her Life and Work," from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m., July 12-14 at the Depot Museum on Chicago Avenue in Charlevoix.

Divine and her husband, Larry, of Lake Elsinore, Calif.; nieces and nephews, Satin, Scotty, Shad, Sheason and Shannon Bruce, Kristin Cook and Kimberly Kirkland.

The family is being served by Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

Norman B. Lawton: June 25, 1914 - June 29, 2002

Norman B. Lawton, 88, of East Jordan, noted industrialist, entrepreneur, environmentalist and beloved husband and father died at home June 29.

He was born Norman Ballard Lawton in Athol, Mass. on June 25, 1914, the oldest of four children of Howard and Lucy Mary (Farrington) Lawton. At an early age, he moved with his family to Detroit.

Following graduation from Northwestern High School, he attended the University of Michigan, studying engineering for three years and was a member of Theta Chi fraternity. He was also a long distance runner, both in high school and college. With the outbreak of World War II, he returned to Detroit to work at the family business.

On March 9, 1938 he married Helen Virginia Shearer in Detroit, his high school sweetheart, and together they celebrated 63 years of marriage, until her death in August of 2001. For 40 years, the couple resided in the Southfield/Farmington area, summering and vacationing in northern Michigan's Leelanau and Charlevoix counties and eventually moved to the Lake Charlevoix area.

Norman assumed the presidency of the Star Cutter Company in 1945 which had been started by his father, Howard and Frank Burgess in 1927. Under his guidance and with a talented and dedicated team of employees, Star Cutter grew from 10 original employees to over 900, with plants in several states, becoming a world leader in the machine cutting tool industry. He led his company the same way he and his wife Helen led their personal life and family: With tenacity, boundless energy and unrelenting determination, while offering extraordinary kindness to whomever needed guidance and direction.

He left an indelible mark on the lives of many. His motto was, "Find a way or make one," and Norm "stormed" through life with that commitment. He was known as a friend to the working man, not a boss. And he never asked anyone in his employ to do something he hadn't done or wouldn't do.

He and his loyal staff pioneered countless machine tool manufacturing practices and innovations and patented technological advances that to this day produce sophisticated metal cutting tools.

Over the years he was a member of many boards and organizations including the Metal Cutting Tool Institute, Farmington Exchange Club and president of the Detroit Skating Club. He held a special appreciation for the environment and this state, protecting it through stream restoration, reforestation efforts and wildlife habitat improvements.

He was preceded in death by his parents, his wife, his sister Vivian Stanley and brother Leonard Lawton and one son, Gary L. Lawton.

He is survived by a sister, Dorothy L Guilbert of Boyne City. Norman and Helen had five children: Marcia L. (David) Kalayjian of Durham, Conn.; Bradley L. (Nancy) Lawton of Traverse City; Dee L. (Gregg) Smith of Traverse City; and Michelle L. (Todd) Swank of Littleton, Colo. He was grandfather to Kristin, Kim, Kevin, Jeff, Bryan, Julie, Markelle, Joelle and Kendalle and great-grandfather of 11.

Memorial services for the family to celebrate his life were held at the Hill on Lake Charlevoix. Contributions may be made to the Norman B. Lawton Education Scholarship Fund through Star Cutter Company, P.O. Box 376, Farmington, MI 48332.

In accordance with his wishes, cremation has taken place. Arrangements were handled by the Winchester Funeral Home, Charlevoix.

Motel should be cleaned up July 15

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

An afternoon hearing in Charlevoix County 90th District Court to resolve a blight issue involving the city of Charlevoix and owners of the Silver Birch Motel was postponed last week.

The motel owners, Patti and Philip Christ have not cleaned up the site, located at 1539 US-31 South, following a January structure fire that claimed the second floor and city officials are fed up.

On June 5, 2002 Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson issued Patti a citation for violating the city's nuisance ordinance. In an interview, Halverson said cleanup of the blight situation was well overdue.

However, the city's assistant attorney Bryan Graham of the Bellaire based firm Young, Graham and Elsenheimer, said that because Philip is also an owner of the property, steps also have to be taken to issue him a citation for the same violation before the case will go to court.

As of July 1, Philip had not been cited and the July 2 hearing was adjourned by district court administrators until some time near the end of the month.

Graham also noted in a memo he wrote to city manager Mike Wiesner that he had spoken with Patti during the week of June 27-31 and that she had indicated they are planning to clean up the property by no later than July 15.

"Mrs. (Patti) Christ indicated she had a contractor, under contract for the demolition which should be completed before that date (July 15)," he wrote.

The Christs could not be contacted in this matter.

The city is not sitting back and waiting though. If the Christs do not complete the demolition by July 15, the city will follow through with the hearing

"If they're found responsible for the infraction, fines and costs could result as well as an order requiring the cleanup," Graham said.

If the cleanup is completed as promised the formal hearing will be dropped.

Either way, the city plans to follow through and make sure the work gets done.

Graham said his understanding of the delay is the Christs are "dealing with the insurance company." The insurer, according to zoning administrator Dianne Manore, is Hastings Mutual of Traverse City.

Standard Federal Bank to change its name

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Standard Federal Bank, near the intersection of M-66 and Bridge Street, will be changing its name on July 22.

Northwestern Bank has purchased the Charlevoix office along with five other Standard Federal offices in northern Michigan: Gaylord, Houghton Lake, Petoskey, Rogers City and Traverse City. The change over is expected to occur on July 22.

Richard Jackson, executive vice president of Northwestern Bank, said Northwestern Bank purchased the six offices because of their availability and location.

"It's a good opportunity to expand Northwestern's presence in northern Michigan," Jackson said.

Jackson said Northwestern didn't purchase the entire chain, so Standard Federal will continue to operate as such in the lower Michigan areas.

The deposit accounts of Standard Federal customers are the only accounts Northwestern is purchasing, Jackson said. He added that deposits include checking and savings accounts, IRA's and certificates of deposit.

Loans are not part of the transaction.

According to Jackson, people who have their mortgages or loans through Standard Federal will stay with the previous bank, but will have to mail their payments to a Standard Federal Bank.

The services Northwestern Bank will provide their new customers will meet or exceed the services they are currently using through Standard Federal, Jackson said.

Jackson said the staff of Standard Federal will not be altered in the change over and will simply become staff members of Northwestern Bank.

Alterations and negative setbacks that occur through changes of this nature are expected to not rear their head. Jackson said Northwestern has a lot of experience with data processing conversion, so problems aren't expected to arise.

According to Jackson, Northwestern is a community bank which means its headquarters are in northern Michigan. Due to the closeness, Jackson said the change will be good for the customers because they will now be dealing with a local bank.

"We bring an alternative choice of banking to the community," Jackson said.

Temporary space

Lead alto saxophone player in the Charlevoix City Band, Judy Willey, informed the community of the band's temporary location for the next two months by painting a sign on the window of the old post office off Mason Street July 2. The band usually practices in the Charlevoix High School Music Room, which is being rewired and is not available. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Symphony on the Green to be a little different

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Symphony on the Green planners say the event is more than just a concert — it's a fundraiser that helps finance an expansion of one of Charlevoix's crown jewels, Charlevoix Area Hospital.

"I think a lot of people come back year after year because the symphony benefits the hospital," Patti Barraw, a Charlevoix Area Hospital Symphony on the Green coordinating volunteer, said.

She explained that the hospital services a clientele from all walks of life and the symphony is a way to bring those people together and to welcome those who are unfamiliar with the hospital to explore its extensive, advanced services.

This year's show, which is scheduled to take place at 3 p.m., July 14 at Dunmaglas Golf Course, will be a change from previous performances.

Over the past three years, the program has maintained a classical leaning, but Barraw said this show will take a more "light-hearted" direction. The theme, "No Business like Show Business," was chosen by symphony co-chairs, Mary Adams and Christine Unbehaun.

The line-up will include show tune favorites like: themes from 007 films, musical highlights from Rocky films and song favorites "Tequila," "La Bamba" and "American in Paris."

The symphonic melodies will be produced under the veteran direction of Kevin Rhodes. Rhodes spent 10 years in Europe where he achieved international success. By the end of the 2002 season he had conducted nearly 700 performances in Europe with 20 different orchestras.

The afternoon concert will also feature the experienced vocals of tenor Mark Planner who will be featured on symphonic selections to include: "Our Love is Here to Stay," Irving Berlin medleys and a rendition of George Gershwin's "Embraceable You."

Planner has been a professional vocalist performer since the early 1970s and has also spent his career offering voice instruction courses at the Paul Gavert Studio in Manhattan, N.Y. and at the Hartt School of Music at the University of Hartford in Connecticut.

Last year's symphony raised over $40,000 for the hospital and this year planners are aspiring to reach the $50,000 mark.

In 1999 the symphony was at the Bay Harbor Equestrian Club, then in 2000 and 2001 it took place at the Charlevoix Country Club. This year, the venue is set in Charlevoix's Hayes Township at Dunmaglas Golf Course, located 5 miles east of Charlevoix off Boyne City Road.

The orchestra will set up in the rustic barn and a tent will extend back to offer patrons shade.

Grounds open at 1:30 p.m. Patron tickets are $200 which include preferential seating under the tent and post concert cocktails, hors d'oeuvres and a gourmet buffet dinner. The patron ticket price includes a $120 tax-deductible donation.

Reserved seats under the tent are $50 and seating on the green is $25 and $15 for students and seniors. "Green" ticket holders are asked to bring a blanket or lawn chair for comfort seating.

No food or beverages can be brought on the grounds, but beverages will be available and box lunches can be reserved in advance for $10.

Aside from its donation to the hospital, the event also raises money for the Crooked Tree Arts Council's beginning string program.

For more information about the upcoming Fourth Annual Symphony on the Green, contact Barraw at (231) 547-8685.

JUL 2002

Lions Club to have annual golf tournament

The Charlevoix Lions Club's Eighth Annual Four Player Team Scramble Golf Tournament will take place, July 18 at the Belvedere Golf Club.

Over 20 teams are expected to compete for the lowest score trophies and cash prizes will be awarded at a dinner to follow the tournament at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Over the past six tournaments, the club has awarded 24 bronze "Lion" trophies to winners. The team of Quinton Walker Jr., Doug Volmer, John Norman and Walt Francek have taken the top honor two years running.

Along the way, each golfer will try for a $10,000 prize to be awarded to whoever sinks a tee-shot on hole 17; a Sony camcorder on hole 4; two round-trip airline tickets on hole 8; and a matched set of Callaway irons on hole 14.

Players can also try for a $5,000 prize in the "Putt for Bucks" contest on the practice green. Longest drive prizes will be given on holes 1 and 10.

To date there have been no aces in this tournament. However, official "Lions Crying Towels" and consolation cash prizes are awarded to those whose shots land closest to the pin from a bunker on hole 4. Putting finalist Jack Dempsey took the "Lion" trophy and a crying towel last year. So far the club has had to give out 34 towels, but this could be the year for more ace winners and fewer towels.

Check-in will begin at 12:30 p.m., July 18 and will include a brat picnic lunch. Shotgun start is at 2 p.m. The $5,000 "Putt for Bucks" contest will follow after the last hole is played.

The Knights of Columbus doors are to open at 5:30 p.m., dinner is at 6:30 p.m. and will feature the famous Lions chicken.

The $95 per player fee includes 18 holes, the cart, all events and the awards dinner. Dinner only guests will be charged $12.

Proceeds from the event go to support the club's many charities.

For more information and to register, call Jeff Rizzo at (231) 547-5117 or Bern Cannan at (231) 547-5512.

Three injured in accident

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is currently investigating an automobile accident that injured three around 9 p.m., June 29 on US-131 South near Robbin Siding Road, south of Boyne Falls in Boyne Valley Township.

Steven Knapp, 33, of Boyne City, was traveling north on US-131 and was coming to a stop behind a truck and trailer pulling into a private driveway. As he was stopping William Boros, 65 of Petoskey, did not stop in time to avoid a collision with the rear end of the Knapp vehicle.

Knapp escaped injury, however his wife and two children, ages 6 and 3, were injured in the crash and were transported to the hospital for treatment. Boros, the sole occupant of his vehicle, also escaped injury.

The cause of the crash remains undetermined; the crash remains under investigation.

Due to time constraints on the staff, we cannot attend every event we are notified of. If you have a picture of your event, we will gladly consider it for publication. But, please, contact us before your event.

It should be noted, each story and picture is dealt with on its individual merits. Any policies outlined above may be suspended by the editor or general manager of the Charlevoix Courier if necessary.

Sessions to help cope with loss

Loss of any kind is the focus of a series of five weekly sessions designed to help people cope.

Losing a spouse, parent or child due to death is sometimes more than we can bear. Also emotionally taxing is getting divorced, losing your job, moving, dealing with a chronic illness or even losing a pet.

The sessions for those coping with loss will take place from 6:30-8 p.m., Tuesdays from July 16 to Aug. 13 at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The program is designed to help those grow through grief and learn the five tasks of grief work.

The Grief Recovery Program is sponsored by Hospice of Northwest Michigan, Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, Charlevoix Area Hospital and Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Agency.

Anyone is invited who has suffered a loss or who is helping a loved one deal with a loss and who would benefit from the support of others.

Pre-register by calling the hospice office at (231) 536-2842. There is no charge for the program.

Holiday weekend keeps Charlevoix busy

VISITORS

Mabee attributed the high volume of shoppers to several elements including weather, the Art Fair and the holiday vacation period.

"It was a mixture of all sorts of things, hopefully we can come up with the same formula again next year," she said.

The holiday crowds brought more than just money to town; they also brought extra pedestrian and automobile traffic, equating to extra work for the city police.

"It was unusual I thought. You look out four days later and its relatively quiet," Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said.

Halverson reported that officers on duty from July 3 through July 6 logged 23 incidents. He said the majority were fender-benders, while others were alcohol-related offenses including drunk driving and minors in possession.

He said he increased his manpower for the holiday weekend.

"This was the most congested I recall ever seeing it. The backups on all the roads leading into town were significant," Halverson said.

He suggests for the rest of summer's peak traffic times, like during the upcoming Venetian Festival, locals and visitors take their time and plan ahead.

"On July 5, it (traffic) peaked from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., so get your errands done before or after that," he suggests.

Charlevoix residents and visitors celebrated the Fourth of July with the annual parade down Bridge Street. The parade featured local veterans and military vehicles, decked out in the colors of the United States of America. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

CITY OF CHARLEVOIX PUBLIC NOTICE

The Board of Review for the City of Charlevoix will meet on Tuesday, July 16, 2002, from 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 Noon, at City Hall, 210 State Street.

The purpose of the meeting is to correct clerical errors, Homestead affidavits, mistakes of fact, erroneous tax rates or mathematical computations.

If you have any questions please call the City Clerk's Office at 547-3250.

Elizabeth Gooch, City Clerk

CONSIDERING TAKING ACTION IN REAL ESTATE?

"I have parked myself in front of a streaming real time quote machine nearly every working day for the past ten years, both in New York and here in Charlevoix. Investing in stocks can be rewarding, thrilling and recently, terrifying and brutally painful. The idea of investing, of course, is to maximize gain and minimize risk."

"Although risk is ever present in any investment, Real Estate may provide some advantages. According to the National Association of Realtors, the purchase of a median home appreciated at an annualized rate of 20.5% over the past three years! And, unlike capital gains realized in stock transactions, the current tax rules, as it pertains to gains from the sale of your main home, have allowed many who qualify exclusions from $250,000 to $500,000!"

"Additionally, it is no secret that some locations here in Northern Michigan are among the most desirable in the world! Just a little nudge in case you are thinking of doing something…and if you are thinking of buying or selling Real Estate in our beautiful little area, give me a call!

Island, Horton parades

Horton Bay and Beaver Island also celebrated the Fourth of July in their usual grand fashions. (Left and right) With a theme of "Horton-America Ethnic Fest" the Horton Bay parade did a great job amusing the audience with its fun entries. (Photos by Jean Musilek) (Below left and below) Beaver Island residents and visitors celebrated their freedom with a large island parade — there were over 30 floats — and a fly-over by F-16 fighter planes. Charlevoix artist opens studio on Bridge Street

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

The life of local artist Kim Left has taken her across the United States, but her inspiration comes from something older than America herself: Old myths, fables and folklore.

Left, 41, said she is very interested in the questions that the authors were trying to answer when they created fables and folklore.

"It (fables, folklore and myths) attempts to search for questions our souls ask," Left said.

The mystical and spiritual side of life is extremely interesting, Left said.

Left said she has been drawing her entire life and the characters she creates stem from old fables.

Left brings to life faeries (spelled in Celtic style), gnomes, mud puppies and the mystical character "Puck," which Left said has been around in literature long before Shakespeare made him famous.

Aside from drawing mystical things, Left also incorporates Celtic symbols and mysticism into her art and characters.

One mystical symbol Left uses is that of the ancient runes, which are ancient stones that people would throw out before them and read similarly to tarot cards.

Drawing and creating isn't the only gift Left has, for she said she can also read tarot cards, which she has done for the Charlevoix High School "Senior Party" for four years in a row.

"It's very cool and very fun," she said about reading for the graduating seniors.

Left said she has been reading tarot cards for seven years and her readings are always true.

"I've never had anyone say they're not true," she said.

Fables and myths are inspiration to artist

LEFT

Mystic characters are brought to life through Left's illustrations. She uses bright, vivid colored pencils, which are her favorite medium, to make her characters jump off the page.

Left not only draws, but has also written eight books about a faerie named Rue and her true love "Puck." Even though her stories are faerie tales, there are many levels to them so adults and children can both enjoy them.

All of the books are written, but Left is still in the process of illustrating them. Her currently available book is "The Day Rue Flew," which is the first in a trilogy titled "Rue's Ruse." The other two books in this trilogy are: "When Rue was Blue" and "What Rue Knew."

The second trilogy will be called "Perusal" and will feature "Wish," "Banshee" and "Will O' the Wisp."

There will be two other books to round out the eight, but they will stand alone. "Betwixt" will come between the two trilogies and "Faerie Phobia" will follow the second trilogy.

Left said she can draw deer in a meadow, but the bright colored faerie tales are the stories her soul yearns to tell.

According to Left, her books and artwork have something to say to everyone.

"I'd like to think it's a way to have a conversation," she said.

Left said it's gratifying when she makes a statement through her art and someone responds to it.

"You put something out of your heart and soul and someone gets it. You're not alone," she said. Left added that she is connected to those who buy or view her artwork even if she doesn't meet them.

Left's artwork can be seen at her studio/gallery called "Out in Left Field" located at 703 Bridge St., unit 3.

"Out in Left Field" opened on Memorial Day weekend this year and is just as colorful and vivid as the colors she uses to illustrate her books. When one ventures "Out in Left Field," one can expect to find copies of her first book "The Day Rue Flew," original paintings and prints, vividly painted furniture such as a glass table and a dresser with a mosaic top, colorful hammocks and much more.

"Out in Left Field" is open from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Sunday. "Out in Left Field" is closed on Monday.

Explosive destroys mailbox on Waller

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating a mailbox that was destroyed July 3 by a "large" explosive device on Waller Road.

Deputies responding to the call found the device had blown pieces of the heavy duty mailbox across Waller Road and the mailbox owner's property. Pieces of the mailbox were found up to 150 feet away.

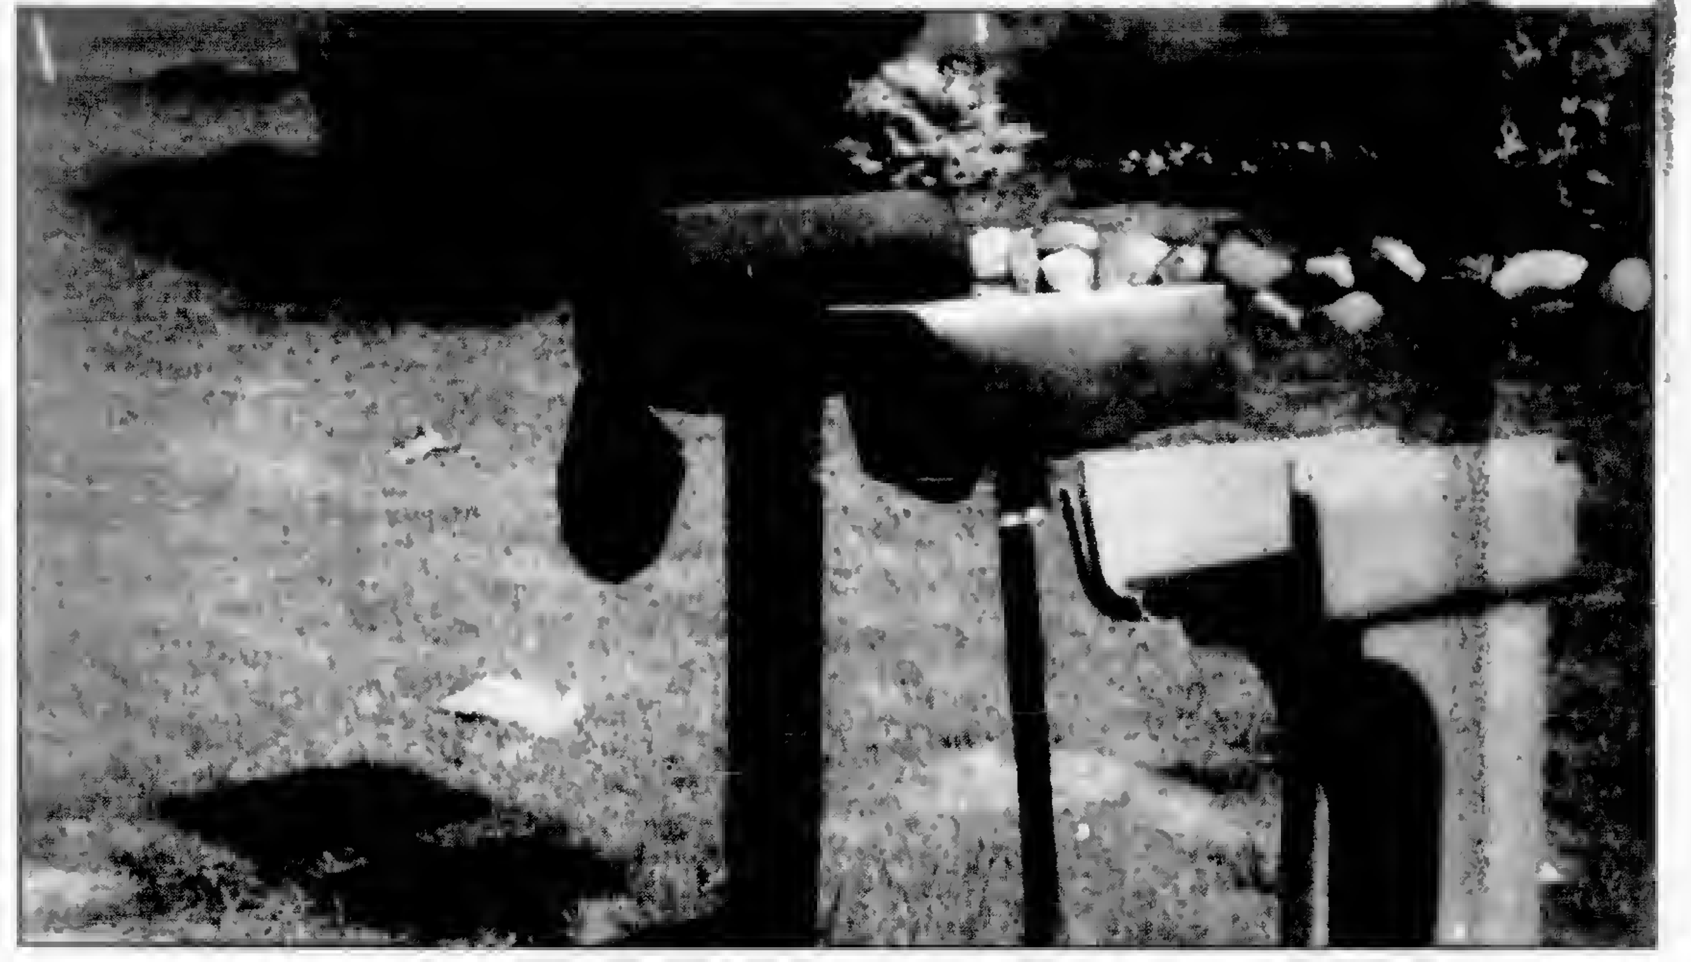
Witnesses told the deputies they heard a loud explosion around midnight on July 3.

According to Sheriff George T. Lasater, the end caps of the explosive device used to destroy the mailbox are about 5/8 of an inch.

He said the device was extremely dangerous and the shrapnel from the mailbox could have caused "serious injury."

The sheriff is asking anyone with information on this incident to call the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office immediately. The contact people for this case are Deputy Sheriff David Hague or Lasater at (231) 547-4461.

Lasater added, due to the seriousness and potential danger, a reward of $300 is being offered for information leading to the arrest of the perpetrator.



The explosive device destroyed the mailbox on the far right, bent the one in the middle and ripped the door on the one on the far left. (Courtesy photo)

Art brings many to park over weekend

Visitors to the art show last weekend in East Park could find something for every taste. Registration begins for Venetian team sports

Team sports including three-on-three-basketball, soccer, co-ed volleyball and softball are just one element of the 2002 Venetian Games.

Team events begin with a three-on-three basketball tournament scheduled for July 21. The popular tournament was moved to a new location, Lake Michigan Beach, last year and drew raves from competitors and spectators alike. The new paved parking lots accommodated all the courts needed and the additional benefit of having the lake to cool off and the beach to provide more fun for the family. St. Mary's Church will again host the all day event.

On July 22 there will be three-on-three soccer at Shanahan Field. Last year the tournament had to be extended to two days because of the large number of team entries. Boys and girls under 8 years of age will kick off the tournament with brackets designed for all ages through adult. Rosters should have no more than four players.

A tournament for co-ed beach volleyball teams will take place at Ferry Avenue Beach sand courts July 24. Teams must play three female players and three male players.

Co-ed softball will feature a completely new format this year. The event will be a one day tournament July 26. Each team must field five players with two being female one or three male or vice-versa. Three teams will compete at once, with one batting, one in the infield and the third in the outfield.

The challenge is to outscore the other two teams in a five inning game. This new version is gaining popularity across the country.

For more information contact Ike Boss at the city recreation department.

Team captains will need to register their official rosters and secure team rules, schedules and appropriate materials from the Charlevoix City Recreation Office located in city hall, (231) 547-3253.

Eighty percent of dust piles capped

CEMEX

Buckler said between 20,000 and 30,000 tons of cement kiln dust is created at the industrial site annually, all of which is now stored in the on-site licensed landfill.

And, Adams said new landfill disposal practices should allow Cemex to evade any further adverse impact to groundwater.

But, historically this byproduct was disposed of by creating nine large piles around the Cemex property. Buckler said some of the piles are almost 35 years old and these piles are the source of the pollution.

So far, Cemex has committed over a year of work and $4.5 million to making sure all nine piles meet MDEQ requirements. This figure does not include costs associated with investigation of the problem, construction of the disposal landfill or previous work on waste piles.

According to Buckler, the cleanup is expected to wrap up in November. And she said the company feels in spite of the cost and extra activity at the site, it has been worth it.

"It was done for a good reason — long-time protection of the Great Lakes," she said.

Techniques used to rectify the situation at the site have included pile consolidation and capping and creation of a new double lined landfill. The landfill was built in 1998 and sits on one of the old piles, acting as a cap.

It is double lined and will accommodate future cement kiln dust disposal needs. There is room for additional cells to be added to the landfill and Buckler said it has the capacity to accommodate the dust byproduct for decades.

She explained some cement manufacturers sell their kiln dust, which is used for soil stabilization. However, Cemex is "geographically hampered" in its ability to sell the dust — meaning its location doesn't facilitate creation of such a market.

She added that the sale of the dust would also lead to extra truck traffic to the site and because of these factors, Cemex administration decided, "keeping it in the landfill is the right thing to do."

Charlevoix's Manthei Development has completed excavation and relocation of former cement kiln dust piles four and eight which were consolidated with pile five and together now span 34 acres.

The consolidated pile is being capped with a high density polyethylene impermeable membrane to prevent percolation. Buckler said membrane building is 50 percent complete.

Once the cap is complete grass will be planted on the consolidated pile.

There is still water within the consolidated pile five, so an interception trench is being dug this week at its base, between Lake Michigan and Lakeshore Drive, to collect any water that may seep out. The collected water will then be monitored, treated and discharged to Lake Michigan in accordance with Cemex's discharge permit.

Workers have been laboring in 90 degree weather on this black surface to cap piles four, five and eight, which span over a 30 acre area. The cap will prevent further water percolation in the pile. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Cemex does use an intake valve from Lake Michigan. Buckler said the water is used for cooling and has limited contact with elements in the manufacturing process. This cooling water is also monitored and discharged.

Buckler said the last cleanup element is completing the cap on pile six.

Cemex has operated in Charlevoix since 1967 and currently employs 145 people.

New golf league kicks off season

The Charlevoix County Junior Golf Program's new wrinkle, the Sunshine League, kicked off its initial league competition with the Wolverine team posting a narrow two stroke win over the Bulldogs and the Chippewas.

The Spartans were four strokes off the pace.

Leading the way for the winners was Paul Salvatore with a 54, while his teammates all scored in the low 50s to help the cause.

Josh Wood of the Wolverines had the best score of all competitors with a 43, followed by Lor Powers of the Chippewas with a 44. Jason Jodway and Victor Rodgers both had 48s to round out the below 50 shooters.

Each Sunday evening the four teams will play at the Belvedere Golf Club. Players had to pass a written test and demonstrate good golf skills to be eligible for the Sunshine League.

The popular program has 192 registered and receives lessons from local professional instructions while playing at the Charlevoix Country Club, Dunmaglas Golf Course, Antrim Dells Golf Course, the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course and the Belvedere Golf Course.

SCRAPBOOK

Memories, new and old, of Charlevoix summers

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

A few days ago, we were driving down the side streets of Charlevoix and were remarking about how beautiful the homes and landscaping looked all over town. It is a very enjoyable treat to go through the neighborhoods and see what our residents are doing to beautify our community.

We may talk about the way things were in the good old days, but the way people have taken pride in their homes and yards is something to see and cherish today. Almost every home has flowers and the picket fences some have put up just add to the beauty of our city. We even cruised up some alleys and found the homeowners had planted lovely displays of flowers and shrubs along their backyards. How fortunate we are to have all the hometown pride in making things so beautiful.

The Venetian Festival will soon be here and under the guidance of Dan Barron and many others who are working hard to make it a great time for locals and vacationers, we end up with a wonderful long week with homecoming, spectacular fireworks, music groups, parades and just plain fun. This year, $75,000 is being spent on fireworks alone and watching this event is something unequaled most anywhere.

We have had fireworks ever since I was a little girl and though they were wonderful, there is no comparison to ours today. The fireworks used to be shot on Sunday night, at the foot of Prospect Street, next to the Chicago Club boathouse. Sometimes they would rain debris all over the nicely varnished decks of boats in the harbor.

Up until 1957, Frank Boss, Dale's second cousin, was on the council and he volunteered to head up Venetian festivities if he could change the day to Saturday night. He was a successful businessman and he pointed out the fact that the visitors in town, who lived in southern Michigan, had to get back to the city and had a seven hour run to their homes, rather than the four hour run today. He said we would have bigger crowds on Saturday, which proved to be true. As a Christian, he also felt Saturday would be better than Sunday. After trying the new day, everyone wanted to keep it that way.

On concert and weekend nights during the summer, we end up downtown, enjoying the throngs of people mulling up and down Bridge Street, talking with friends and making new friends. It's like being on vacation without leaving town. Kids, old and young, cruising the street in their favorite vehicle, and everyone eating ice cream cones, others dining on the sidewalk and the beautiful boats that anchor in Round Lake, all add to the atmosphere.

Last summer, while sitting on the street, we met a couple who had come in their jet just for the evening. In talking, we found he worked for Dale's uncle Oscar's engineering business in Howell, when they need an aerial surveyor. The couple had walked to town from the airport and later, we ended up taking them out to their plane. He showed us all his camera equipment and it was most interesting. It's been proven that if you make something beautiful, people will come to see it, and certainly our town fathers are doing that.

We have made various publications in the country with our beautification efforts in the past. The petunia truck was pictured in the Ford Times. There have been write-ups in the Detroit newspapers, including the infamous story of the marijuana plants we found in the petunia beds one year — a prank by one of the kids in town. The front page article was titled, "There's pot in the petunias in Charlevoix." There is a 100 page book written by Jerry Tobias a professor of education and human services at the University of Detroit. He enjoys writing books for young people and in his book titled, "Imma Flower," he wrote the following poem:

Imma Petunia from Charlevoix, Mich.;
I'm more popular than the local whitefish.
I color the city with purple and rose;
I think of myself as Charlevoix's clothes.
I'm a beautiful addition to the local landscape.
I fill window boxes and garden beds;
I border the streets with my heads.
I swing and sway about the ground;
I've been told that I make a sound.
Imma petunia or Charlevoix flower,
I give the city petunia power.

Bruce MacArthur found the book and gave it to us several years ago and we thought you might like this poem. Mr. Tobias has written over 11 books about various topics.

There is an old hymn of the church entitled, "Count your Blessings." The words are: "When upon life's billows you are tempest tossed, when you are discouraged, thinking all is lost, count your many blessings, name them one by one, and it will surprise you what the Lord hath done."

This is how we feel about life in Charlevoix, where the balmy winds blow over the channel, the sunsets are marvelous and the winters are a nice change from the summers, which we enjoy among our beautiful three lakes.

Venetian fun for all ages

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Venetian Festival attracts thousands of people hungry for fun and this year's entertainment packed, week-long celebration promises to satisfy every appetite.

The 72nd Annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival has it all — from sports, to music, to a carnival, to two nights of fireworks — every minute is filled with quality amusement options. And from sun up to sun down, July 21-27, town will be hopping.

The festival kicks off July 21 with Summer Slam Basketball at Lake Michigan Beach. Afternoon hoops will be followed by the first featured acts of the Rhythms of Venetian Music Festival: First Congregational Pilgrim Ringers of Charlevoix, SHOP urban gospel, Dave King's Elvis, Buskers Opera and Classic Jazz Stompers.

Then for six days straight from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m., live music in Bridge and East parks never stops, from big name jazz and blues acts to specialty sounds like the Jordan Valley Fiddler's Jamboree and Lil' Brian and the Zydeco Travelers — there are tunes for all tastes and ages.

There is also entertainment for all ages.

Low state funding hurts local schools

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Programs at Charlevoix Public Schools will stay intact for now but projections four years down the road reveal if more revenue doesn't come in cuts will be made.

"Revenues are uncertain with the state of the economy in Michigan. The way things are going now, we're fighting to get next year's $200 increase," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools, Dr. John Sturock, said. "My concern is what are things going to look like the following year. It's a long-term concern every district in Michigan is facing. Especially school districts like ours that operate on a fixed income. We can't maintain all our programs on what the state is giving us."

He explained with the recession the state is facing, sales tax is down and those dollars are earmarked for schools, so the money isn't coming in at the state level either.

Sturock said the school district is "absolutely" in a good financial situation now with its established general fund equity balance of $3.9 million. But this year $565,000 will be drawn from that fund equity to keep all current programs up and running.

"But we can't keep going to the well because one day the well

Music, crafts fill East Park

Over 200 crafters and musicians showed off their skills at last weekend's Craft Show in East Park. Charlevoix sheriff does not use phone solicitation

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is reminding residents not to get involved with law enforcement telephone solicitation.

According to Sheriff George T. Lasater, his office receives approximately five calls a week from a business person or senior citizen in Charlevoix County who has been contacted by someone over the telephone, who indicates they are soliciting for law enforcement.

The caller usually states the proceeds will benefit local law enforcement and many times they use the name of local departments and the name of the sheriff.

Lasater said he appreciates that citizens want to support their police agencies, but added these telephone solicitations are, on the whole, of no benefit to your local law enforcement agencies.

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office supports the Michigan Sheriff's Association and all contacts are made in person or by mail with a letter of introduction from Lasater on department letterhead.

"In summary, a good policy to follow is not to get involved with law enforcement telephone solicitation. If you have a question, feel free to contact me personally," Lasater said.

The sheriff can be contacted by calling (231) 547-4461.

Park plans presented to public for input

> "From this meeting, we'll take what we see and hear and digest it."
> Peter Pollack, East Park designer

In preparation for Tuesday's park public input meeting Charlevoix residents spent time last week visiting city council chambers at city hall where they studied bright penciled drawings of what some day could be Charlevoix's East Park.

"From this meeting we'll take what we see and hear and digest it. If we're fortunate we'll come away with a single clear direction. But we're in Charlevoix to hear people in the community, not to vote on a scheme," said Peter Pollack, principal engineer with Pollack Design Associates — the Ann Arbor park planners who drafted the design alternatives.

Results of the meeting were not available by press time, but Pollack said his firm is still engaged on the learning curve and no final decisions will be made at the meeting. Instead, the public comments will send the Pollack firm back to the drawing board.

He described the park as an urban plaza, a place of rest, with entertainment and activities; all of which he attempted to accommodate in the plans.

The drawings are the fruits of one year of contemplation, that included six weeks of intensive sketching and design. The plans include everything from trout ponds, to entertainment venues to promenades and piers.

But they don't currently include boats and docks.

"The focus is on the land," Pollack said.

After the single land plan has been decided and refined, which could be as early as Aug. 5, park planning will be put on the back burner while Pollack's team moves to marina planning.

A public input meeting for the marina, similar to the December public input meeting for East Park renovations, is tentatively scheduled for July 31. A similar public input meeting to view Pollack drafted marina alternatives is tentatively scheduled for the middle of September.

The final product which will incorporate both the marina and the park will help develop the "overall master plan for the downtown public open space."

Pollack said the goal of his team was to create a park plan that takes advantage of the entire park space from Bridge Park, near the intersections of Park Avenue and Bridge Street, to Veteran's Park, three city blocks away.

The plans are alternatives and have both similarities and differences. While most of the structures — Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce, marina facilities and an entertainment venue — in both plans are similar, their location varies.

Pollack said having the musi-

The traffic is here so take your time

EDITORIAL

Venetian Festival is just around the corner and with it is thousands of visitors to downtown Charlevoix and traffic congestion.

It is inevitable that vehicles will be backed up on both sides of Bridge Street, pedestrians will walk into the street pretty much anywhere and frustrations will be high. With so many people packed into a small location such as downtown Charlevoix, there are bound to be some issues.

The Venetian Festival is a fun week-long event that many people from all over the state and country want to enjoy. Therefore, the throngs will come as they have every year before, bringing with them the same old problems.

Traffic ambassadors helping pedestrians cross the street, differently timed traffic lights at Bridge and Clinton streets or even strict jaywalking enforcement are not going to help ease any traffic/pedestrian problems we will face during this time.

Simply put, with so many people, there is not much we can do about the traffic situation during Venetian Festival, so we are just going to have to learn to live with it.

When traveling through town during Venetian Festival, please remember to give yourself plenty of time to get to your destination. There is no need to hurry because you are not going to get across town quickly anyway.

Also, please keep your temper in check. When frustrations run high, driving ability seems to lessen. Add to this mix various pedestrians who seem to appear in the middle of the street and you have an unsafe situation.

Sure the traffic isn't moving, but look on the bright side — at least you have some time to relax while listening to tunes from your car stereo or enjoy the beautiful scenery in and around Charlevoix.

Protection of rain forests is important for everyone

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

For a botanist who doesn't live in the tropics, the mid-summer abundance of growth that we see around us in Michigan is the best of times.

One need only imagine our flourishing green multiplied by about 100 to have a sense of what the tropical regions of the world hold. Or maybe we should say held, since no part of the biological world is being removed at a pace like that seen in the tropics.

In 1848, Alfred Russel Wallace and Henry Walter Bates were among the first Europeans to visit the then vast expanses of the Amazon Valley in South America. Wallace spent four years in the Amazon collecting plants and animals and thinking about what he saw. Bates was traveling and thinking there for a total of 11 years.

Bates collected and sent back to England almost 15,000 different kinds of animals, 8,000 of which were unknown to science before he collected them. That is two kinds of animals never before seen in Europe for each day Bates spent in the Amazon.

On a good day he probably collected 20 or 30 different kinds he had never seen before. Most of the Amazon basin for 1,000 miles in all directions was covered at that time with almost continuous forest of a sort that is hard to appreciate from Michigan. With all its variety, the whole state of Michigan has about 2,500 different kinds of plants, only a few hundred of them trees. Wallace and Bates walked through forests that had as many as 300 different kinds of trees on a single acre and 10 times that many other kinds of plants.

As the world's tropical forests are cut and turned to other uses, it is probable that more kinds of tropical plants become extinct in a year that exist in all of Michigan.

Why worry about any of that? It is difficult to find personally compelling reasons to worry about the world's tropical forests. They provide us, who are not in the tropical world, with useful timber and wood products. When they are cut down they can provide pasturage for cattle that turn up in our inexpensive, fast-food burgers.

Most of the reasons for saving tropical forests sound vague and uncertain. The forests remove enormous amounts of carbon dioxide and convert it into wood and fiber. Global warming is not a political ploy — it is real and is approaching at a pace we don't completely understand. By analogy, the tropical forests are a part of the world's lungs and the destruction of them produce the equivalent of global emphysema. Carbon dioxide accumulates as it does in the lungs of a lifetime smoker.

Wallace and Bates, who first explored the Amazon forests for the civilized parts of the world, understood their importance 150 years ago. They were not just the source of products, but of ideas.

All the important thoughts about natural selection and evolution were formulated by biologists traveling in the tropics. It is unlikely that anyone could have developed the theory of evolution in England or in Michigan. There is just not enough variety of organisms. What undiscovered ideas still exist in the tropics, waiting for a ready mind to explain them to us all? We don't know, but we could bet they are there.

If you find new ideas of importance, maybe that is reason enough to help preserve the world's plant and animal diversity. Next time you look at and think about the lush green of summer in Michigan, recall the forests of Wallace and Bates.

Important ideas are precious and rare, more rare than any plant or animal.

Congratulations to Charlevoix City Council

Editor:

Congratulations to the leadership of Charlevoix for having the foresight to build a new sidewalk on the north side of Belvedere Avenue as part of the new street and utility improvements. The sidewalk is a major improvement for the citizens of Charlevoix in many ways especially for safety purposes.

When the lights are installed and the grass has regrown, it will even be more attractive. The two new owner-built waterfalls along the sidewalk enhance the pleasure of this walk.

Thanks to our city leaders who voted for this project. Thanks to the many men and women who labored through many obstacles to make it happen. The completed project will enhance the reputation of Charlevoix as a beautiful city.

Dreams of school comedy

Editor:

Have you dreamed so vividly that the dreams seemed real? I rode such wild and comic nightmares and stallions lately. I dreamed the Charlevoix School District decided to build a new high school in a cornfield outside of town. They reasoned that since a lot of kids lived outside of town, the school should be centered in that area. But just to tile a large section of the town they would call it Charlevoix High School instead of Charlevoix Area High School. Since it was in the country, you'd think they'd put in a septic system. But in my dream, they thought, "Hey, let's run a sewer line out from town. It'll be cheap 'cuz we can make it big enough for folks building houses near the school for its convenience, to tap right in, for a price."

Well, in my dream you see, to make it a better story, here come a bunch of folks saying, "Hold on, one time, partners. You can't do this, the law don't allow it." Well, the good old boys didn't pay that no mind at all. You see they wanted that sewer. So, they said, "Heck we'll build us a sewer that'll make them kiddies flush with pride." Of course it turned out that the sewer was illegal 'cuz the school can't use its dollars to pay for something it didn't even own. Ain't this a good dream I was havin'?

Now, I ain't sure about this next part, 'cuz my dream kept being interrupted by anti-septic thoughts, but as near as I can recall, the local citizens stepped up to remedy the fecal foul-up. Drenth Excavating dug pits for outhouses, Wolohan's gave lumber for privies and the PTA painted them up. They had a boys' and a girls' outhouse painted in the school colors of each of the schools Charlevoix competed with in sports. Naturally, the team the Rayders would play next could expect to get heavy use just before game time as spirits ran high.

Well, things couldn't go on like this, so in the next part of my dream, the city, lo and behold, not to mention hallelujah, discovered, some law just in the nick of time that said just what they needed it to say. (This is called the "deus ex machina" in drama; and that's what my dream was, comic drama.) The law said, "Heck, good old boys, you can just give ownership to the sewer to the school." So, "Happy, happy ending." The sewer was continued and every kid in school flushed with pride forever after.

Wasn't that a funny dream I had?

But then I woke up to discover that the school was called Charlevoix Area High School, which everyone could agree made sense due to the bulk of the kids coming from out of town and they built a real good septic system since it was a country school anyway and the whole thing was so matter of fact, downright sensible that I fell asleep reading about it. Longing for the comedic farce I remembered the city good old boys and the stubborn old school board had provided me in my hilarious dream.

Work with residents

Editor:

Turbines or mobile home park? Mr. Dawson Way claims he heard the "naysayers" as he calls people who have a different point of view, say they would rather have high density housing than windmills. So if that's what they want, then he's willing to oblige them? Mr. Way and others only heard the word "housing."

In all the discussions taken place in the audience at the township board and planning commission meetings the Ways retort, "would you rather have houses," when the audience pledged to stop WTGs (wind turbine generators) on those parcels. The answer that some folks gave as yes was based on current farm and forest zoning, the limited split of acreage for single residential housing and the questionable ability of the land to perk. So when a few said, "yes" it was out of anger and based on current circumstances.

The question wasn't, "How would you like it rezoned for a mobile home park and bring in the city sewer from Loeb Road?" The answer to that of course would be no. If the Ways believe they are trying to make peace in the neighborhood in a township where they don't live, then perhaps they should form a neighborhood committee and ask us to assist them in researching all possible uses and ask what we are willing to live with since we are the residents who live by that property.

I urge the Eveline Township Board members and the planning commission members to proceed based on what is best for the residents and the township as a whole. Eveline Township residents — attend the board meetings and planning commission meetings. Your input is needed in planning the future of our township.

Too high of an increase

Editor:

I would like to address a concern that was brought to my attention in a recent Petoskey News-Review regarding the season ticket prices for sporting events at the high school.

I can appreciate the need to raise the cost of tickets. I have no doubt that there are other schools that charge more than we do for tickets. However, it does seem as though the parents, our Charlevoix parents, the true supporters of our teams will be paying way too high a price. I can see an increase of $10 or even $20 a family, but a $50 increase is just too much.

I would like the school board to consider raising the price of tickets "at the gate/door." By increasing those ticket prices, the visitors' fans and those without a season pass would be paying more. If our current ticket prices are so much less expensive than other schools, we could increase on gate/door prices significantly without difficulty. This would also be beneficial to the Charlevoix families.

Please consider these possibilities. It would be a shame to lose family support because the tickets are too costly. Frankly, I don't feel the need to compete with other schools at the ticket booth. Let's keep the competition where it should be. Let's think about our true supporters.

As a result of popular demand, one of Chicago, Ill., most renowned gospel choirs will be returning to Charlevoix's Venetian Festival.

The SHOP Choir will bring their spiritual message and music starting at 7 p.m., July 21 in East Park as the opening of the Rhythms of Venetian Music Festival.

The SHOP Choir will additionally provide area residents and visitors a view of their performance on the eve of the Venetian Festival. The choir will be participating in a contemporary worship service at 6:57 p.m., July 20 at the Community Reformed Church of Charlevoix.

The SHOP Choir director and founder, L'André Patterson, organized the group in 1989 amongst the patrons of his beauty shop, hence the original name "Shop Choir." The choir members, along with a six piece band, have since elevated their music ministry and their name had been changed to "SHOP," which means "Shout Hallelujah on Purpose."

Prior to the performance in East Park, the Rev. Todd Thompson of the United Methodist Church in Charlevoix will deliver an invocation and the First Congregational Bell Ringers of Charlevoix will provide a cameo performance.

After the choir's performance at Venetian Festival, a Las Vegas "Elvis" Revue will take the stage. Additionally, music will also be in Bridge Park that evening, with performances by Buskers Opera from Torch Lake and the Classic Jazz Stompers from Dayton, Ohio.

Board considers raising season ticket prices

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Budget concerns have prompted Charlevoix High School Athletic Director Jim Kanine to propose an increase in the price of individual and family athletic event passes.

"I'm not against giving the people in the community a great deal, but I know the district will be going through tough times budget wise. This is one way we can fund our programs," Kanine said. "As a season ticket holder, I would rather pay $75, but as the athletic department head I would rather have enough money to run the athletic department."

The price of a family pass under the proposed increase would go up $45 to $120. The price of a student pass would increase $10 to $30 and the price of a single adult pass would increase $25 to $65. Individual ticket prices are not included in the proposal; at this time they will remain $4.

He said it has been a few years since pass costs have been increased and explained he is a family pass holder and he along with four of his family members attended 17 games last year. At $4 a ticket per person, the Kanine family's athletic outings would have cost $340, but with the pass everyone went for $75.

He said this scenario shows that even if the change is made, "a family pass is still going to be a savings."

In April, Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock told administrators in each of the three schools that a long-range look at education budgets statewide reveals a bleak picture.

While Charlevoix sits on a sizable surplus and this year, the district is receiving more state funding than last year, school board president Allen Telgenhof said the increase was less percentage wise than it had been in previous years.

He described Sturock's warning as one of caution, not concern, but the future is still uncertain and Kanine's proposal aims to increase certainty for Charlevoix High School athletics.

"I think it's time look at us competitively with other schools. What he's proposing is not out of whack," Telgenhof said. "The athletic program is not self supporting. And an increase is a way for us to lose less money. Athletics is something we're providing for our students, it's not a money making proposition. I don't think it's asking a lot. It may be a burden for some people, but for the most part an increase is probably overdue."

The high school athletic budget for 2002-2003 estimates revenues to be $277,400 and expenses at $264,700. However, over $200,000 of the revenue comes from the school's operating budget.

The primary ticket sale revenue comes from boys' basketball which is projected to bring in $20,000 and season ticket pass holders which bring in $16,000.

Kanine said in Harbor Springs Public Schools this year athletics will be operated on the "pay to play" budget. In Boyne City schedules are being cut back to reduce costs by decreasing bus trips. He said Charlevoix isn't immediately facing either prospect, but that doesn't mean it never will.

"I'm concerned financially, we're not in dire straights; the board supports the athletic programs wonderfully, but you never know when that will go away. I'm trying to make sure the athletic department stays where it is financially," Kanine said.

He added that there are also several unforeseen items that may be needed when the high school makes the move to the new Marion Center Road site. He said unknown needs may include an ice machine, weight room enhancements a soccer field scoreboard or big title win flags for the gym. He has no way to pay for these non-budgeted items.

If the school board accepts the proposal at its August meeting, Charlevoix's prices, which are currently the lowest in the conference, would still be under those of Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis.

"If they accept the increase at the next meeting, Charlevoix would be in the middle of the pack, which I feel is fair," Kanine said.

Next year there will be 55 home athletic contests that the school charges for. These include soccer and wrestling matches, volleyball, boys' and girls' basketball and football games. The school doesn't charge at baseball games or track meets.

The board meeting at which this issue will be on the table is scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., Aug. 12 in the media center at Charlevoix Elementary School located off Division Street in Charlevoix.

School officers remain the same

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix School Board officers in the seats of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer, remain unchanged after all members were re-elected to their positions by fellow board members at the July 8 meeting.

Allen Telgenhof, who has been on the school board for eight years, was unanimously re-elected to the position of school board president.

Telgenhof has been president of the board since 1997 and said being re-elected by his fellow board members is an honor.

"The reason I'm part of the school board is to serve the community. (Being board president is) something people pick you for and it's a real honor in respect to the challenging time we have had," Telgenhof said.

Larry Levengood was re-elected board secretary and Barney Way was re-elected board treasurer, a position he has had for six years.

The only contested seat was that of vice president, a position held by Marion Township resident Ardeth Wieland.

School board trustee Dennis Halverson nominated fellow trustee Scott Boss. Halverson's nomination was supported by trustee Mike MacMillan, but the other five board votes in favor of Wieland decided she would retain the seat.

These school board positions are decided annually.

Big Rock closer to shipping fuel to Yucca

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The United States Senate has approved a storage facility in Nevada that will house all of the nuclear waste in the country, including waste stored at Big Rock Point on US-31 north in Hayes Township.

Tim Petrosky

On July 9, the senate voted 60-39 to approve Yucca Mountain in Nevada as a nuclear waste storage facility. Michigan senator Carl Levin voted in favor of the site, while senator Debbie Stabenow voted against it.

According to Tim Petrosky, public affairs director of Big Rock Point, this vote was one of "scientific research overcoming political pressure."

"While it was overwhelmingly passed in the House of Representatives, we knew the senate vote was going to be close. We were not going to take anything for granted," he said.

The Yucca Mountain site has been the subject of study for over 20 years, but the issue has been a controversial one. Various groups debated the safety of the facility and, most recently, the safety of transporting nuclear waste to the facility from the nuclear power plants across the nation.

"I wish that everybody that had doubts about the site would visit the site (Yucca Mountain)," Petrosky said. "If there is a better place on earth, I cannot imagine it."

Petrosky argues people should not be worried about the safety of transporting nuclear waste to Yucca Mountain.

He said the nuclear industry has made 3,000 shipments in the past 30 years, using containers designed to withstand accidents. In fact, Petrosky said, there have been eight accidents in those 30 years, but none of them resulted in the release of radiation.

With Yucca Mountain, the Department of Energy will be coordinating with every state and agency that will have nuclear shipments passing through it. Petrosky added these states will also have input on which route the shipment will take and each shipment will be tracked by satellites.

Petrosky stressed this vote in the senate does not necessarily mean that Yucca Mountain will be a storage facility now, it only moves the site on to the licensing phase by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which will include further studies.

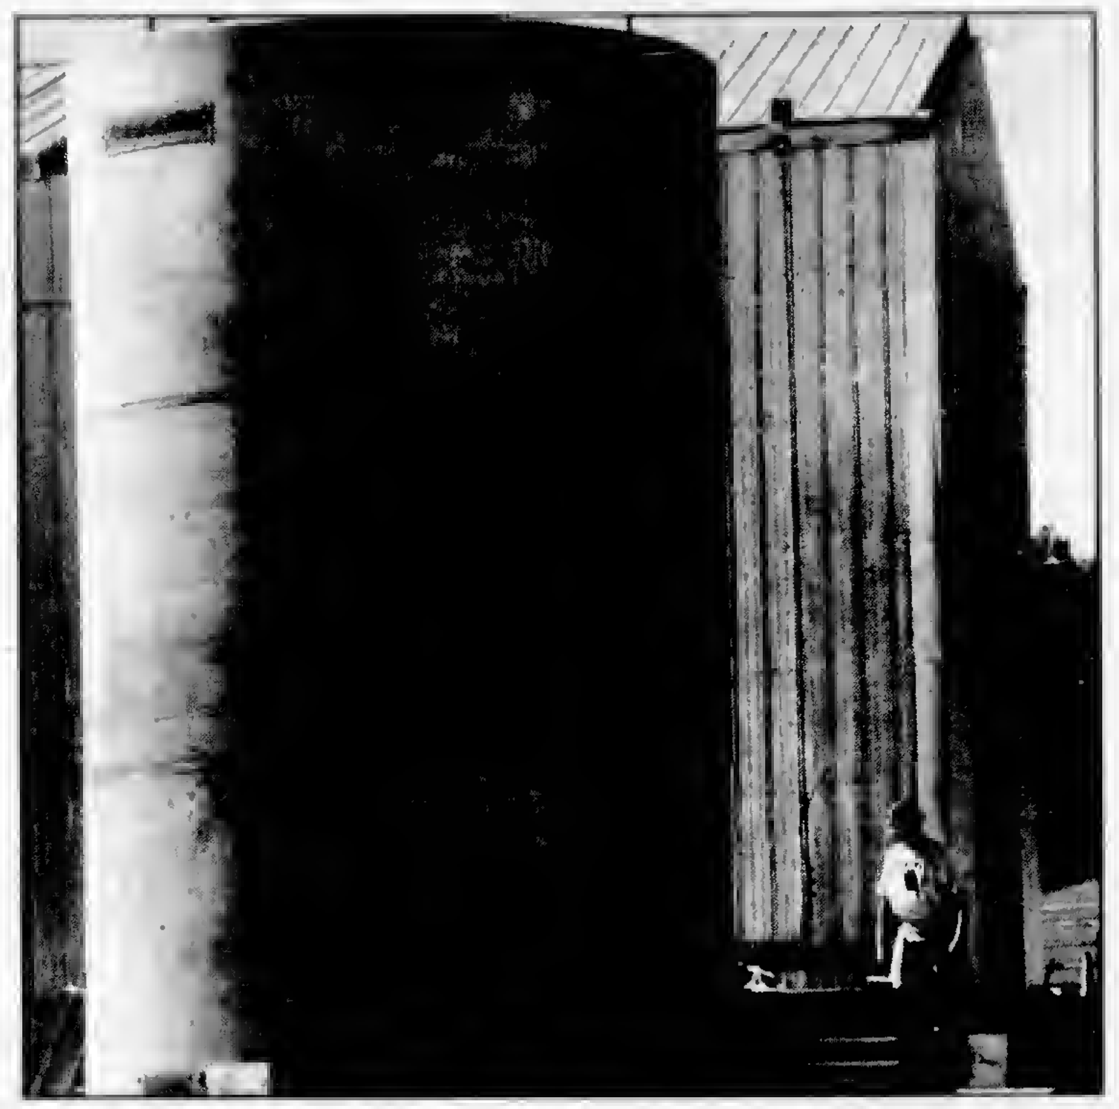
This means Yucca Mountain could end up not even getting this license.

When, and if, Yucca Mountain is ultimately approved, Petrosky said fuel will begin to be shipped off of the Big Rock site in 2010.

Until then, the fuel will be stored in containment casks on a dry fuel storage pad near the plant. This pad will be the only aspect left of the Big Rock Plant after 2004.

Petrosky said if the senate had not voted in favor of the Yucca Mountain plan, the Big Rock site in Hayes Township would have become a permanent storage area for the nuclear waste.

"There is no backup at this point," he said.



This cask is just one of the containers for spent nuclear fuel at Big Rock. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Charlevoix boy honored with Eagle Scout title

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Dan Jadwin has reached the highest scout title with the Boy Scouts of America, the coveted Eagle Scout.

"Every scout's goal is to be an eagle scout," Jadwin said as he explained his scouting history.

But his dream of becoming an eagle gained strength two years ago. While he couldn't pinpoint exactly what prompted his quest for the title, he did say it's a relief to finally have accomplished his goal.

Jadwin's Troop 11 Scout Leader Tim May said the eagle honor is awarded to scouts who exhibit exceptional leadership and organizational capabilities.

"A small percentage ever make it to eagle; they're like the cream of the crop," he said.

Now after nine years of scouting and perseverance, Jadwin joins the eagle crop.

He said the greatest challenge in his race for eagle status was the final leg — the project. May explained "the project" is designed to test a scout's ability to oversee and supervise major undertakings.

Jadwin's project was set in familiar surroundings, the great outdoors. He spent almost two years planning and only eight hours executing an extensive trail maintenance operation in East Jordan's Jordan Valley in conjunction with the Charlevoix County Land Conservancy. On June 25, he oversaw and supervised 10 individuals getting the trail in shape.

May said Jadwin's project exhibited the two qualities inherent in any eagle — leadership and organization. He said these qualities are taught throughout the scouting program and act as building blocks for this final step.

Thus far, Jadwin has earned 21 merit badges, 11 of which are required of eagle scouts and 10 others from various past pursuits.

While eagle is the highest scouting title, reaching it doesn't mean Jadwin's scouting days are over. Now, for every five merit badges he accumulates, Jadwin will earn a "palm." The palms reach from bronze, to gold and finally to silver status.

He is currently working toward the bronze palm. Once he has received 20 merit awards he can wear a bronze and silver palm at the same time.

If he doesn't reach 20 palm status before his eighteenth birthday in June of 2003, when life as a scout officially ends, he still always wears the knot — the mark of an eagle scout — recognized and revered nationally.

"Once you become an eagle scout you're an eagle for life; it is something you carry with you, it's the only rank that carries that distinction," May said.

May said the many years of scouting Jadwin has participated in combine to give him a myriad of personal resources to draw from in his daily life and for his future.

He said once the eagle scout ventures into the private world of college and career development, eagle status equates to a great resume builder.

"It shows they can complete a task and are at the top of the group; it's almost as important as listing valedictorian," he said.

He added that eagle scouts who enlist in the military are given raises in pay and rank just by being an eagle scout.

Troop 11 has had five eagle scouts in the last 10 years and May said he expects there to be three or four more before the end of the scouting year. Troop 11 currently has a total of 25 scouts ages 11-17.

"Everybody in my troop has witnessed someone becoming an eagle scout and I think it carries through the troop to see it — a lot of guys want it now. They've seen it happen, they've sat through ceremonies and participated and it has meaning now," May said.

Jadwin's Eagle Scout Recognition Ceremony took place June 9. He was given his eagle patch and various pins, plaques and certificates.

Those interested in joining the Boy Scouts of America or inquiring about its services can contact the council office in Traverse City at (231) 938-2200.

Board of Appeals rules in Ways' favor

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Another attempt to keep a wind monitoring tower off the property of Dawson Way in Eveline Township was squashed last week paving the way for tower construction.

The Eveline Township Zoning Board of Appeals unanimously ruled July 11 it didn't have jurisdiction to hear an appeal of a final special use permit decision made by the township board.

The appeals board includes its chairman, planning commission member Chris Carson and Eveline Township residents Lynn Herrimann and Harold Johnson.

Carson said it based the motion on two factors: First, an appeal of a special land use permit is not provided for in the township zoning ordinance. And second, while the zoning ordinance does provide for appeal of special use permit decisions made by the planning commission, the planning commission's decision about the permit is only advisory and thus isn't "ripe for appeal."

The township planning commission unanimously recommended approval of Smiley's permit request to the township board in early May.

The appeal in question was entered by Eveline Township residents John and Nancy Cisne, just minutes after the township board's June 11 decision to grant Steve Smiley, president of Bay Windpower in Suttons Bay, his request for a special use permit to construct a monitoring tower near Brock and Ferry roads.

The appeal claimed the proposed special use permit does not satisfy standards set forth in the township zoning ordinance.

But, regardless of the claim, the appeals board said the matter was out of its hands. And Carson said if this is an appeal the Cisnes wish to pursue further, they'll have to do it before a circuit court judge.

Smiley said Bay Windpower representatives will meet this week to discuss the tower construction timeline.

Smiley's wind tower will extend 164 feet into the air, with a three foot lighting rod reaching up from the top of the 6 inch pipe. It will monitor wind speeds in and around the property of Dawson Way, near Ferry and Brock roads, to determine its viability for wind turbine generators there and at a nearby horse farm owned by Eveline Township resident Ralph Richardson.

In spite of all the setbacks, including a six month delay in approval of his special use permit request, Smiley plans to continue working toward having wind turbine generators located on the Way and Richardson properties.

"As you can imagine, my partners and I aren't happy about anything to do with how the Eveline Township project has gone. But we plan to keep moving slowly. The main thing from my standpoint is we have an obligation to the landowners who own the property where they want windmills," Smiley said.

But windmills being placed on the Eveline Township properties is a hot topic of debate and litigation.

In early May, the Cisnes filed the suit against the township alleging their constitutional rights have been violated and the township planning commission and board acted on an invalid zoning ordinance. Since then, several others have joined the suit.

The group is asking Charlevoix County Circuit Court Judge Richard Pajtas to declare the township zoning ordinance invalid and to grant them injunctive relief which would prevent the township from conducting hearings and other proceedings under the ordinance.

The ordinance amendment they are refuting was adopted on Oct. 9, 2001 by the township board. It allows wind turbine electricity generators to be constructed in certain zoning districts of the township, with a special use permit.

Mark Bickel, the township's Traverse City attorney from the firm Hovie and Smith, filed a response to the lawsuit. A scheduling conference has been set for Aug. 12.

The township planning commission is currently in the process of revising the zoning ordinance.

Swimmers' itch found in local lakes

Cases of "swimmers' itch" have been reported in the area and the local health department is informing the public about measures they can take to eliminate or reduce exposure to the skin rash.

"Swimmers' itch is a skin rash caused by certain parasites of birds and mammals," Joshua Meyerson, M.D., Medical Director of the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency, said.

He explained that birds, snails and parasitic worms are linked together in a very complex relationship.

Parasites are released from infected snails and migrate through waters used for swimming. People who swim or wade in infested water may experience the itching rash. Children are often infected since they typically wade in the water and play on the beach as the water evaporates from their skin.

Meyerson explained parasites may enter the skin of bathers or swimmers in different ways.

"Some penetrate while the individual is swimming, while other species appear to enter only after the person has emerged from the water. In any event, entry is sometimes felt as a dull, prickly and itchy sensation," he said.

A victim's first exposure to infested water may not result in the itchy rash. Repeated exposure increases sensitivity to the parasite and increases the likelihood of rash development.

In sensitized individuals, a small reddened area will develop at the entrance site of each parasite. After 24 hours, the reddened areas reach their largest size.

Swimmers who have repeated exposures may see an increase in the size of the affected areas, especially if aggravated by persistent and intense itching.

Intermittent periods of itching will continue for several days. The victim suffers the most during the first four or five days after exposure. After a week, the itching and reddened areas usually disappear, leaving a spot that resembles a small bruise.

Those exposed to swimmers' itch should contact their physician or health care provider when the diagnosis is unclear, complications such as infection are present or the reaction is intensely itchy and intolerable. Treatment is available for relief of the itching and secondary infection.

Meyerson said several measures can be followed to eliminate or reduce the problem.

First, avoid situations that encourage birds to remain in areas where people frequent the water. Feeding birds should be strongly discouraged.

Second, some species of snails deposit their eggs on concrete walls or on rocks that have been used as rip-rap to prevent shoreline erosion. The rocks serve as a base for snail eggs and protect against wave action. Meyerson suggests avoiding exposure to these rocks.

Third, it appears that most swimmers come in contact with parasites while swimming on the eastern and southern side of lake shores. Parasites of some species float to the surface of the water and drift with the wind to the shore. Because winds in Michigan are often westerly or northerly, people get the parasites on eastern and southern shores.

Lastly, it should be noted that children who continually go in and out of the shallow water often get heavy cases of swimmers' itch. Continuous swimming or wading along the shore should be avoided because large numbers of parasites can accumulate there.

A final and effective preventative measure for combating swimmers' itch is immediate and thorough toweling off after leaving the water. Floating parasites are sticky and attach to the body as the bather leaves the water.

"When emerging from the water, the parasite enters the skin as the body air-dries. By immediately and thoroughly toweling off, you can help prevent the parasite from entering the skin," Dr. Meyerson said.

For more information, contact your health care provider or local health department.

Battle of the Bands to have many locals

Overwhelming interest in the "Rayder Battle of the Bands" has prompted Venetian organizers to close the field of contestants and establish an earlier starting time for the music slugfest.

As a result, the competition will kick off at 7 p.m. July 23 in Bridge Park

Five rock and blues bands comprised of student musicians from Charlevoix High School and Northwest Academy will vie for the $250 cash prize and bragging rites as the top "up and coming" band in Charlevoix.

Performances will be judged by local musicians.

The groups competing for honors are: What's the Point?, Subject to Change, ScotcH Coat, Pluto's Mine and Down Shift. Weaving Peter, comprised of Charlevoix High School graduates, now living in Kalamazoo will round out the Tuesday evening concerts in Bridge Park..

CONSIDERING TAKING ACTION IN REAL ESTATE?

"I have parked myself in front of a streaming real time quote machine nearly every working day for the past ten years, both in New York and here in Charlevoix. Investing in stocks can be rewarding, thrilling and recently, terrifying and brutally painful. The idea of investing, of course, is to maximize gain and minimize risk."

"Although risk is ever present in any investment, Real Estate may provide some advantages. According to the National Association of Realtors, the purchase of a median home appreciated at an annualized rate of 20.5% over the past three years! And, unlike capital gains realized in stock transactions, the current tax rules, as it pertains to gains from the sale of your main home, have allowed many who qualify exclusions from $250,000 to $500,000!"

"Additionally, it is no secret that some locations here in Northern Michigan are among the most desirable in the world! Just a little nudge in case you are thinking of doing something...and if you are thinking of buying or selling Real Estate in our beautiful little area, give me a call!

Bellairs returns from tour with Blue Lake jazz

Carolyn Bellairs has just returned to Charlevoix from a three-week tour with some of the best young jazz musicians in the Midwest.

Bellairs, who will begin her senior year at Northwest Academy, in Charlevoix, traveled to Switzerland, Denmark, Germany, Austria and France with the Blue Lake International Jazz Band, from the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp, near Muskegon. Carolyn is the daughter of Bob and Jenny Bellairs of Charlevoix.

Bellairs' journey actually began a year ago, when she attended a Blue Lake Camp session for jazz band. Playing the baritone-saxophone (bari-sax), she was placed in the top "Gold" Jazz Band, which gave her a good indication of her chances of making the international group. During the session she auditioned for the International Jazz Band and she was informed of her acceptance into the group in September.

Only two bari-sax players are selected for international groups each year, one for the jazz group and one for the symphony band. During the school year there were three group practices in November, April and May. Musicians were expected to practice the music on their own in preparation for these rehearsals.

On June 7, Bellairs left home for "Intensive Week" at Blue Lake Camp. For one week, the band practiced extensively and the musicians were schooled on the customs of each of the countries they were to visit. After playing a farewell concert for parents and family June 14, the group left for Europe.

The very busy three-week tour included 10 stops, where the members stayed with host families. Four of these destinations were in France, three were in Germany, two in Austria and one in Denmark. The group was also able to see Switzerland on their way to and from the Zurich airport. The tired, but happy group arrived in Chicago July 6.

Musical travels are nothing new for Bellairs.

In 1999 she traveled to Europe with the Blue Lake International Symphonic Band. And as a member of the Northwest Academy Jazz Band she has traveled to Toronto, Chicago, Denver and Essex, England.

She has also been chosen twice to play flute in the District 2 Honors Band.

Northwest Academy Band Director Gary Stutzman is proud of her accomplishments.

"Carolyn's consistency, accuracy and musicality have anchored our jazz and concert bands these past five years. And we are proud to see her recognized through membership in the International Jazz Band," Stutzman said.

Residents of northern Michigan will be able to hear this outstanding band under the direction of Dr. Brian Coyle, Director of Jazz Studies at Hope College in Holland, when it visits Northern Michigan July 26-29. They will perform during the Venetian Festival at 7 p.m., July 27 in Bridge Park. Then, at 8 p.m., July 28 they will perform in the bandshell in Mackinaw City.

This marks the second year this band has performed in these communities.

The 2001 Blue Lake International Jazz Band which featured Carolyn's twin sister, Rachel, also visited Charlevoix and Mackinaw City.

Danish band to perform next week at Venetian

The Danish Lyngby-Taarback Youth Concert Band and Youth Brass Band, a group of young musicians from Virum, Denmark, will be visiting northern Michigan as part of the Blue Lake Fine Arts Camp International Exchange Program and the Charlevoix Venetian Festival.

The concert band, which was established five years ago, has 23 musicians, while the brass band, which started six years ago, has 12 musicians. All players are between 13 and 18 years of age. The two groups are under the direction of Robert Bang Jensen, instructor of the school orchestra program at the Lyngby-Taarback Music School, which is 10 km outside of Copenhagen.

In addition to this trip to northern Michigan, the bands have also traveled to Germany in 2000 and Greenland in 1997.

The Blue Lake International Exchange Program was established in 1969 and is dedicated to the promotion of friendship, goodwill and understanding through cultural exchange and the universal language of the arts. Each summer, select Blue Lake campers perform in some of the most famous sites in Europe.

In exchange for hosting a Blue Lake group, the camp will arrange a two-week Michigan tour for a performing group from the European host community. Christy Trudeau, a student at Northwest Academy in Charlevoix was recently a guest of this group when she toured Europe with Blue Lake's 2002 International Symphony Band in June.

The Concert and Brass bands will arrive in Charlevoix from Grayling July 23 and will be staying until July 26 when they will travel to South Lyon in southeast Michigan. Members and adult staff will stay in private homes while visiting Charlevoix.

According to Jenny Bellairs, chairman of a committee that is making arrangements for the group's visit, host families are still needed. Contact Bellairs at (231) 547-6255 if your family can host a couple of students.

The Lyngby-Taarback Concert and Brass bands will perform at 7:30 p.m., July 25 during Charlevoix's Venetian Festival in Bridge Park. In case of bad weather the concert will take place at the United Methodist Church, 101 State Street in Charlevoix.

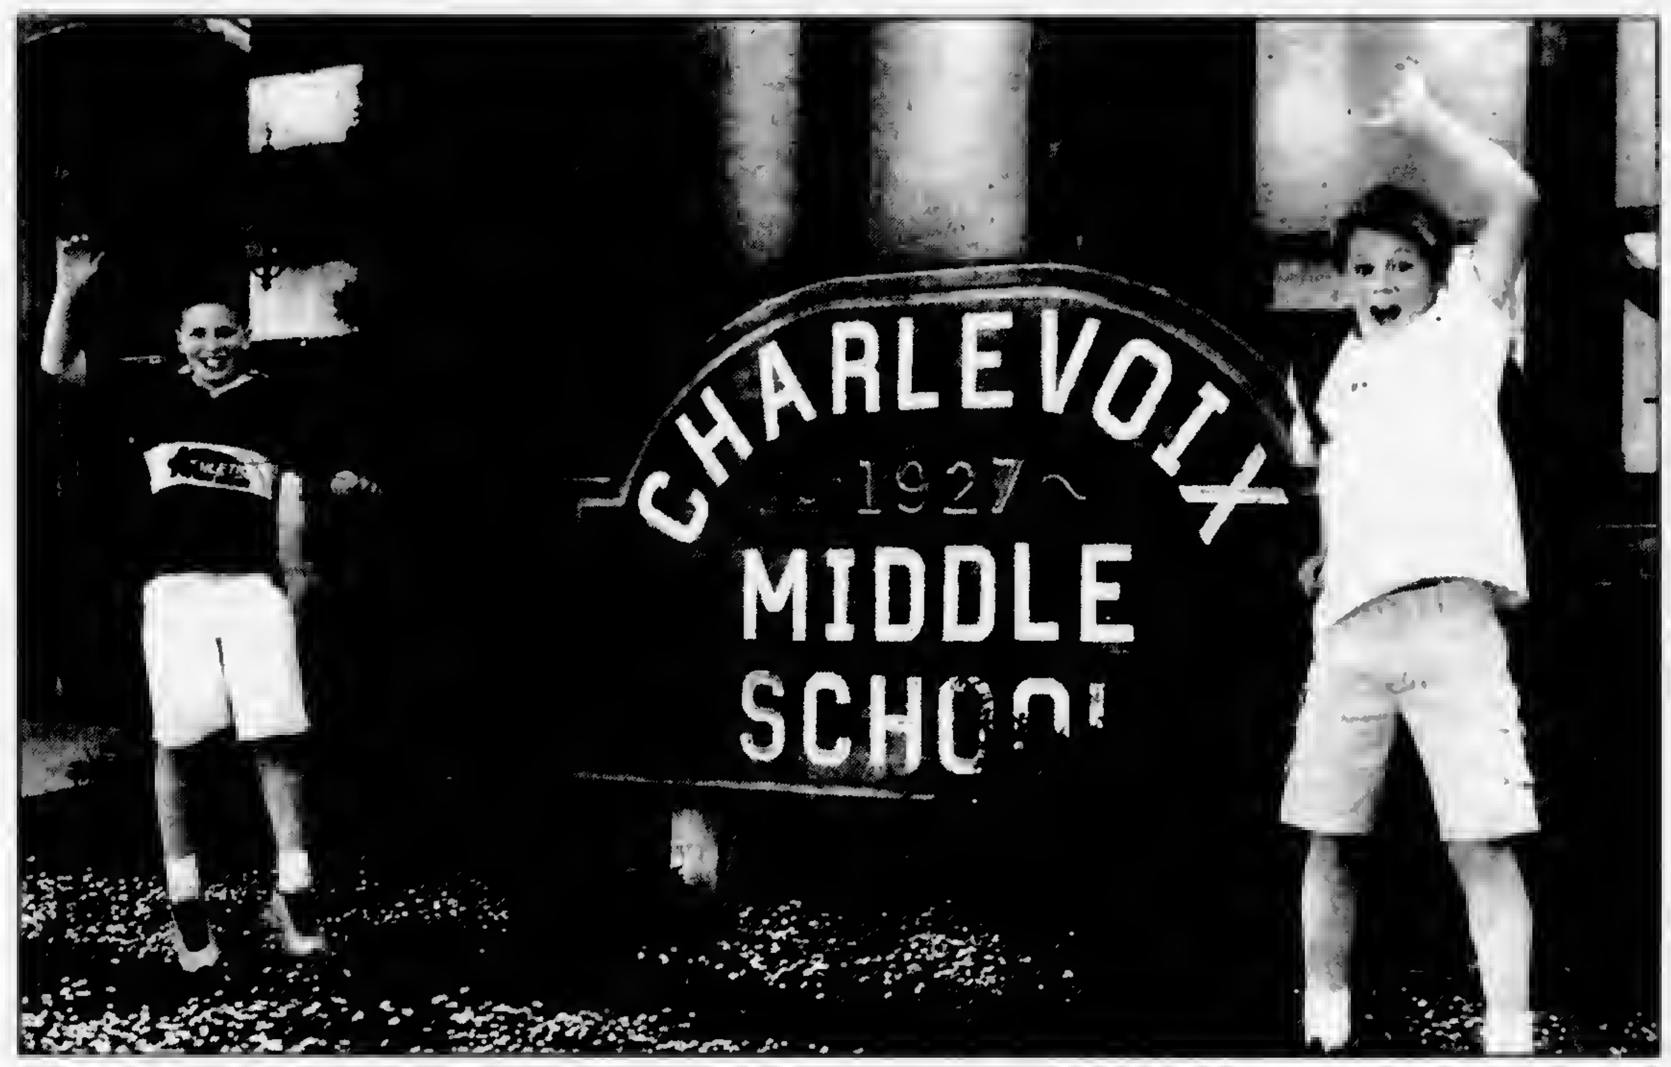
Will middle school stay standing?

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer



While these students were certainly happy when school let out for the summer, the end of the school year has left the Charlevoix Middle School's future in question. (File photo)

The fate of a historical building that has educated Charlevoix families for generations hangs in the balance.

The Charlevoix Middle School has stood for nearly 75 years at its 204 Grant Street location, but was abandoned as an educational institution at the close of this school year. Other uses for the building and surrounding area have been discussed, but formal decisions have not been made at this point.

The only definite fact is that the Charlevoix School District cannot afford to keep the middle school property.

"To keep it would cost money needed for operating funds," said Charlevoix Public School Board President Allen Telgenhof. Such operating funds are teacher's salaries and classroom supplies.

Therefore, the district is in search of other uses for the school.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said different groups have discussed possible uses for the building, but no one has given any real offer. Groups have included the city of Charlevoix, the Charlevoix Public Library and the Charlevoix Historical Society.

City Manager Michael Wiesner said he cannot speak on behalf of the city, but, in his personal opinion, the Middle School property may be used in conjunction with the marina for parking.

But, Wiesner said if the property was used as a community parking lot, the city would be losing a place for overflow parking.

Another area of use on the school's property, according to Wiesner, would be the basketball courts.

"Other than basketball courts, I don't know of another use the building could provide," Wiesner said, again speaking of his own personal opinion.

If the city does use the school property, there is a question whether the building will remain standing.

Charlevoix Mayor Alvin Russell said he doesn't know if the middle school would be torn down if the city purchased the property.

Russell added that he doesn't know what the city's interest in the property is because Charlevoix City Council members would have to give their input through a motion or vote. However, he added that if the property proved useful, purchasing it would be good on the city's part.

He, like Weisner, said the city could obtain more parking or a small park.

Another possible use for the building is a new home for the Charlevoix Public Library.

Valerie Meyerson, director of the Charlevoix Public Library, said the site for a new library isn't definite at this point.

The library building committee met on July 11, but Meyerson said no decisions were made. However, she added that two possible locations for the new library were chosen at the meeting along with the possibility of a third site.

The two sites chosen were the current library and the middle school property.

If the middle school area is to be used by the library, Meyerson said part of the property might be used, but the building might not be.

Meyerson said nothing is definite at this point.

The historic value of the building is important for Dave Miles, co-director of the Charlevoix Historical Society.

Miles also said he couldn't speak on behalf of the society, but only of his own personal opinion. The Charlevoix Historical Society isn't interested in the Middle School property for themselves because they are content where they are at the Harsha House and Depot Museum, he said.

Personally, Miles said, he would like to see the Middle School building used as a community center. He added that he would also like it if the library used the property.

If the building proved to be too large for a community center, he said the extra rooms could be leased for office use.

Miles added he wouldn't like to see the building torn down, especially because he was once a student there.

"I would think it would be a shame. It has too much potential and shouldn't be wasted," Miles said.

Fear shouldn't be a red light on your career road

Erik Larson

'Your health'

Fear is a very misunderstood four-letter word.

Fear is not just another way to say STOP. It is actually another way to say MOVE. Fear is intimately connected to any career path worth pursuing. If you are not having to face your personal fears in the unfolding of your career, your career path is already at a dead stop — you might as well retire and collect your pension.

Fear isn't a red light on the road to creating satisfying and meaningful work; it is a green light.

From the time we are kids, we are trained to avoid situations that feel fearful, which in a life-threatening circumstance makes just plain old good sense. When our fear alarm is triggered, we learn to act and act quickly. During moments of extreme danger, humans react with one of three main responses: fight, flight or freeze — these are our survival reactions (most animals, by the way, use the same three responses). All three responses are meant to ensure survival and so happen without thought.

But feeling that little sense fear in your belly or your head does not always — nor even usually — mean you are in a life-threatening circumstance. Still, however, we often react as if it does; meaning we act without thought, which in the day-to-day unfolding of Twenty-first Century life means we often treat giving a speech, speaking up in a meeting, accepting a promotion or even changing jobs just as if our very survival depended on the outcome, which of course it does not.

This is how we confuse life-threatening fear signals with what are actually just image-threatening fear signals. Think about it — saying something stupid in a work meeting won't lead to your death (even if it is really, really stupid) it just feels that way. Why? Because we believe our image is our life. We learn to believe that our image is more important than our abilities — a totally backward perspective. All we really have done is confuse what our fear signals are calling for us to do.

Confusing these two different types of fears is also how we get that stuck feeling in our work and lives. Why? Because the strategies of handling life-threatening fear don't work worth a plug-nickel when it comes to handling image-threatening fear. Image-threatening fear is best handled by a whole different fear strategy — the fourth fear f-word: FACING it.

But if facing our image-threatening fears are such a good thing, allowing us to better do work that we love and value, why do so many of us do all we can to avoid it? The answer is simple. Most of us learn to believe that all fear is bad — so logically it follows that all fear should be avoided. We then create very innovative ways to avoid facing any and all fears.

Don't let your fears hurt your career goals

At work we learn not speak up, or to speak up first and loudest or to always be a follower or to always be the leader. Outside of work we learn to eat our fear away, drink it away, shop it away, relationship it away — any addictive trick we can to avoid facing the monster under the bed that makes our palms sweat when we think about it.

Avoiding our monsters, however, only keeps us stuck and with that pervasive sense that we could do more satisfying and productive things with our lives. This is what leads many of us to live what Henry David Thoreau called lives of "quiet discontent."

The key to seeing your fears as green lights toward creating more positive work for yourself is to realize that just because you may be afraid of that promotion or starting that new business or going back to school it does not mean that pursuing this new direction is wrong for you. What it means is that you have been given a signal to stop and really look at why you are doing what you are doing in your life.

The key is to stop and honestly face what prevents you from taking that promotion. Maybe you really don't want to accept that promotion because it is time for you do a totally new kind of work OR maybe you would love to do the work the promotion would call for, but you secretly doubt whether you really can. Either way stopping long enough to be honest with yourself will always move you forward in a more positive work direction.

Once faced, your image-threatening fears are never as scary as you imagined they were — NEVER. What is always on the other side of this kind of fear will be a clearer understanding of your real desires and beliefs.

Facing your image-threatening fears is the real road to more personal power and freedom in your work. When you next feel the image-threatening fear coming around again to prevent you from doing something you truly desire, stop long enough to remember that facing that fear is actually a green-light along the way toward where you truly want to go in your work and in your life.

Two plans presented for public comment

PARK

cal venue and the buildings at the park's north and south outer edges is suggested in response to the public's concern about accessibility to the sites — the need for bands to unload and load equipment, the need for the chamber to access goods and the need for people to access the park.

Both sketches plan the chamber and harbormaster headquarters below the park, as is the case with the renovated Bridge Park. Schematic plan one, has a glass overlay in part of the park area to allow natural light down into the chamber building where a garden will sit below that can be viewed from above.

Pollack played on East Park's legacy as a music venue and said this tradition requires a significant facility. The two sketches show an amphitheater and a canopy layout.

The amphitheater model, in drawing one, is set on the south end of the park and includes walls and seating. The second drawing is a combination tent and canopy setup.

In general, the plan continues the terrace topography of the park. Along the steep areas the dimensions of the park are sloped, shaped and sized to accommodate artists, craft fairs and walkways.

The proposals show walkways through the park on the north, which will be barrier free and handicap friendly, while those on the south will be difficult to access without using steps.

The trout pond in both drawings is integrated into Round Lake. This concept may present engineering challenges ,but Pollack said the idea is to work in tandem with the natural habitat of fish.

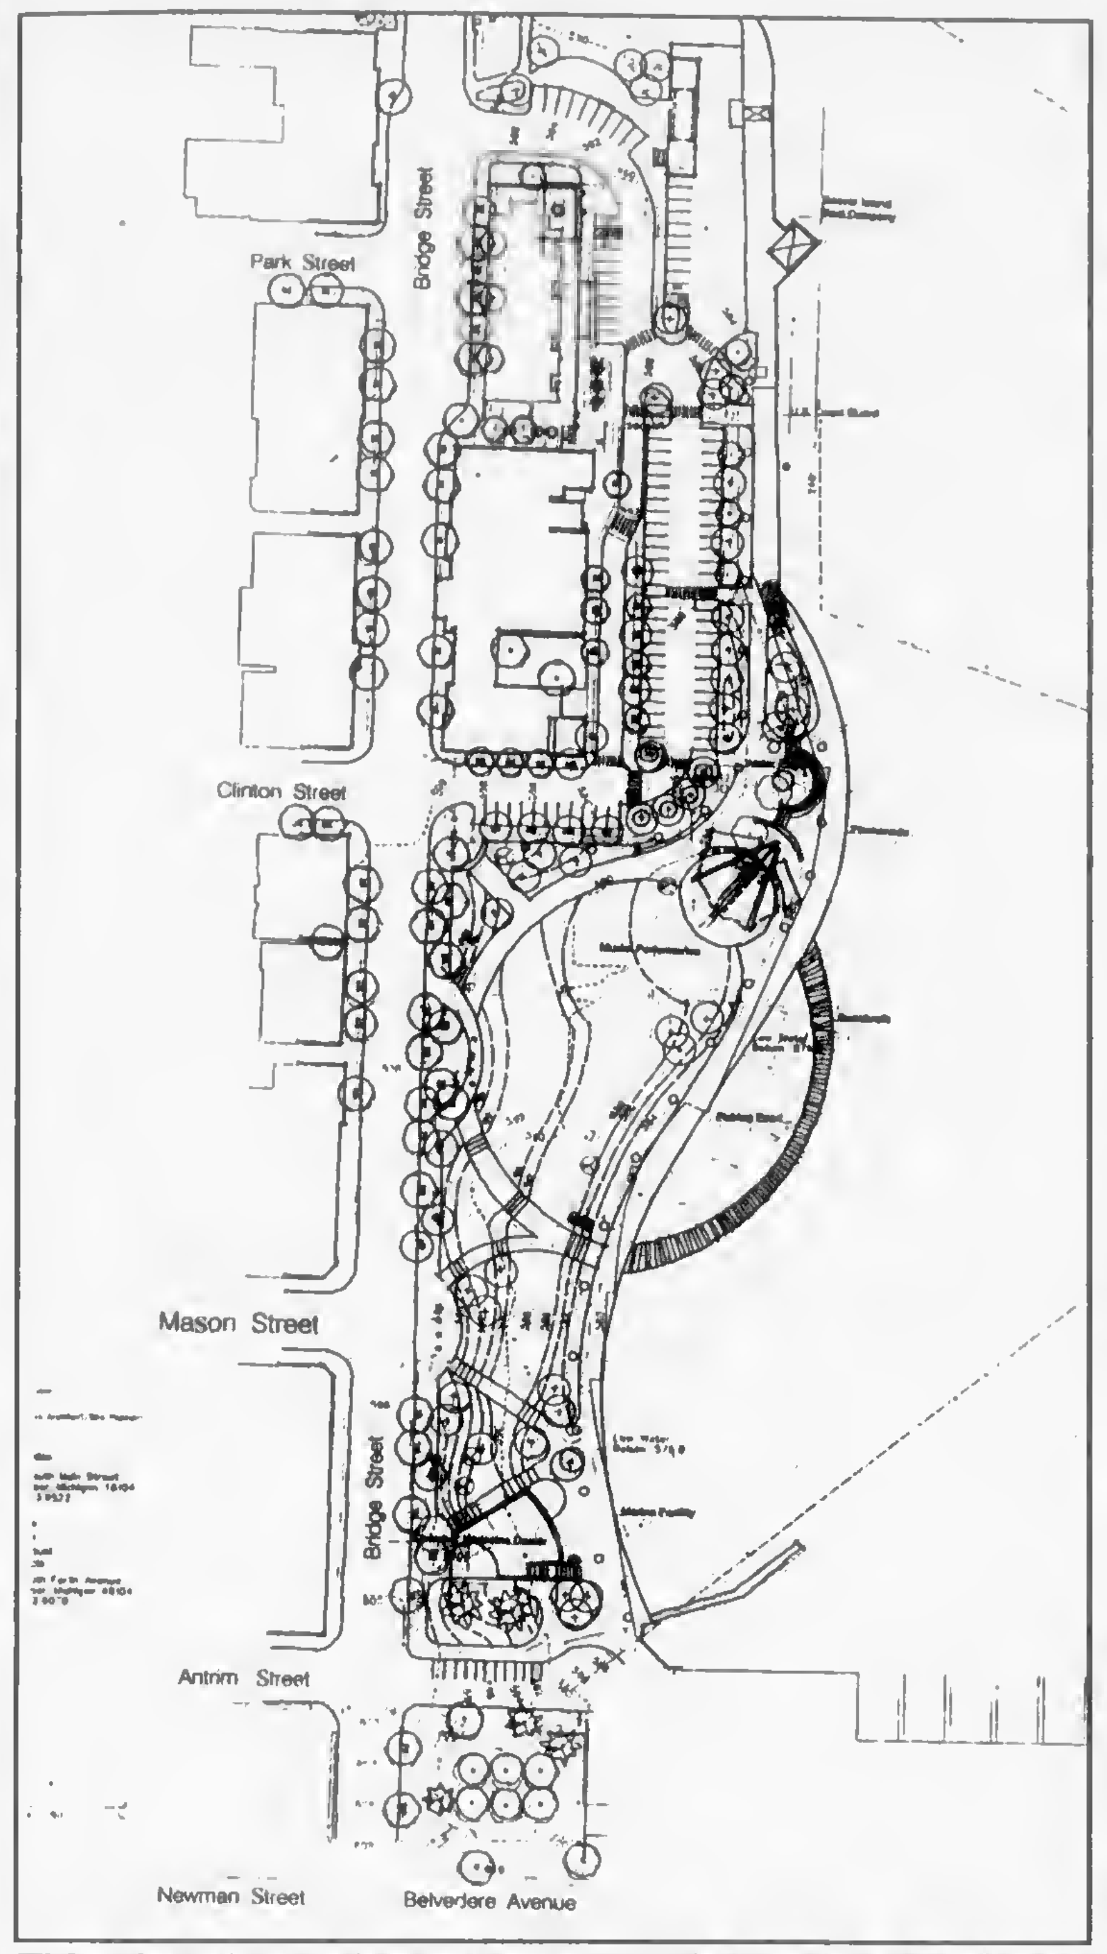
"Having Round Lake there and the fish pond literally in the lake with water circulating through, it's a better place for it — the fish are in their habitat and we can observe them," Pollack said.

The trout idea is conceptual at this time, but Pollack said, "anything is possible."

Man and water can also come together if the idea of a "promenade" along the water is pursued. The promenade in the drawing runs to the Beaver Island Boat Company kiosk, creating a "more gracious point of access to the water."

The drawings also reveal ideas generated by the community at its December 2001 public input meeting.

Pollack said children and water were mentioned as a priority and in response, he incorporated "water play," a series of jets in the ground that squirt water up like a geyser and will function as aesthetically pleasing features, play places for children and as a performance area.



This plan shows the new stage on the north side of East Park and a different trout pond. (Courtesy graphic)

Venetian Games gearing up

The 2002 Venetian Games feature an array of team and individual events.

Two popular individual events from last year, golf and tennis, have both been expanded to allow for more participation. But both will maintain last year's entry restriction requiring participants to have a Charlevoix mailing address, maintaining the event's aim to serve local enthusiasts.

There is golf for all ages with the Keith Carey Cup as the prize. Carey was the popular long-time manager of the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course and the event is a tribute to his memory. Local adult and junior golfers are currently vying for the championship trophies.

Co-managers of the golf tournament, Tom Dorsek and Scott Blechel have witnessed several weeks of qualifying play and competition has now moved to the early rounds of match play. Each flight's championship is scheduled for July 23 of Venetian week.

The tennis tournament, sponsored by the Charlevoix Historical Society, has grown to be a week-long event and will take place during Venetian week, climaxing with the finals July 25.

The tournament directors are Bob Heath, Roger Postmus and Vinnie Klooster. To register, call the Charlevoix Recreation Department at (231) 547-3253 by July 19.

The tournament is open to all ages and abilities including seniors. The tournament will include singles, doubles and mixed doubles.

The popular Jeff Drenth Road Race, a memorial to Charlevoix's finest distance runner, will again feature 10K, 5K and one mile races. The race will take place the morning of July 27 at Mount McSauba.

The event has grown to become a tradition for midwest distance runners as was evident last year when the Big Ten champion was among the participants. Ken and Sue Plude are co-managing and registration for this event is also through the recreation department.

Swimming for all ages will again be hosted by the Charlevoix Community Pool with pool director Al Gooch serving as event director. Participants need only to show up and register at 3:30 p.m. July 25, the day of the event, at the pool, to compete.

Races include freestyle, backstroke, butterfly, breaststroke and IM events. For more information call the pool at (231) 547- 0982.

A popular event, Cottage Croquet is scheduled for July 23 in Bridge Park in downtown Charlevoix. At 1:30 p.m. a clinic will kick things off and two person teams will take the field for a single elimination tournament.

Dave Fowler is the event manager and those interested can register at the site.

On one court service clubs will vie for the trophy won by Kiwanis last year. The annual grudge match between the City of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township fire departments to determine whose fire trucks go first in the parade will take place at 2 p.m. on court two. In the past there has been a celebrity match between the Charlevoix Courier and an outside media twosome. Plans are to continue that tradition.

Two new events, disc golf and sporting clays were well received in their first appearance last year and will be repeated this year.

Disc golf is a fast growing sport which involves baskets and a disc-like Frisbee. It's played similar to golf with various holes accompanied with assorted hazards. There will be three levels of competition: novice, intermediate and advanced.

A new round of competition called, "Glow Round" will be played the evening of July 24 with the big event on July 28. Advance registration is available at the city recreation department at city hall or on site at Mount McSauba.

Sporting clays is a Rod and Gun Club sponsored event for certified marksmen from all over the Midwest.

For additional information call Venetian Games Commissioner Dean Davenport at (231) 547-6433 or assistant commissioner Ike Boss at (231) 547-3253.

Future budgets look grim due to state funding

BUDGET

will dry up," he said.

His plan is to focus on district wide cost cutting and to look for ways to reduce expenses without cutting programs.

Charlevoix School District Accounting Manager Judy Boss agrees and said she'll be part of the cost cutting.

"We have funds to cover the programs this year. But during the course of the year we'll be looking at all costs and seeing where there are places to cut back. We can't continue to do this every year," Boss said.

The Charlevoix School Board accepted the 2002-2003 budget at its June 10 meeting with budgeted expenditures $565,000 over projected revenue.

So for the coming school year, the district is covered but if expenses remain half a million dollars higher than revenue figures during the next four years, the general fund balance will almost be depleted.

The district estimated its fund balance at the end of the 2003 school year to be $2,336,479.

Boss said while the district is currently comfortable, "in the black," the long term outlook isn't positive.

"What happens next year if there is no increase in foundation money from the state of Michigan and enrollment stays the same? The picture just gets worse. Where are we heading?" she questioned.

Her answer for the present is to enact the aforementioned district wide review of costs.

"We're going to take a good look this year and figure things out before it gets worse," Boss said.

This year the state upped per student funding $200, which was 33 percent lower than last year's increase. Boss' major concern for the coming year is if the state opts not to increase the foundation allowance at all and if enrollment remains static or drops off.

Boss calculated enrollment for the coming year to be down 30 students over the 2001-2002 school year. She said the large outgoing class of 2002 and small incoming kindergarten class accounts for the reduction. The loss of 30 students equates to $236,000 less in revenue.

However, enrollment revenue is not set in stone for the 2002-2003 school year as more students may still sign up.

At present time the district has no unexpected revenue sources on the horizon for the 2002-2003 school year. Scott Mays, the district technology coordinator, has applied for a technology grant which has not yet been approved.

Plus, with the recent settlement of lawsuits, it looks as though no unexpected litigation expenses will plague the general fund as they have over the past two years.

The district's general fund expenses for the first lawsuit filed against it by those opposed to the new high school has been reimbursed. Boss said costs associated with the other two lawsuits have not been calculated but she will be working on reimbursement through the district's insurance provider, SET-SEG this summer.

Other funds the school maintains include the Debt Retirement Fund which pays back the school bond to fund the new construction, the Sinking Fund which collects 1 mill for six years ending this year and pays for school repairs and the Capital Projects Fund which is where bond money is stored.

Both the athletic and food service funds are supplemented by the general fund. In a related story on page 9, high school athletic director Jim Kanine explains his proposal to bring more money in for the athletic program taking some of the burden off general fund athletic program expenditures.

All the aforementioned funds are in the black.

> "We have funds to cover the programs this year. But during the course of the year we'll be looking at all costs and seeing where there are places to cut back. We can't continue to do this every year."

JUL 2002

Venetian Festival to start on Sunday

VENETIAN

From 1 to 4 p.m., July 24, senior citizens are invited to East Park for an afternoon of Bingo overlooking Round Lake.

As big kids enjoy their afternoon, carnival workers will be preparing for the July 24 evening kickoff of rides, games and more, all set up in the parking lot connecting Clinton and Mason streets.

After twirling on the rides all night, at noon, July 25, kids flock to East Park for the fourth annual kids day featuring crafts, entertainers, puppet shows, pony rides, play structures and special guest, Laura, a 1,600 pound elephant.

On July 26, Venetian participants can spend the afternoon soaking in some local heritage at Native American Heritage Day.

Then, as night rolls in and the music continues, the sky will be filled with the brightly colored sparks of fireworks. The fireworks will start at 10:15 p.m. and will light up Lake Charlevoix. Some popular viewing areas include Depot and Ferry beaches.

If your fireworks enthusiast appetite isn't filled by Friday's show, head to East Park Saturday night where stadium fireworks and the grand electrical boat parade, signature Venetian events, light up the night.

Don't forget to sandwich the fabulous street parade into fireworks plans. The annual parade that features the Michigan State Marching Band, clowns and more starts at 11 a.m. July 27 and travels down Charlevoix's signature petunia lined Bridge Street.

All of these amazing activities are just a sampling of what is available to residents and visitors during the Venetian Festival.

To sign up or inquire about one of 20 sporting events call the city recreation department at (231) 547-3253. For more information about music and things to see and do, check the Venetian guide enclosed in this week's Courier.

Boaters should use channel 9 when hailing other boaters

With the boating season in full swing, the United States Coast Guard is encouraging boaters to use marine band VHF channel 9 for hailing and channel 16 for distress calls.

Until July 2000, marine VHF channel 16 was used on the Great Lakes for all hailing and distress calls for both boaters and commercial ships. Boaters who use channel 9 will free up channel 16 so that distress calls will be heard.

The changes were driven by the extreme congestion on channel 16, a condition that could cause a distress call to go unheard.

The Coast Guard does not monitor channel 9. Using channel 9 for hailing allows the Coast Guard faster response times to "mayday" calls and other emergency radio requests that are often muted by unnecessary channel 16 radio chatter.

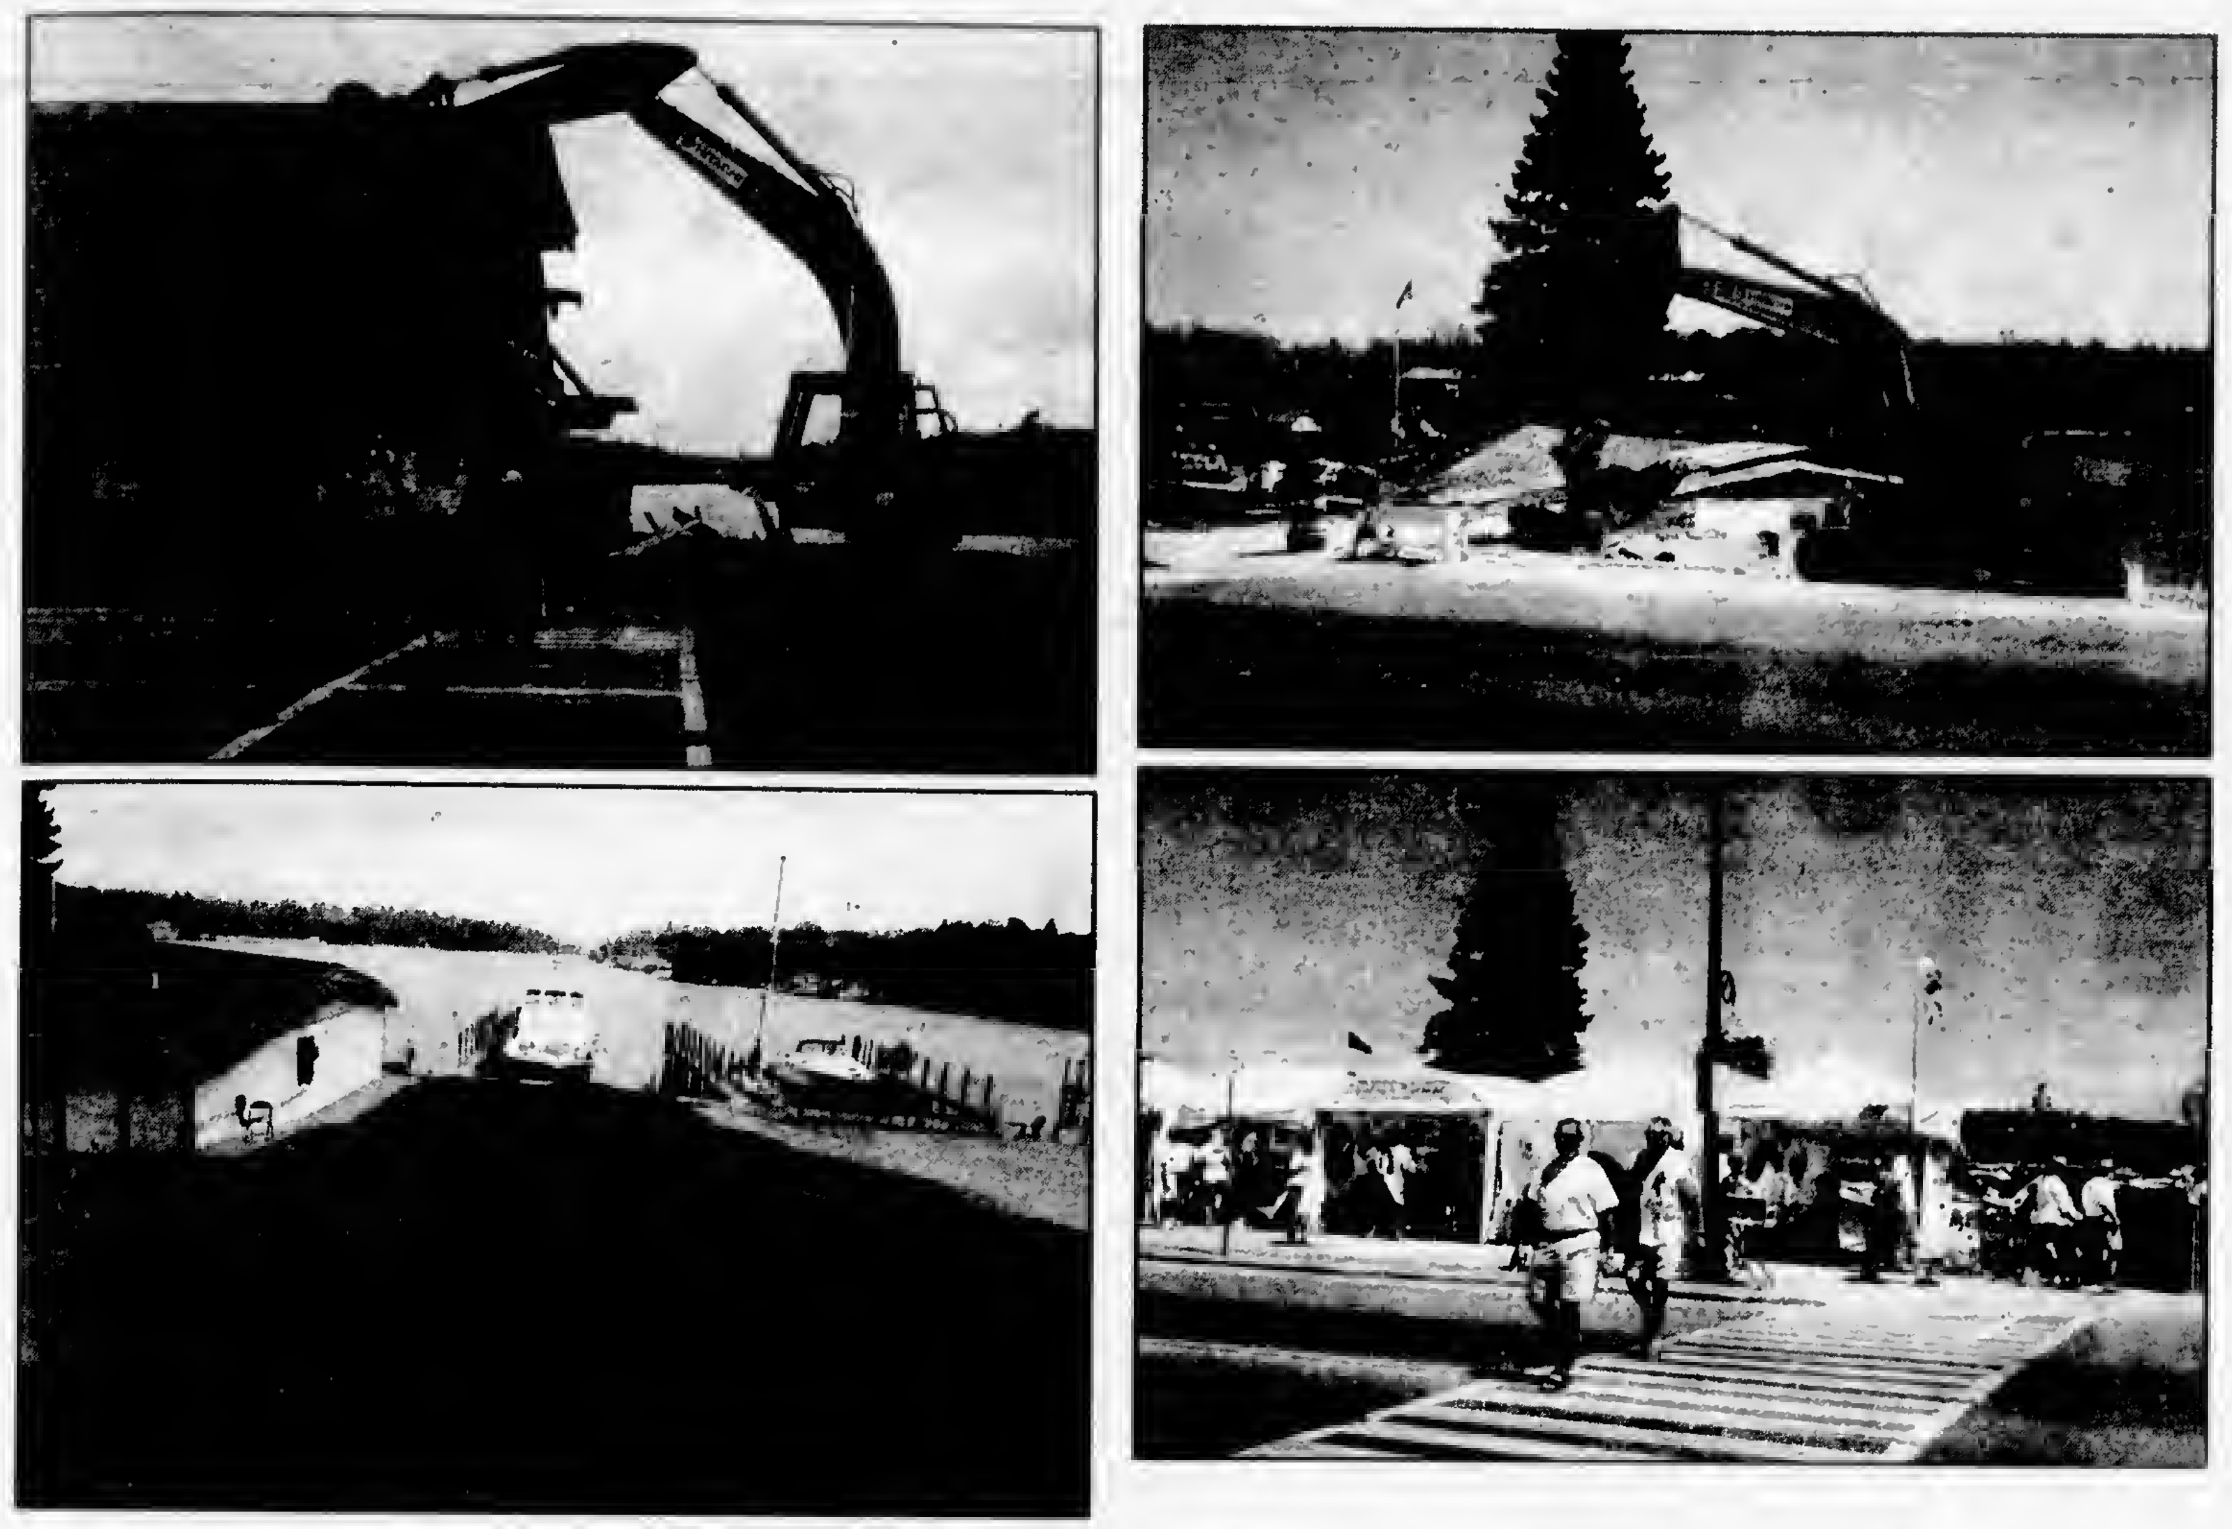
SCRAPBOOK



Building becomes grass

The Wharfside Building, which was once Neff Grocery in the 1950s, was torn down last spring and turned into open park space. The property the building stood on has various buildings on it since 1869, when it was owned by Seth and Eliza Mason. The Wharfside demolition was the second building demolition on that site, after the demolition of the Parkside Building that was to the right. Now, lower right picture, the space is used by the chamber of commerce to place art and craft tents during festivals. (Photos by Jeremy McBain)

Country Club gets new owners

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Many people strive for retirement, but just when Kip and Nicki Thomas were ready to wave good-bye to work they grabbed an opportunity they couldn't refuse — the acquisition of the Charlevoix Country Club.

On July 1, the Thomases purchased the club from its founders, nine Charlevoix residents who opened the 600 acre site in 1993. The founders will maintain control of the residential properties and real estate, but the 18-hole golf course, the clubhouse, including Mahogany's Fine Dining and the pool facility, are now owned by the Thomases.

"I think the key here is that what Kip and Nicki are going to bring to the club: focus and hands-on management," Rik Lobenherz, a Charlevoix Country Club founder and president and co-owner of Vacation Properties Network said.

While Lobenherz sees the benefit of the new arrangement, he has been a part of the country club project since the mid-1980s and in many ways is losing a familiar friend.

"It's definitely a change for me, this has been a very big part of my life over the last 15 years. But I'm not able to dedicate the necessary time to it. I'm a real estate developer and broker, not a restaurateur or golf pro," he

Venetian blues

Crowds gathered for another night of Venetian music Monday in East Park to hear the rocking blues lineup of Mojo and the Boogieman, from Charlevoix, and Dr. Duke Tumatoe and the Power Trio. Mojo and the Boogieman kicked off the night, followed by Dr. Duke Tumatoe, a well known bluesman from Indianapolis, Ind. (left). After he closed out the night, Dr. Duke invited members from Mojo and the Boogieman on stage for one final number, "Sweet Home Chicago." State seeking former Hoskins workers

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) is asking former employees of Charlevoix's Hoskins Manufacturing to come forward with information about disposal practices of hazardous materials at the site.

Elaine Pelc, an environmental analyst with the MDEQ said the environmental group has no data at this time that supports a claim that the site is contaminated, but it is interested in finding out for sure.

"If employees come forward, we can interview them about how things happened at the plant which will make our investigation more efficient," Pelc said.

The MDEQ recently received two anonymous letters, one from a resident near Hoskins and one from a former employee, and both stated at one time hazardous substances were improperly disposed of at the Hoskins Marion Township site.

The Charlevoix facility located off M-66 was closed in September of 2001.

Other Hoskins Manufacturing facilities in the state including those in Hamburg, Mio and Lewiston, were also closed by Hoskins' parent company, Armada Corporation, which liquidated assets at the Hoskins facilities.

A representative from the Bloomfield Hills based parent company could not be reached for comment.

Pelc said the MDEQ is concerned the letters sent support a possibility that a similar environmental situation, as was found at Hoskins' Mio site, may exist in Charlevoix.

"Mio was left quite a mess," she said.

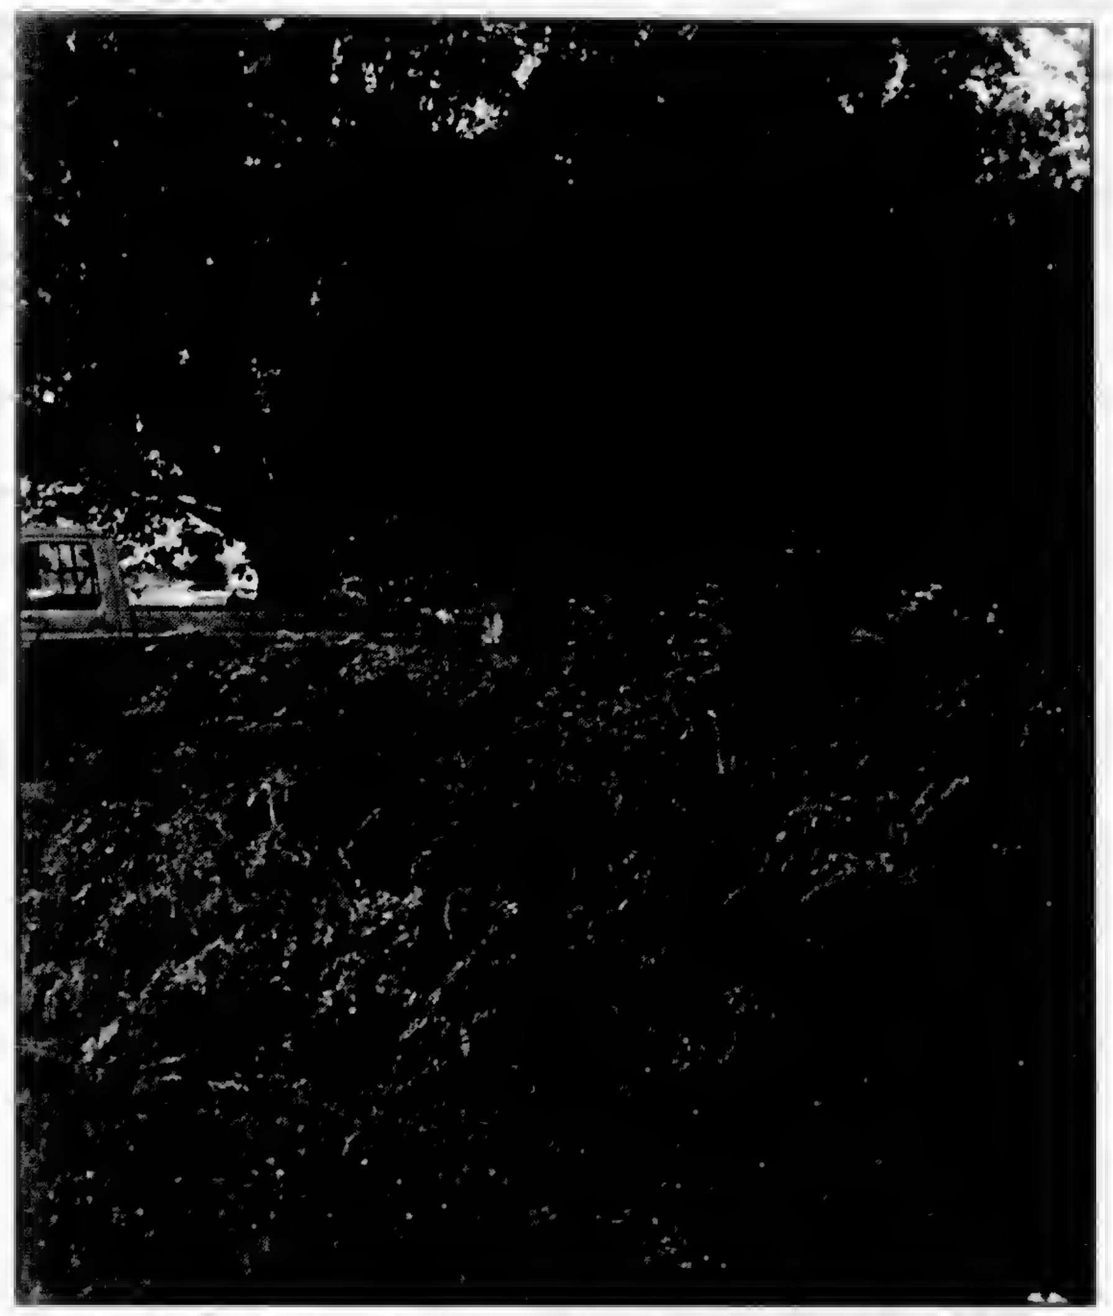
Storm strikes area on first day of festival



This tangle of trees on Carpenter Street was the result of Sunday's storm. The storm knocked out power to various residences, blew down trees and some lighting damage was created. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A Sunday morning storm blew through Charlevoix leaving behind broken tree limbs, cars stalled out as they were submerged in water on Bridge Street and Petoskey Avenue and power outages throughout the area.

"I've never seen that much standing water on the highway, there must have been 1-and-a-half feet at some intersections; what a way to start the (Venetian) festival," Pete Shrift, a Charlevoix City Patrol Officer of 14 years, said.

Three intersections where water was particularly deep were Bridge and Carpenter Streets, Bridge and St. Mary's streets and at Nettleton Street and Petoskey Avenue.

The deep water prompted firefighters to respond to the three intersections, first looking to unclog storm drains. But the firefighters soon found the drains weren't clogged, they just couldn't keep up with the heavy rain.

Firefighters then were busy marking the areas to warn drivers to slow down. But shift commander Bob Roloff said some drivers opted to ignore the warning, barreled through the deep water and stalled their vehicles.

Roloff said in two instances they were unable to restart the cars and a towing service had to respond.

Shrift said it is almost impossible to keep control of a vehicle in that deep of water and was happy to report no traffic accidents in the city as a result of the storm.

Shrift said instances of cars immobilized by the weather were limited as the most severe part of the storm was from 7 to 8 a.m. Sunday, which are low traffic times.

But even though traffic volumes were low, storm activity was high and created more than just water problems.

Just after 7 a.m. Shrift responded to a call at 320 Robinson Street. At the scene he saw what appeared to be a home struck by a bolt of lightening.

The blast was so strong it created depressions in the earth and blew concrete around like fall leaves. Shrift said a minivan parked in front of the garage had its two front tires flattened by the blast and its electrical system fried.

The electrical panel in the garage had its cover blown off and the electrical activity in the house was severely disturbed.

According to Ed Whitley, city electrical superintendent, other city power outages were limited and were dealt with in about four hours by two city workers. Whitley said power was restored to all impacted city customers by about 10:30 a.m.

Whitley said the most major city power outage was felt by customers along US-31, west of Harbor Industries out to Bell's Bay Road. The cause of this outage was a tree that fell on the lines.

Other than the storm's impact on US-31, he said there were a few small outages in two other parts of the city effecting around six homes.

One of the impacted areas in the city, West Carpenter Street, where Martha and David Herboldsheimer live, looked like more than a storm passed through. The former Texas residents said they've seen tornado activity before and this in their opinion carried similar consequences.

At the Herboldsheimer property,

This year's Venetian is going to be great

EDITORIAL

By the looks of all the bands, events, visitors to town and smiling faces, another Venetian Festival has started and this one is shaping up to be even better than last year.

Sure, things are a little difficult around Charlevoix during the festival. There is practically no way to get from one side of town to the other in a decent time, parking is horrible and pedestrians like to jump into the street.

But, the positives far outweigh the negatives.

Where else can you listen to two bands each night in two parks for free? Where else can you enjoy two nights of fireworks over Charlevoix's beautiful lakes and take in the grand spectacle of the annual boat parade? What other festival has activities for the kids, the teenagers and the adults, all within a few blocks of one another? Where else can practically any athlete find a competition to take part in? What better time to see old friends, family or meet new people than this celebration?

The answer is: No where but Charlevoix during the Venetian Festival.

So, instead of complaining about the traffic, the large number of people in town or the music coming from East Park, take some time to enjoy what is happening.

Get out on the street and immerse yourself in the crowd, listen to the bands play their hearts out, send the kids to the carnival or take them to Kids' Day to ride Laura the elephant and just plain enjoy the show.

We congratulate the Charlevoix Venetian Festival Board of Directors and the many volunteers for their hard work this week and for helping put together what looks to be another fantastic festival. The smiling faces of visitors and residents as they enjoy the many events shows your work has paid off.

Since each year seems to be better than the last, we are excited to see what you have in store for us next year.

Traffic is the issue on the minds of many residents

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

Do you really want to know what people are talking about behind today's news?

People are complaining about the traffic in Charlevoix, that's what! Last weekend it took a person one hour to go from Oyster Bay to the Charlevoix Post Office. It took someone one hour to go from the Weathervane to Oleson's Market and back. And believe it or not, the title of the sermon last week at the First Congregational Church was, "Waiting for the Bridge."

Contributing to long delays, pedestrians are crossing Bridge Street on red lights, which in turn, prevents traffic from making turns with the green light. Talk about road rage!

Why has the situation become so intolerable?

One reason is, and I hate to say this, because I will be tarred and feathered and run out of town, the reason is because the merchants are pressuring the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce to have more and more functions in the park on weekends!

We used to have ONE function the whole summer and that was the Venetian Festival. It lasted one day. Now it lasts almost a week and is expected to attract 100,000 people!

We used to have ONE Art Fair that lasted one day. Now we have two Art Fairs and one of them lasted two days. Then we have the Craft Fair and the Trout Tournament. Have I left anything out?

Yes. Now there's even talk of having a convention center downtown to attract more visitors!

Unfortunately what many goodhearted people don't realize is that we CAN attract visitors here, without concentrating all our activities in the park on Bridge Street, which bottles up the traffic crossing the bridge.

Besides, the suggestion of having the bridge up every hour instead of every half hour won't help either. We'll just have to sit longer while more boats are stacked up waiting to go through the channel.

There's nothing we can do about the bridge, except take our children for an ice cream cone, listen to the bells ring and let them watch it with wide eyed excitement as it goes up and down.

Let's consider another option instead of jamming the park with weekend activities. We are blessed with having new owners renovate Castle Farms. Renovation of these romantic, historic buildings is in full progress and I predict it will be a popular year-round site for many up-scale activities such as plays, concerts, meetings and especially weddings!

Speaking of weddings, are you aware that the average cost of a wedding in the United States today is $22,000 and some go as high as six figures? Are you aware that a wedding, not only includes the wedding reception, but also the rehearsal dinner, bridal luncheons and showers, as well as the popular Sunday brunch following the wedding? All this is a $$$ plus for caterers and restaurants.

Brides also register for gifts at local stores and motels are filled with out of town relatives and friends. Local musicians, photographers, limo drivers and florists all benefit from weddings.

For goodness sake, let's accentuate the positive and consider relocating some of our activities away from downtown to this lovely site, Castle Farms, where there will be plenty of parking.

This sensible move will be of enormous benefit in the future to the traffic flow in Charlevoix, to the merchants and the chamber of commerce.

Letters to the editor

Support Roloff, Smith

Editor:

Mercifully, the tempest and public tirades over occasions of alleged secret meetings of Charlevoix County Commissioners is over. Despite extremely judgmental editorial condemnations and published comments reeking of blatant attempts at political assassination by those who seem to have acquired the power to penetrate minds and examine the thoughts of others, the State Attorney General's investigation could not discern any evil motives or criminal intent.

There was no conspiratorial effort by sneaky and underhanded commissioners to conduct a clandestine meeting in broad daylight right in the heart of the Charlevoix County Building. There were no whispered quorum calls in dimly lit corner booths of smoky bars.

The law was not violated! It is regrettable that the whole overblown affair was not aborted by a few timely and appropriate words of warning or protest at its outset. But in retrospect, it now seems that personality conflicts and political considerations may have overruled a reasoned and prudent reaction at the time of discovery. Sadly, in the heat of an entirely avoidable public confrontation, the reputations of some fine commissioners have been wrongfully besmirched.

I hope the citizens of Charlevoix County will give fair hearing and judgment to incumbent commissioners who are still willing to run in the August primary election. In this respect, I offer a testimonial in behalf of Don Smith, Carl Price and Shirley Roloff. I have known them for many years: Don as commissioner representing my district, Carl and Shirley as both commissioners and friends. In my humble estimation, these fine people are ethically incapable of being the devious schemers alluded to in press stories.

Commissioner Shirley Roloff is presently seeking a second term in office by running in the new 6th district where she now resides. To my friends and neighbors in the district who have not yet had the pleasure of meeting Shirley, I can only say: you are missing a genuine treat.

Her personal warmth, down home charm and sense of humor will soon convince you of her absolute sincerity. I can confidently and proudly recommend her to you as a candidate with high ethical standards and dedication to duty. Concerned taxpayers will also be pleased to know that Shirley Roloff's experience in her family business has made her an aggressive cost cutter and budget guardian. But, beyond serving as a commissioner, Shirley Roloff is a compassionate human being who is always ready to donate her own time to humanitarian causes that benefit the community and its less fortunate residents.

In the August 6 primary election, Commissioner Roloff will be challenged by two other candidates. Please vote and give her your support. You could not elect a more honest, competent and caring person to represent your vital interests in county government.

Local talent shines

Editor:

I was extremely disappointed to notice that some of our local talent was not highlighted in the Venetian week schedule of events. We have some wonderful shows that will be performed during the week. One outstanding group is the Ragamuffin Children's Theater and Choir. The group consists of 25 wonderfully talented young ladies who will be on stage from 12:45 to 1:30 p.m. and from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m. Thursday.

Anyone who has seen their past performances at the Knights of Columbus Hall will not want to miss them.

I believe that when local groups contribute their time and talent to enhance the Venetian Festival, they should be highlighted in the schedule of events along with the big name groups. Charlevoix first!

Thank you

Editor:

This letter is to publicly acknowledge the kindness and generosity of Gary and Kaye Anderson during the long and arduous road work done on Belvedere Avenue.

The Andersons allowed my staff and patients to use their parking area during the day and on more than one occasion helped move cars which were stuck in loose sand on the avenue itself.

It's so very gratifying to have such caring and kind people in Charlevoix. They truly are special to us and to those they have contact with.

Build indoor skating rink

Editor:

I'm a sixth grader in the Charlevoix Middle School and I ponder that Charlevoix needs an indoor skating rink. One reason is you will stay warm and then you don't get sick when you're outside. You also don't have to worry about getting your clothes dirty.

Another reason is you can ice skate any time, like on summer break. You also don't have to wait for them to make it. Finally they will probably start a hockey team and people will not have to travel for their kids to play hockey. You can also play on a team with your friends instead of people you don't know. Thank you for taking the time to read my letter.

Give performing arts more money

Editor:

I am a sixth grader attending Charlevoix Middle School. I believe that Charlevoix should donate money to classes like performing arts instead of just sports.

Performing arts is a great class because it teaches kids how to stand up in front of large crowds, and it also teaches them acting abilities. Performing arts has a classroom, but nowhere to practice. They have to keep their scenery in the hall. Also, they have to practice in the cafeteria. In the cafeteria and classroom it gets way too crowded.

Next, performing arts could buy more paints for their scenery. The chairs and furniture they use are purple. They do not have much money to buy materials for the costumes. They use time out of their acting to paint the scenery.

Another reason is the school has to pay for every play they do. If they had more money, they could do more plays. The students could get more awards for our school to be proud of. We want more than just sports awards.

Finally, they could travel more places because of gas money. I hope the community of Charlevoix will take action with my belief.

Money received to fund local tobacco programs

More than $23,000 was recently granted to Emmet and Charlevoix county programs for tobacco prevention and cessation and programs that emphasize healthy lifestyle choices.

The grants were made by the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation as part of an agreement between the State of Michigan and the Council of Michigan Foundations. The State of Michigan is one of 46 states receiving funds from the 1998 national tobacco master settlement agreement between the tobacco industry and the states.

Under agreement with the State of Michigan and the Council of Michigan Foundations, a portion of the interest earned on the state's tobacco settlement revenue is distributed annually to the 66 community foundations in the state to fund local, health-related programs for youth and seniors.

The Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation and the Charlevoix County Community Foundation together received over $40,000 for the 2002 distribution. Half of that amount is placed in a permanent endowment by each community foundation for future grant-making and the other half is for immediate grantmaking.

While each community foundation has its own permanent endowment to benefit their respective counties, the two community foundations have formed a joint Healthy Youth and Seniors Advisory Committee made up of representatives from health and human service agencies that cover the Char-Em area. In addition, each community foundation has a member of their Youth Advisory Committee serve on the Healthy Youth and Seniors Advisory Committee.

In the latest round of grantmaking, the two community foundations each awarded $10,769 to the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency for their Tobacco Prevention and Cessation Among Youth – 2002 project.

This is a comprehensive education and prevention project to target elementary, middle and high school students in Charlevoix and Emmet counties. The project will also include a media campaign and educational programs for seniors.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation also awarded $2,000 to Planned Parenthood Northern Michigan for the "How To Say No" program, which teaches healthy lifestyle choices for seventh and eighth grade students.

More information about the Healthy Youth and Seniors funds, program eligibility and grant deadlines is available by contacting either of the community foundations. Call the Petoskey-Harbor Springs Area Community Foundation at 348-5820 or the Charlevoix County Community Foundation at 536-2440.

Gerald Junior Russell: Nov. 5, 1930 - July 16, 2002

Gerald Junior Russell, "Jerry," 71 of East Jordan, and formerly of Charlevoix, died July16, 2002 at his home in Eveline Township.

A funeral was given on July 19 at the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix. The Rev. Michael Dennis of the First Baptist Church of Charlevoix officiated and burial was in Brookside Cemetery.

Jerry was born Nov. 5, 1930, in Petoskey, the son of Carl and Ruth (Fraser) Russell. Jerry served in the United States Army during the Korean Conflict, then served two more re-enlistments.

He worked at Jordan Valley Concrete, then at Harbor Industries in Charlevoix as a heavy equipment operator, retiring in 1995.

On May 23, 1980 he married the former Evelyn M. Hones, and they made their home in Eveline Township.

Jerry is survived by his wife Evelyn; children, Jim (Linda) of Norwood, Randy of East Jordan, Jerry Jr. (Glenda), Cathy and Jack (Anne) Russell, all of Charlevoix; step children, Janice (Artie) Hedrick, and Debbie (John) Angermuller all of Charlevoix; several grandchildren; brothers, Dick (Mary), Ron, all of Charlevoix and Doug (Alcda); sister, Elaine Parsons, all of Grand Rapids.

The family is being served by the Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

St. Mary's group returns from mission in Detroit

A team of young people and adults from St. Mary's parish in Charlevoix spent a week of their summer vacation reaching out to persons in need in the inner city of Detroit.

The team participated in a project called Young Neighbors in Action (YNIA). YNIA involves over 2000 participants in providing service to poor children and families all across the United States.

This is the fifth missionary trip to the inner city of Detroit for the youth of St. Mary's.

In the previous four years they have worked in a soup kitchen, spent time remodeling an old convent that is now being used to keep the youth off the streets, graffiti removal, landscaping, fixing up a home that will be used for the homeless, working with Alzheimer patients and distributing literature, door-to-door about illegal toxic dumping and other environmental issues.

This year the youth worked at a facility called Freedom House, located on the premise of St. Anne's Parish in the inner city.

Freedom House was created in 1983 to assist people who were escaping persecution in El Salvador. Due to wars and increased oppression worldwide, the number of people needing assistance has multiplied. Now, hundreds of thousands of people flee from their native lands every year in fear for their lives. They give up everything - homes, families, friends, and jobs - and travel to a land that they know little about. Most never return home.

Freedom House, a non-profit charity, provides food, clothing, shelter, and social and legal services to people of all races and creeds. Their mission is to extend love and human dignity to people who have been devastated by torture and the denial of basic human rights.

They work to legally resettle refugees into Canada or the United States. They also speak out against injustice and educate for systematic change.

While at Freedom House, the team from St. Mary's did a variety of work. They spent time cleaning up rooms and created a computer room for the house.

They washed walls; landscaped the back and front yard; scraped and stained fences, tables and decks; helped the lawyers with some legal work; and other miscellaneous jobs. And most importantly, the team had time to interact with the residents and their children, talking to people from Africa, Guatemala, El Salvador, Pakistan, Middle East, Lebanon, Trinidad and other countries.

Young Neighbors is an eye-opening experience for all who participate. The youth return to their communities with a better understanding of the needs and concerns of the poor.

As many of the youth stated, they did not realize how fortunate they were and how they took things for granted. Their entire view of the world has expanded due to their experience at Freedom House.

The team this year consisted of: Alyssia McDonough, Dani Flowers, Erin Buckner, Tim Cross, Sonya Plude, Megan Richards, Adam Richards, Amy Drew, Jodi Marley and Patty Furtaw.

Tips on avoiding rabies

Each year many Americans have to undergo anti-rabies treatment as a result of exposure to potentially rabid animals.

Other major problems associated with animal bites include the cost of treatment, disfigurement, infection, fear and worry, and death, said officials with the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency.

"Since 1990, about three cases of human rabies have been reported each year in the United States," said Joshua Meyerson, M.D. Medical Director of the health department.

Wild animals such as bats, coyotes, skunks, raccoons, foxes, woodchucks, bobcats and other cats and domestic animals such as livestock, dogs, ferrets, and cats, are capable of transmitting rabies, Meyerson explained. Rodents — except woodchuck and beaver — and lagomorphs — rabbits and hares — almost never call for anti-rabies treatment.

The last two reported cases of human rabies in Michigan occurred in 1948 and 1983.

Rabies is a virus found in the saliva of rabies-infected animals. If an infected animal bites you or your pet, the infection is transmitted and affects the nervous system. Nonbite methods of exposure may include scratches, abrasions, open wounds or mucous membranes — mouth and eyes — contaminated with saliva or infectious material from a rabid animal. Bats are of special concern and exposure is defined as a bite, scratch, or even finding a live or dead bat in living quarters where it had access to sleeping persons.

Rabies is a fatal disease, but it can be prevented, Meyerson said.

If you are bitten or scratched by an animal, or exposed to a bat, contact your physician for guidance and notify the county animal control officer. The essential measures in preventing problems following a bite or scratch includes:

- Local treatment of the wound. Immediate and thorough washing of all wounds with soap and water is perhaps the most effective measure in preventing infection including rabies. After washing the wound, rinse with water and cleanse it with a topical antiseptic.
- Evaluation and treatment of the wound. A physician should be contacted immediately. Evaluation and prompt treatment of bites and scratches will prevent future problems. Treatment may include further wound cleaning and care, tetanus vaccine, antibiotics to prevent infection and anti-rabies treatment may also be indicated.
- Animal confinement or testing. All bites should be reported to the county animal control officer. Healthy dogs, cats and ferrets can be confined or observed for 10 days as directed by the animal control officer.

Sick dogs, cats and wild animals should be destroyed and tested for rabies.

Do not destroy the animal by shooting it in the head, but rather contact the county animal control officer, local environmental sanitarian or a veterinarian. If animals must be handled, use heavy gloves, tongs or similar tools; do not pick up the animal with bare hands. Dead animals should be placed in double plastic bags and refrigerated, not frozen.

According to Meyerson, the essential measures to prevent serious consequences through an animal bite are to avoid strange animals, vaccinate domestic animals, keep pets under control, notify the animal control officer when exposure occurs, cleanse all wounds thoroughly, seek prompt medical attention, confine or test animals for rabies and contact the local environmental sanitarian at the health department if you have questions.

Areas of lakes closed for fireworks safety zones

The United States Coast Guard Station in Charlevoix will be enforcing safety zones during the fireworks shows Friday on Lake Charlevoix and Saturday on Round Lake as part of the Charlevoix Venetian Festival.

The safety zone on Friday will be enforced by the Coast Guard, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Michigan Department of Natural Resources upon arrival of the fireworks barge in Lake Charlevoix, around 8 p.m., until the conclusion of the show, around 11 p.m.

Boaters will not be allowed in the 1,200 foot zone starting just south of Pine River, in Lake Charlevoix from the Coast Guard station to the east, past the C&O Club.

The zone will be marked with orange floats. No vessel may enter or anchor in this area without permission of the Coast Guard Patrol Commander.

However, vessels may anchor anywhere outside of the safety zone.

A 700 foot safety zone on Saturday will begin upon the arrival of the fireworks barge in Round Lake. It will be enforced by the Coast Guard, Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

The zone will be around the barge, near the center of Round Lake and will be marked with orange floats.

Boaters may not enter this area until the safety zone opens after the fireworks show, around 11:30 p.m.

Vessels in Round Lake may be anchored in the extended special anchoring zone on the northeast side of the lake.

Any concerned boater may contact the Coast Guard Patrol Commander on channel 16 or call the Charlevoix station at (231) 547-2541.

Man beaten at Whiting Park, suspects caught

A Boyne City man was severely beaten around 8 p.m., July 16 by three other men in a campground at Whitings Park in Eveline Township.

A camper in the park noticed the alleged assault taking place and reported the incident to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. When sheriff's deputies arrived, they found the man had been beaten in front of his family, including small children, by the three men who had already left the scene.

The assault was also witnessed by 10 other people who cooperated with law enforcement in the investigation.

However, one of the sheriff's deputies responding to the scene spotted the vehicle containing the three suspects, made a traffic stop and arrested the men.

The victim was transported by Boyne City Emergency Medical Service to Charlevoix Area Hospital, where he was treated for severe injuries.

According to a police affidavit, the victim was allegedly a member of the Outlaws motorcycle club and wanted out. The three men who allegedly assaulted him are associated with the motorcycle club, according to the affidavit.

The men, Eric Vaughn, 28, of Boyne City; Marcus Damon Cornelisse, 28, of London, Ontario, Canada; and Richard Lee Selissen, Jr. were arraigned in Charlevoix District Court on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said he wanted to recognize the efforts of Sgt. Patrick Avery, Deputy Sheriff Brian VanMeter and Deputy Sheriff Todd Reeves who responded to the complaint and had the three suspects in custody within 30 minutes of the alleged assault.

City listens to residents' concerns on park plans

Charlevoix Downtown Park

Peter Pollack, head of the East Park design team Pollack Design Associates, presented three options at a public input meeting July 16 at Charlevoix Elementary School. A public input meeting for marina renovation is scheduled for 7 p.m., July 29 at the American Legion Hall in Charlevoix. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Over 50 Charlevoix residents gathered in the Charlevoix Elementary School gym to explore possibilities for the future of the town's East Park July 16.

The outcome of the public input meeting didn't produce concrete plans, but comments will help steer revamping of three plans by the design firm Pollack Design and Associates.

A common theme expressed by those who attended was, "less is more."

Peter Pollack, principal design engineer, said what he heard people say was be careful with the water and, "whatever choices are made, make things as real as possible."

Those who attended listened attentively to Pollack, as he presented three park design possibilities and cross sections of what the park may someday look like.

The plans included music performance amenity possibilities, including canopy and amphitheater options and placement of marina and Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce facilities.

When it came time for public input and questions, the key concern was the aforementioned buildings.

Karen Pierce of Charlevoix suggested the Pollack band facility design options were too modern and Earl Young architectural design, like the current bandshell, would possibly mesh better with the park.

But others said the Young design may be too heavy. The general consensus supported a use of "natural materials."

Talk of chamber facilities supported a small site, if any, but many wondered why not relocate the chamber to the former post office off Mason Street, which is currently owned by the city.

Gabe Campbell, current second ward councilman and primary candidate for mayor, echoed the opinion of many in rejecting altogether the concept of a chamber building in the park.

"I'm not anti-chamber of commerce, but I'm not pro-chamber of commerce. I don't know why in the world we would be building them a building. It's a political entity and I think that they do a good job for the city. But if they want to have an organization they should raise the money, the same as all the other organizations raise money to build a building," he said.

He supports the idea of a chamber facility on the outskirts of town and suggested the Clark gas station at the corner of US-31 and M-66.

One of the Pollack plans also showed chamber and marina facilities including showers, bathrooms and an Internet ready lounge, in the current United States Coast Guard facility under Bridge Park.

Vision, hearing tests for children

Certified Vision and Hearing Technicians from Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency provide free vision and hearing screening.

Screening programs for children are important as children have little or no comparison to know if they are seeing or hearing correctly. If problems are identified early, corrective treatment can be initiated and permanent damage or loss prevented.

When a problem is identified during the screening, the technician discusses the problem with the parent and recommends further evaluation. Changes in a child's vision and hearing can interfere with their ability to learn.

For more information, please contact Suzette Daly, R.N., Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency (231) 547-6523. To make an appointment, call (231) 547-0295 or (800) 432-3121.

How to get news into the local newspaper

If you have a news item you think would be perfect for the Charlevoix Courier, feel free to call 547-6558, e-mail charlevoixcourier@charlevoixcourier.com or visit the Courier office located at 112 Mason Street in downtown Charlevoix.

News items include events sponsored by non-profit organizations. Please inform us of your event at least two weeks in advance.

Our coverage area is the city of Charlevoix and its immediately surrounding areas, including Beaver Island.

Because of space limitations in the newspaper, we generally try to avoid publishing "check-handing" pictures or "ribbon-cutting" pictures. However, we will work with your organization to get a picture that reflects the event and is visually interesting to our readers.

Due to time constraints on the staff, we cannot attend every event we are notified of. If you have a picture of your event, we will gladly consider it for publication. But, please, contact us before your event.

It should be noted, each story and picture is dealt with on its individual merits. Any policies outlined above may be suspended by the editor or general manager of the Charlevoix Courier if necessary.

Data being collected on downtown traffic

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Representatives from Richard Lyles Associates of East Lansing — a traffic consulting firm — were in Charlevoix last week counting pedestrians and taking note of traffic hackups as part of a study on the city's traffic problems.

Several representatives from the company were stationed at four different intersections in downtown Charlevoix collecting data on traffic and pedestrians from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m., July 18 until July 20. Those intersections were Bridge and Antrim streets, Bridge and Mason streets, Bridge and Clinton streets and Bridge Street and Park Avenue.

Stephanie Aldighieri, supervising data collector for the company, said the information will be compiled and submitted to the city. This report will determine what the city can do to alleviate traffic congestion, if any.

Charlevoix Police Chief Dennis Halverson said this traffic study was precipitated by the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce's subcommittee on traffic. He said members of this committee came to the city earlier this year looking to see if there were ways to ease traffic congestion downtown.

The city then asked a traffic consultant — Richard Lyles Associates, who has worked with the city on past projects — to conduct a study and submit ideas for easing congestion.

Halverson said the city will be bringing the representatives from the company hack during the Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair on Aug. 10 for further data collection.

He added the city did not have the company observe traffic during Venetian Festival because that is considered a nontypical summer traffic scenario in Charlevoix.

"It is just assumed that these days are busy. The original direction we got was more of a broader look for the whole summer, not just Venetian Festival," Halverson said.

He expects a report on the traffic situation to be submitted to the city by the first week of September.

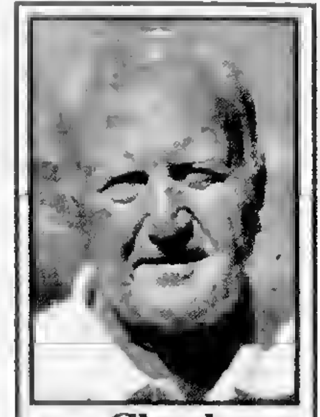
Local football legend to marshal Venetian parade

By LAURIE LOUNSBURY
Special to the Courier

When the Grand Marshal's car rolls down Bridge Street in the Venetian Street Parade Saturday, people lining the curb will get a glimpse of a man who made Charlevoix High School football the stuff of legends.



Chuck Fairbanks

This year's Grand Marshal is Chuck Fairbanks, a 1951 Charlevoix High School graduate. His story unfolds in Charlevoix, where his road to success began — and each fork in the road, each step in his career, can be traced back to Charlevoix — his parents, Ron and Grace Fairbanks, his family, his friends and teammates in this town and, of course, the late Ray Kipke, his high school coach.

"Coach Kipke was a very special mentor to me," Fairbanks said. "He had a major impact on my life. He was a former athlete, a Michigan State graduate, and Charlevoix was kind of an MSU town back then."

Before Fairbanks ever dreamed of being a Spartan, he was a devoted Charlevoix Rayder. As a young football player, he caught the athletic wave that gained momentum with the Carey brothers, and then rode that cresting wave all the way to some of the most prestigious jobs in American football.

Fairbanks likes to reminisce about those early days, when young men from small towns had the opportunities to get recruited by Big Ten powerhouse teams.

"Today, colleges are limited in how many players they can recruit," Fairbanks said. "Back then, they could take a chance on a college prospect from a rural area."

He points out that during his tenure as a Spartan, the team had nine northern Michigan players on the roster.

"The Carey hrothers (Chuck, Tom, Keith, Don, Bob and Bill) were head and shoulders ahove the rest... no doubt the best athletes that ever came out of northern Michigan," Fairbanks said. "I grew up with those boys. In fact, it was in Leo and Marian Carey's kitchen that I got recruited by Biggie Munn (MSU's head coach). It was my dream come true."

Today, there is no mistaking Fairbanks for someone other than the football great he was — rohust, tanned and muscular at age 69, Fairbanks is at once hoth friendly and formidable, traits that no doubt served him well over a half-century of being a team player, husband, father and coach.

His silver hair is neatly trimmed and combed confidently back from his broad, strong face. A first-time guest in his home will be struck by his graciousness and will simultaneously sense the sheer strength and power the man seems to radiate — leaving the guest not knowing whether to quickly put their hands in a "T" formation and call for a time-out or cower behind a sturdy piece of furniture.

In his college career at MSU, Fairbanks played on the 1952 National Championship Team, and the Spartans first Big Ten and Rose Bowl Championship Team of 1953. In 1954, he was selected to play in the Blue-Gray All Star Classic bowl game. It must have been a stellar moment in his life, yet Fairbanks pooh-poohs it modestly.

"I had a good game, but nothing I did was anything to write home about," he said with a shrug.

Fairbanks enrolled at Michigan State University as an accounting major, hut in his second year of college he realized he wanted to go into coaching, so he switched to an education major.

"Later in life I wished I'd stayed in accounting; that became more important with the jobs I had," Fairbanks said.

But Fairbanks had no way of knowing, while attending college, that he would go on to coach high school football, produce a string of winning teams in college football at Arizona State University, the University of Oklahoma and then land the joh of head coach and general manager of the New England Patriots.

He concluded his football career as one of the co-founders of the United States Football League, where he was co-owner, president and CEO of the New Jersey Generals.

When reflecting on his impressive career, Fairbanks reverts again to modesty.

"I think you have to be fortunate, among other things," he said. "There are many, many well-qualified coaches who could have done the same thing. I do believe I qualified myself at each step, earned the right to move on, based on past achievements. Then I was just fortunate to get the opportunities."

If you connect the dots of Fairbanks career, it's easy to trace it all back to Charlevoix, the outstanding athletes from this town who went on to MSU, and coach Ray Kipke, an MSU grad. Most of Fairbanks' early job opportunities came from connections and contacts he'd made at MSU. He apprenticed under some of the Spartan's finest players and coaches, such as Frank Kush and Bill Yeoman.

Fairbanks doesn't hesitate to spread credit around for his success. Among those he credits is his wife of 51 years, Puddy (Thomson) Fairbanks. The two were Charlevoix High School sweethearts and got married one week after high school graduation.

"Everyone said, 'That'll never work,' hut here we are, 51 years later, with five kids and 10 grandchildren," Fairbanks said. "Nobody in the world has heen more supportive of my career moves and changes than she is and always has been."

While moving all over the country, one thing remained constant in the life of the Fairbanks family — roots in Charlevoix. More than 30 years ago, the couple bought a home overlooking Lake Charlevoix and have spent summers there ever since.

When Fairbanks left in July every year for football training camp, his wife stayed behind in Charlevoix for six weeks or so, immersing their children in the joys and tranquility of northern Michigan.

Fairbanks' coaching achievements are too many to list, hut it is worth noting that in 2000, Fairhanks hecame the fifteenth recipient of Michigan State University's prestigious Jack Breslin Life Achievement Award. The award is presented annually to an alumnus whose post-college career hrings great honor to himself, and by way of reflection, to Michigan State University.

"I like being supportive of my community," Fairhanks said. "It's such a wonderful town, with so many great people. Venetian Festival has been a part of Charlevoix for so long, I feel honored to be asked to participate."

(Laurie Lounsbury is on the Board of Directors of the Venetian Festival and in charge of media relations.)

CONSIDERING TAKING ACTION IN REAL ESTATE?

"I have parked myself in front of a streaming real time quote machine nearly every working day for the past ten years, both in New York and here in Charlevoix. Investing in stocks can be rewarding, thrilling and recently, terrifying and brutally painful. The idea of investing, of course, is to maximize gain and minimize risk."

"Although risk is ever present in any investment, Real Estate may provide some advantages. According to the National Association of Realtors, the purchase of a median home appreciated at an annualized rate of 20.5% over the past three years! And, unlike capital gains realized in stock transactions, the current tax rules, as it pertains to gains from the sale of your main home, have allowed many who qualify exclusions from $250,000 to $500,000!"

"Additionally, it is no secret that some locations here in Northern Michigan are among the most desirable in the world! Just a little nudge in case you are thinking of doing something...and if you are thinking of buying or selling Real Estate in our beautiful little area, give me a call!

Residents share their ideas on new designs for East Park

City manager Mike Wiesner announced because the future of the Coast Guard ship ACACIA in Charlevoix is uncertain, the planning process will include design options with and without it. The facility where they are currently housed is 3,000 square feet.

Pollack said the chamber welcoming above ground kiosk, which was situated in Bridge Park in one plan and in East Park in another, would be about 20 feet by 20 feet and could serve as a warming hut in the winter for ice skaters.

For summer fun, Pollack designed an area at the southeast corner of the park at the end of the Clinton Street parking lot called water play, a series of fountains. While some supported incorporating the children's play area and aesthetic feature, others, including Charlevoix resident Kay Heise, said that's too much.

"I'm not interested in any concept that looks like an amusement park," she said.

Pollack's plans to level the steep terraces in the park to accommodate tents for art fairs and festivals and for seating and lake viewing were supported.

After the meeting Pollack gathered the input and headed back to the drawing board to prepare for a joint meeting of Charlevoix's City Council and downtown development authority, where another set of plans incorporating the public input will be discussed.

This meeting is scheduled to take place at 5:30 p.m., Aug. 15; a facility for this meeting has not been decided.

Wiesner said park renovations may start as early as 2005. Funding sources for the project have not yet been explored.

While park plans are being hashed out marina planning will get underway next week.

At 7 p.m., July 29 at the American Legion Hall at 106 East Garfield Avenue in the city of Charlevoix, the public is asked to voice their opinions on the future of the Charlevoix Municipal Marina.

Mayor Alvin Russell said, "We're asking for public comment on it and we want to know what they want, not what we want but what the people that live here and use it want down there."

Low interest loans available for farmers

In a continuing effort to expedite emergency disaster declarations in areas hit hard by adverse weather conditions, the United States Department of Agriculture recently designated 50 counties in Michigan as agricultural disaster areas, making farmers and ranchers in those regions immediately eligible for USDA emergency farm loans.

"This assistance will go a long way in aiding farmers devastated by severe weather," said Deputy Agriculture Secretary Jim Moseley who was in Michigan today to speak to participants of the Ag Expo. "We will continue to implement every available USDA program to assist farmers and ranchers through these difficult conditions."

USDA designated 26 counties as primary disaster areas. The counties are Allegan, Antrim, Benzie, Berrien, Cass, Genessee, Grand Traverse, Ingham, Ionia, Jackson, Kalamazoo, Kent, Lapeer, Leelanau, Livingston, Macomb, Manistee, Mason, Muskegon, Newaygo, Oakland, Oceana, Ottawa, St. Clair, Shiawassee and Van Buren counties. Also eligible for assistance because they are contiguous are Barry, Branch, Calhoun, Charlevoix, Clinton, Crawford, Eaton, Gratiot, Hillsdale, Kalkaska, Lake, Lenawee, Mecosta, Missaukee, Montcalm, Osceola, Otsego; Saginaw, St. Joseph, Sanilac, Tuscola, Washtenaw, Wayne and Wexford counties.

This designation makes all qualified farm operators in primary and contiguous disaster counties eligible for low-interest EM loans from the Farm Service Agency, provided eligibility requirements are met. Farmers in eligible counties have eight months from the date of this declaration to apply for the loans to help cover part of their actual losses. FSA will consider each loan application on its own merits, taking into account the extent of losses, security available and repayment ability.

USDA also has other programs available to assist farmers and ranchers in other states declared disaster areas, including the Emergency Conservation Program, Federal Crop Insurance and the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program.

FSA has a variety of programs available, in addition to the emergency loan program, to help eligible farmers recover from adversity. Interested farmers may contact their local FSA offices for further information on eligibility requirements and application procedures. Additional information is also available online at: http://www.fsa.usda.gov/pas/disaster/assistance1.htm.

PUBLIC MEETING

Charlevoix Marina and Round Lake Waterfront

Charlevoix's Marina, your thoughts and ideas are important!

The City of Charlevoix will hold a Public Meeting at 7:00 p.m. on July 29, 2002 at the American Legion located on East Garfield Avenue to gather input regarding the future of the City's Marina. This meeting, which is being sponsored by the Charlevoix City Council and the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority, will be gathering information as a basis for preparation of goals for a long-range plan for the marina area. The marina area plan will ultimately be prepared by the City's consultant, United Design Associates of Cheboygan, after the design goals are established by the DDA and the City Council following the public meeting.

Persons not available to attend this meeting may direct written communications to Michael Wiesner, City Manager, P.O. Box 550 Charlevoix, MI 49720, fax (231) 547-3617, email to chxmgr@unnet.com, or may call (231) 547-3270.

Michael R. Wiesner, City Manager

The City of Charlevoix will provide necessary reasonable auxiliary aids and services, such as signers for the hearing impaired and audio tapes of printed materials being considered at the meeting, to individuals with disabilities at the meeting upon one week's notice to the City of Charlevoix. Individuals with disabilities requiring auxiliary aids or services should contact the City of Charlevoix Clerk's Office in writing or call the following: City Clerk, 210 State Street, P.O. Box 550, Charlevoix, MI 49720 (231) 547-3250.

Additional patrols to be on the roads this weekend

Additional Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office law enforcement officers out on the roads on July 26, 27 and 28 will equal trouble for drunk drivers, as local police announce plans to launch "You Drink & Drive. You Lose." special patrols.

The "You Drink & Drive. You Lose." campaign is a widespread, ongoing crackdown on drunk drivers.

Charlevoix County will step up the number of law enforcement officers working to catch drunk drivers during the enforcement period. Increased enforcement has proven effective in reducing alcohol-related traffic crashes, injuries and fatalities in Michigan through changing driver behavior.

"Despite increased attention and growing concern, nearly 40 percent of Michigan traffic crash fatalities are alcohol-related," said Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater. "Our officers will be working during the weekend of July 26, 27 and 28 to ensure safety on our roads and to arrest all individuals who choose to violate the law."

Charlevoix County is putting forth efforts to reduce the number of alcohol-related traffic crashes, injuries and fatalities through periodic increased traffic enforcement.

- Wilson Township Hall, Boyne City.

When voting for a candidate for state or local office, remember to only vote in one political party throughout the ballot. For example, if you vote on a republican candidate for state governor, you must vote on the republican portion of the ballot for county commissioner and so on.

A primary election does not decide who will be named to the office in question, only who the voters want to proceed on to the November election to represent the various political parties.

The contested choices before the voters are:

- Governor — (Republican nomination) Dick Posthumus, John Joe Schwartz. (Democratic nomination) James J. Blanchard, David E. Bonior, Jennifer M. Granholm.
- Congressional representative for first district — (Republican nomination) Don Birgel, Don Hooper.
- Judge of the Court of Appeals, Fourth District — (Nonpartisan, but the two with the most votes go on to November general election) Thomas E. Brennan, Jr., James G. Cavanagh, Bill Schuette.
- County Commissioner, First District — (Republican nomination) Donald R. Smith, Valerie K. Snyder.
- County Commissioner, Second District — (Republican nomination) W. Randolph Frykberg, Frank J. Roselli.
- County Commission, Fifth District — (Republican nomination) Jon Jasinski, Dennis Jason, Arness L. Cox.
- County Commission, Sixth District — (Republican nomination) John A. Elzinga, Richard L. Gillespie, Shirley J. Roloff.
- Treasurer, Peaine Township — (Republican nomination) Donna Kubic, Christina Morgan.
- Mayor, Charlevoix — (Nonpartisan, but the two with the most votes go on to the November general election) Gabe Campbell, Alvin D. Russell, Steven R. Smith.

In addition, voters will be deciding millages in Peaine Township, St. James Township, Boyne Valley Township, Eveline Township, Hudson Township, Marion Township and Melrose Township. See page 27 for more.

To help voters determine the best way to vote, the Charlevoix Courier has included a question and answer interview with republican candidates for Charlevoix city mayor and Charlevoix County Commission District 1 — which includes the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township north of the bridge and Hayes and Bay Townships.

Also included in this issue of the Charlevoix Courier is a story detailing the many millages being requested by townships in the county.

The newspaper's election coverage will conclude next week with another question and answer interview with republican candidates for Charlevoix County Commission District Six — which includes the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township south of the bridge and Norwood, Peaine and St. James townships — as well as information on some of the candidates for state office.

The Charlevoix Courier will also have its editorial picks for those offices in next week's edition.

PRIMARY ELECTION

Candidates for mayor discuss city issues

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Only two of three city of Charlevoix mayoral candidates will still be in the running after Aug. 6.

Current mayor Alvin "Butch" Russell, second ward councilman Gabe Campbell and city resident Steve Smith will face off in the city of Charlevoix's Aug. 6 mayoral primary election. The primary will narrow the field to two candidates who will be on the Nov. 5 election ballot.

Alvin Russell

Russell, 58, is a Charlevoix native who has served as city mayor for the past four years. For 11 years prior to being elected mayor he was second ward councilman.

Russell owns local business, Charlevoix Towing, is married to his wife of 39 years, Betty, and has two children who also live in town.

Gabe Campbell

He faces current second ward councilman Campbell, 69, for a place on the November hallot. Campbell is in his eighth year as a councilman, is a member of the Credit Union Board and the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus.

He moved to Charlevoix in 1967 with his wife, Karen, who is currently vying for his vacant council seat. Karen will face D.J. Way in November.

The couple raised four children in town. He made his living locally at Medusa Cement Company, where he worked for 20 years.

Primary polls are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m., Aug. 6 at Charlevoix City Hall in City Council Chambers, 210 State Street, Charlevoix.

The following are questions and exact responses given by Russell and Campbell regarding their background and their opinions on issues facing the city.

Smith did not return several calls made to him concerning this primary election story.

Why are you running for mayor?

Russell — I enjoy the job. You have to enjoy what you do and I've been mayor for the last two terms. I was on city council 11 years prior to that, I like to see the accomplishments of the city.

I've had more and more complements all the time about the way I run the meetings and I let both sides speak; I'm there to run the meeting and listen to both sides and I think everybody should have their chance to speak, it shouldn't be one-sided.

Campbell — I would like to see the city take a different direction than what we're going in. I think overall we've been doing a pretty good job, but almost everything is slated to the wealthy. We're spending money I don't think is necessary. One of them was the Wharfside which I was for when it was $800,000 and one of the leaders in the community was going [illegible] $200,000, so it was going to be [illegible]. And we didn't get the grants and then when we reapplied, all of a sudden, they said these guys will pay anything and they jumped it to $1.2 million and then $85,000 for the demolition.

And on the sewer, (Marion Center Road extension to the new high school) I thought that young fellow from the township, I believe his name was (Elijah) Pace had more sense than anyone in the room. I mean why don't you stop and see if the case is reasonable or not. It was quite a waste of taxpayers' money. Now, Mike (city manager Mike Wiesner) says that it's in the master plan and that's fine. But I believe the reason for building the high school there was to put a development and 120 houses.

Now we're talking about putting in walkways across so they can have a convention center (in downtown Charlevoix). All in all, I'm not unhappy about most things. I've voted on quite a few things that cost money.

I'm going to vote for redoing city hall which is going to be very expensive, but it would be nice if it looked like we were in business; it's a disgrace when you walk in there. But for the most part, I think we do either cater to the north side or it certainly appears we cater to the north side.

What is your position on marina renovations?

Russell — I believe we need new docks down there, new floating docks. Probably, as you're aware and most people are, the water level is up and down, which causes a lot of problems and I do believe we need new floating docks. And my position on extending them would be what the community wants. If they want to extend them any further, I would support it. If they don't want them any further, I would support just replacing what's there with new floating docks.

Campbell — I think the marina should be fixed. It's in need of repair. The bulkhead should be fixed and the sidewalk should be redone because it's kind of hazardous the way it is, but I think that's the limit to what they should do.

Round Lake I believe is a beautiful lake and that's one of the main reasons I decided to run. Some of them want to try and make it look like Fort Lauderdale; if they like that they should move to Fort Lauderdale but it'll take the character out of the lake by extending the docks way out. I went down and talked to Andy Neumann and asked him if he had any way of stopping that grant if they were going to extend into the lake.

They're telling us every day we're at war, but then they want to put in $1 million to put docks out into the lake which will ruin the lake and make it difficult and hazardous for the boats that are already in there. We have a chance of losing Beaver Island business if we extend it too far because they're having a hard time going in there now.

Do you think the city of Charlevoix is fiscally responsible?

Russell — Yes I do. I don't know of any place we're just wasting money. Normally when we spend money it's for renovations of streets or beaches or that type of thing, property that we really need. I don't see where we're throwing away any money. I would hope we're not.

I have no problem at all with that (Wharfside purchase and demolition), I feel that was a good move on the city's part to add to the park. That property would be worth more and more all the time and yes it was a lot of money but I don't think there's another town anywhere that has the view Charlevoix has and the downtown walking traffic and I think it was a good move on the city's part.

Campbell — Well, I used to think so, but we don't have any money in the infrastructure. We have zero dollars in infrastructure (fund). We borrowed money from the cemetery fund, we borrowed money from the pension fund. When they were going to build that (development on Marion Center Road) I asked Mike (Wiesner), "Where are you going to get the money to buy that farm (which the development would have been located on)?" and he said he would get it from the electric fund. I said, "Well, that's a good place because that's the only one left."

If you take money out of the electric fund and then have a problem it will be the same as if we have a problem now with our infrastructure; we don't have any money and I don't think that's a sound way of doing business. I think we're trying to do too much. I would like to try and not eliminate stuff altogether, but slow it down, because I believe we're taxing people right out of town. I don't know if there is a block in Charlevoix without a house for sale. I've never seen that before. I've heard people say I'm on a fixed income and I can no longer afford to be here.

What do you feel the big issue facing the city is?

Russell — We are constantly getting behind in infrastructure, the streets, we're trying to keep up with it but you can't keep up with it. We only have so much money to do anything with. And I believe city administration is doing a real good job with that, but we have to continue. I would hope whoever is in there, city council or mayor, would continue to push redoing the streets.

Taxpayers can see where their money is going when you go down to Lake Michigan Beach, when you go down to Ferry Beach, when you see the streets, whether it be Belvedere Avenue or Michigan Avenue, this year it's going to be May Street, it's going to be State Street, they like to see what they are getting for their tax dollars.

Campbell — I think the park and the marina right now. I think they can make the park into, well I already think it's beautiful, but I don't think they should expand the marina and I haven't talked to anybody that said they wanted to extend it. The only one I found that really wanted to push for expanding are John Winn (Waterways Commissioner), Mike (Wiesner) and a few other ones. Grant money is still tax money and to build a bandshell and tear it down and rebuild it 10 years later is not very responsible. I think they can make some changes on it, put bathrooms on the back or whatever. But, I think it's fine right where it's at, they want to move it up toward the drugstore, that is going to look more cluttered than where it is I believe.

Please share with us how you will promote openness in city government and protect the right of the people to access information in light of the recent Open Meetings Act controversy by the Charlevoix County Commission's Personnel Committee?

Russell — I don't believe the city has held any meetings that haven't been open, other than talking about employees if they ask it to be closed. I'm not aware of the city being in violation of any Open Meetings Act and I would hope it continues not to be.

Campbell — First of all, I'll obey the law. There will be no meetings that the public isn't invited to, with the exception if you're talking labor contracts or something, you just about have to do that in order to have a viable contract. But one of the things that upset me this year, we have canceled four meetings and rescheduled one because they didn't have a quorum for the one they wanted to set up. We've done that in the past and I think it's wrong to cancel a meeting and then all of a sudden you have a special meeting and nobody seems to come and I think the citizens have the right to know everything. We're changing the city hall and it's going to be open to cameras and I'll push for that, because some people might not be able to come, but they can at least watch what's going on.

PRIMARY ELECTION

District One Commission hopefuls in primary

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Voters in the Charlevoix County Commission District One — which includes the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township north of the bridge, Hayes Township and Bay Townships — will decide on Aug. 6 which republican will continue on to November in the election.

Running for the republican nomination is incumbent Don Smith against challenger Valerie Snyder. The winner of the primary will face democrat Paul J. Richards in the November general election.

Don Smith

Valerie Snyder

Smith is a fifth generation Charlevoix resident and retired school teacher. He has been married for 33 years and has two grown sons.

Smith served 20 years as a volunteer firefighter, six years on the Charlevoix Township board and three years on county planning commission. He has also serves on the Big Rock Citizen Advisory Board.

Snyder grew up in Charlevoix and is a graduate of Adrian College with majors in journalism and English. She received a law degree in 1995 and has been a practicing attorney in Michigan since 1996. She is currently a partner of the Charlevoix law firm Joseph, Corcoran, Telgenhof & Snyder, P.C.

Snyder was previously a council member on the Charlevoix City Council until she moved out of the city. She has also been a board member of Keep Charlevoix Beautiful, a board member of the Charlevoix Yacht Club, a past Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce Ambassador and a past president of Emmet/Charlevoix Bar Association.

Recently, both candidates sat down with the Charlevoix Courier to answer five questions. Those questions are listed below with the candidate's answer.

Why are you running for the Charlevoix County Commission?

Smith — I've been doing the job for many years. I have enjoyed the work and I feel I have been a positive force for the community with the service that I have provided. I would just like to continue to do that.

Snyder — For a couple of reasons. First, I really enjoyed my experience on Charlevoix City Council and working in local government. I had to resign from that position when I got married and moved out of the township, but at some point I knew I wanted to get involved with local government again. I started following a little that was going on with the (County) Commission with the articles in the paper and I just thought that now would be a good time to get involved again. I would like to give a little bit back to the community and I think now is probably a good time.

What are the big issues facing the county?

Smith — Number one is growth as far as the county is concerned. I think we need to address that and make sure the growth that occurs is planned and that we have the infrastructure to handle it. I think a proper land use plan could be used as a model for other units of governmen, not a dictate, but a model and try to find a middle ground as far as the townships are concerned as far as master plans as far as zoning ordinances. If we can provide that service to townships who have to deal with the nuts and bolts of growth I think the county can provide a major service.

I think it is time for the county to have an administrator. We have a $9.5 million budget. We run the county through a part-time position it the county clerks office. I think we have grown to the point where someone with some financial management skills and human resource skills would more than pay for themselves as county administrator.

Snyder — Well I think that the hottest issue that everyone is talking about is the alleged violations of the Open Meetings Act and how the commission is conducting business. There has been a lot of talk in the media about where business is being conducted, whether it is done in restaurants or bars or actually done in regular public meetings like it is suppose to be done. So I think that is an important issue.

Another thing that is going to be important to the community is the benefits commissioners receive. My platform has been that I don't think that part-time commissioners should receive health benefits and pension benefits. They are currently eligible for them. They are the part-time county employees that are entitled to those benefits.

The other issue I think is important and has come to light because of this Open Meetings Act situation is the ability of commissioners to commit county funds. I don't think the county would have been in the bind that it had been had it not spent almost $13,000 in attorney fees, that were not authorized by the commission of the whole ahead of time. And actually the commission as a whole had denied hiring this attorney before the attorney bill came in and voted to pay it anyway. So, I don't think the commissioners should have that authority and they should know ahead of time that they don't have the authority to run up a bill like that.

What is your position on County Commissioners receiving health insurance, which they currently do?

Smith — I do not take it. Two years ago I offered a resolution to eliminate health insurance for commissioners. That would have been when we adopted the budget two years ago, because there would have been an increase in taxes and I said rather than increase taxes let's do some cutting. I offered that resolution and was defeated 5-1. I was the only "yes" vote and I haven't brought it up again because it is the same people that voted it down 5-1, so I wasn't going to do it every year. But with a new board we will see what the other commissioner's position is on that.

Snyder — I think they should be eliminated, the pension and health benefits. At least county funded. I hadn't thought about having at least the commissioners pay for them on their own. But, right now, we are using taxpayer dollars to fund those.

What do you think about the county's high surplus?

Smith — Our auditor recommends we have a six month fund as far as covering the budget.

COMMISSION

With a $9.5 million budget we need at least 4 million or 4.5 million as carry-over in case we have problems. So, we do have it as an emergency fund. The fund has been larger, but we did remodel the county building and built a whole new jail practically and remodeled the old wing with money out of the surplus. I feel this is a big plus for Charlevoix because there are people that would like to move the county seat to Boyne City. The more we do here as far as remodeling and expansion, I think the county seat will remain in Charlevoix for a long time. They are not going to build a new county building or jail in Boyne City, not in my lifetime.

Snyder — I think right now it is a $14.5 million surplus. I think that is a huge surplus. Typically what you budget is 10 percent over. I think our total spending in 2000 was $8.5 million. I am not sure what we can do about it. I mean, we can stop adding to the surplus, but I don't know what we can do as far as getting rid of the surplus we have. I don't think we need more of a safety net.

With all that has happened to the County Commission regarding charges of violating the Michigan Open Meetings Act in March, what will you do to ensure that the county keeps government open to the public?

Smith — In the future, I will personally check the posting of every special meeting that I attend. (Smith was accused of violating the Open Meetings Act along with two other commissioners in regards to a March Charlevoix County Commission Personnel Committee meeting.)

Snyder — The first thing you need to do is make sure you are not meeting with other commissioners in bars and restaurants. I think there was a quote in one of the newspapers that one of the commissioners said they conducted very little business. Obviously, you should not be conducting any business outside of a posted meeting, so I wouldn't be involved in that.

I also think that whether or not a decision was made at a meeting, I think deliberations are open too. I think the Open Meetings Act covers deliberations, not just decisions. But I don't even think deliberations should be taking place outside of a public forum. When you think about it, by the time you get to a vote, everyone has pretty much decided what they are going to vote anyway because of the deliberations. So that is really what I think needs to have public input.

I also think it would be a good idea to publish in the newspaper the summary of the actions taken at meetings. Right now I've noticed that the only thing that is published is a statement that says if you want to look at the minutes you can come to the clerk's office and look at them.

Voters to decide fate on several millages

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

Seven Charlevoix Townships will be voting on new and renewed taxes called millages during the August primary elections.

The seven townships are: Boyne Valley, Eveline, Hudson, Marion, Melrose, Peaine and St. James.

Boyne Valley Township Supervisor Leonard Zakrzewski said the township is asking for one-third of a mill for the next four years, which is the only township asking for a new millage.

However, the millage is not entirely new. Boyne Valley Township Clerk Nancy Dunham said last year it was three-fourths of a mill.

"We dropped it because we're getting along fine," Dunham said.

The tax money raised will be used to improve roads and to maintain the township's transfer station.

According to Zakrzewski, many roads in Boyne Valley Township need to be improved to withstand all kinds of weather conditions. He added that many roads are muddy or made of gravel, which makes it hard to drive on during winter.

The transfer station, where Boyne Valley residents take their trash, will be kept operational through the millage.

A one mill tax will cause taxpayers to pay one dollar per $1,000 of taxable value on a home or property.

Eveline Township is asking to renew a one mill millage for road maintenance.

Dan Skrzeczkoski, Eveline Township Supervisor, said road projects were discussed during the annual meeting, but nothing was decided upon. Skrzeczkoski said the money from the mill will be used to rebuild and wedge roads.

Hudson Township Treasurer Sharon Jepsen said the township is renewing a two mill tax for road maintenance.

According to Jepsen, Hudson Township will generate approximately $48,000 in the first year. Maintenance plans aren't decided yet, but Jepsen said some of the money may go toward repairing Iron Bridge and to finish paving Reynolds Road.

Road maintenance is the reason for a one-and-a-half mill for Marion Township that will last for three years.

According to Marion Township Supervisor Wilson R. Boss, the township has had the mill for the past six years. Boss added that in the first year, the mill is estimated to generate between $73,000 and $75,000 for the township.

Robert Drebenstedt, clerk for Marion Township, said the mill will not increase taxes, but only maintain them.

"If we want to keep it (roads) looking nice, we need to keep that 1.5 mills," Drebenstedt said.

Roads are important and so is the fire department. Melrose Township is asking for the renewal of two half mills that will go toward the fire department.

Annette Longcore, Melrose Township clerk, said one of the half mills will help to keep the fire department operational while the other will enable the department to purchase needed equipment.

The mills are expected to generate approximately $32,000 each during the first year, Longcore said.

According to Longcore, some of that money will go toward the purchase of a new fire hall.

The townships of Peaine and St. James on Beaver Island are wanting to renew mills they had in the past.

According to Peaine Township Clerk Colleen Martin, the township is asking for the renewal of two millages: One mill for roads and a three-fourth mill for the airport. The money from the road mill will go toward maintenance while the airport mill will generate money to keep it operational.

According to Martin, the one mill for the roads is expected to generate $44,089 and the three-fourth mill for the airport $33,066.

St. James Township is also asking for the renewal of two millages.

According to Don Vyse, St. James Township supervisor, the two millages include a three-fourth mill that will help keep emergency medical services operating and a one-fourth mill that will keep the Beaver Island Historical Society operating.

Information provided by St. James Township Clerk Jean Palmer states that the one-fourth mill for the historical society will generate approximately $7,702 during the first year.

Palmer's information also states that the three-fourth mill for emergency medical services is estimated to generate $23,106 during the first year.

Little league travel team ties at tournament

The Charlevoix Rayders 12 and under travel baseball team tied for first place in a round robin tournament in Millington last weekend.

The Rayders beat Cobra Gold of West Bloomfield, 11-10, Oxford 17-13, Millington 6-2, Burton 14-1, but lost to Mayville, 4-1. Charlevoix, Mayville and Cobra Gold ended the tourney with identical 4-1 records.

Against Cobra Gold, Ethan Towsley paced the Rayder hitters with two hits, a home run and three runs scored. Ty Telgenhof also had two hits, one of them a double and three runs scored. Nathan Golovich's single in the bottom of the fifth drove home Andrew Largent with the winning run.

Telgenhof was the winning pitcher in relief.

Golovich was three for three with two doubles and two runs scored in the win over Oxford. Sam Balasz was two for three with two runs scored and Largent was two for three. The Rayders rode an 11 run second inning to the win. J.D. Speigl picked up the win on the mound for Charlevoix.

The strong pitching of Telgenhof — three innings, two hits, one run, three strikeouts — and Speigl — two innings, one run, five strikeouts — keyed the Millington victory. Yaldo led the hitters, going two for two with a walk and two runs scored.

The Charlevoix bats exploded against Burton, led by Yaldo, two for three, walk, three runs scored; Speigl, three for four, triple, two runs; and Balasz, two for three, double, walk, three runs scored. The pitching was strong as well with Telgenhof hurling three no-hit innings and Speigl yielding only one run and striking out four in his three innings of work.

A bases loaded triple in the bottom of the fifth broke a 1-1 tie and gave Mayville a victory and dropped the Rayders into a first place tie. Ethan Towsley was two for two, Telgenhof doubled and walked in his two plate appearances. Andrew Towsley singled and walked. Speigl threw three shutout innings, giving up only two hits and striking out three.

Ethan Towsley led the hitting attack for the weekend, going seven for 13 with seven runs scored and eight RBI, including a home run.

Jeremy Yaldo was seven for 12 with eight runs scored in the leadoff spot. Speigl was also seven for 12 with a double, two triples and eight runs scored. Balasz was seven for 13 with six runs scored. Balasz was seven for 13 with six runs scored.

Telgenhof was six for 10 with two doubles and five runs scored. Golovich was six for 11 with two doubles, three runs scored and four RBI, including the game-winner against Cobra Gold.

On the mound, Speigl who was 2-0 with a save and 18 strikeouts in 14 innings pitched led the Rayders. Telgenhof was 2-1 with a save, highlighted by three no hit innings against Burton.

The first year team, comprised of Charlevoix 11 and 12 year olds, competed in three tournaments, Battle Creek, Flushing and Millington.

Information sought from former employees

HOSKINS

In Mio, tetrachloroethylene commonly known as PCE, a degreasing solvent has been detected in the groundwater. Side effects of PCE contamination include: liver and kidney damage and chronic skin disorders.

The big concern with PCE in the groundwater is what it becomes, vinyl chloride, a known carcinogen.

The Hoskins sites specialized in production of wire used in conducting heat.

The MDEQ is unsure at this time whether PCE contamination has impacted groundwater near the Lewiston Hoskins Manufacturing site. But Pelc said PCE contamination was extensive at both the Mio and New Paris, Ind. plants.

Pelc said the PCE was likely improperly disposed of in the 1950s, 60s and 70s, before federal and state regulations became stringent.

The site was inspected by the Waste Management Division of the MDEQ in the 1980s and 1990s, so the MDEQ is looking for earlier information regarding what chemicals and products were handled at the plant in those decades. And the agency is also seeking how those products were handled, so the environmental task force can go to specific areas to look for possible contamination.

"It's always important to have an employee's perspective on how things happened. This is not a matter of calling employees to task and blaming them; we want good information before we complete a groundwater and soil investigation out there," Pelc said.

Pelc stressed former employees will not be penalized for coming forward and that the MDEQ is interested in information and historical knowledge of the plant.

There were indications in one of the letters sent to the MDEQ that other degreasing solvents were used in Charlevoix and that other hazardous substances were also handled at the site.

"Each plant left behind containers of hazardous substances, oils and chrome product used in wire production. Others could be there as well," Pelc said.

No environmental data on the groundwater or soil at the Charlevoix site has been taken at this time.

Pelc submitted an investigation request which states she would like to start in on the project by late fall 2002 or spring 2003, but the desire to conduct soil and groundwater analysis faces one major challenge, access.

The property is still privately owned by the Armada Corporation. The MDEQ plans to request access in writing, but if the corporation's officials opt to deny its request, it will have to go through court to get an administrative inspection warrant, which will allow the agency to collect samples.

"It's a lot of work, putting together the warrant, explaining why it's needed and under what conditions it should be granted. It could slow us down considerably; we're still dealing with private property rights," Pelc said. "There are a lot of players involved and no one wants to claim responsibility. In the end we will do the investigation. It may take a while to get there, but then again they may sign the access agreement."

Former employees can contact Pelc by phone at (989) 731-4920 extension 3441 or in writing to the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality, attention Elaine Pelc, 2100 West M-31, Gaylord, MI 49732.

Previously, a lien was placed against Hoskins for back taxes owed to Marion Township. According to Bob Drebenstedt, Marion Township Clerk, the township received a check two weeks ago for the back taxes it was owed and released the lien last week.

Drebenstedt added that the township has received calls from Traverse City Realtors looking to locate condos at the site and inquiring about what the property is zoned. Other manufacturing options are also being explored.

Lightning, rain cause damage around area

STORM

tree limbs were down, their travel trailer had been moved several feet from where it was sitting and a neighbors patio umbrella took flight through a thick group of pines and landed in their front yard.

Martha said the weird part was that none of her front porch potted plants even budged, but wind speeds blew through open kitchen windows and rustled things up.

While city residents were flipping lights back on before noon, some Great Lakes Energy customers, most in the Petoskey area, were still in the dark Monday morning. The company expected to have their power restored late Monday.

According to a press release issued by the company, Sunday's lightening storms knocked out power for 2,800 of its customers in Charlevoix, Emmet, Antrim and Otsego counties.

Brian Hirsch, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service, explained while the storm felt stronger than normal, it was a typical Michigan summer storm with winds reaching around 60 mph.

"The good news is the storm did provide a great deal of rainfall to many people who were looking for it," Hirsch said.

The torrential downpours that doused Charlevoix and surrounding communities July 17 and 21 helped add three inches to the total rainfall for July. Last year in the month of July, Charlevoix received only 1.16 inches of total precipitation. As of July 22, Charlevoix had received 3.54 inches.

He said the storm was a result of weather activity all the way in Minnesota.

"We had some thunderstorms that started in Minnesota Saturday night and moved rapidly across Wisconsin and reached northern Lake Michigan and the northeast Michigan shoreline by 6-7 a.m. It's pretty fast movement to make it that quickly, you couldn't do it in the car," Hirsch said.

The national service issued a severe thunderstorm warning at 6:28 a.m. for Charlevoix. The service designates a severe thunderstorm as one which produces winds of 58 mph or greater.

He stressed the importance of a weather radio for instances like this when the storm comes in while residents are asleep and they don't have time to react.

Hirsch said he expects things to clear up Tuesday and Wednesday, with a break in humidity and cooler temperatures. He predicted a chance of thunderstorms for Thursday through the weekend.

New owners named for the Charlevoix Country Club

CLUB

said.

He explained that as a developer, he has accomplished what he set out to do. He had a vision of creating a country club for the community and that's been done.

"There's a lot of satisfaction in that. We're turning it over to someone with the hands-on ability to make it work, it is the best thing for everyone, members and residents," he said.

Over the past two years the nine founders have asked country club members if they are interested in buying the club, an ownership model Lobenherz said is common in country club settings.

However, he said the time just wasn't right for the members and then the Thomas' expressed interest.

The Thomas', who are moving into their new home in the country club this week after 33 years in Ludington, have owned multiple successful businesses.

Their most recent venture, Data Control Technologies, a cellular business still under their control, specializes in cellular communication and office automation. Data Control which has branches in Lansing, Ludington, Benzie, Traverse City and Grayling was recognized in the mid 1990s by the state of Michigan as the fastest growing independent company in the state over a five year period.

Kip has also dabbled in everything from banking to motor sports to computers to travel services and started two businesses his three children now own and operate.

His daughter, Renee Hansen of Ludington, runs Lakeshore Motor Sports, specializing in Suzuki motorcycles and boats. His son, Ryan of Cape Coral, Fla., and his daughter, Rachel Johnston of Fort Myers, Fla., together operate a Florida sign manufacturing company supplying signs to such big names as Disney and Six Flags theme parks.

This year Kip and Nicki were flirting with the concept of retirement after such success in business.

"I have a hard time stopping. This property met my needs. I don't want to reinvent the wheel, the only thing to do here is to smooth the wheel. The founders did a tremendous job developing the property from nothing," he said.

After one of his first full days getting acquainted with ownership, Kip said he made the right decision in not taking the traditional path to retirement. He looks at the undertaking as a fun challenge.

He had tried to buy a northern Michigan golf course, south of Charlevoix, 11 years ago, but the deal fell through. He has since looked at other courses, but something always seemed to make each an imperfect match, until he came to Charlevoix.

"It fit my interests more than any other course I've looked at. I love the property and the course is fantastic; anyone can play and enjoy it and make it as challenging as they want. The clubhouse is phenomenal and geographically the area is enticing to people all over the country," he said.

Kip spoke with several country club members at a membership welcome reception July 17.

"There probably won't be a lot of significant changes in the next year. Our goal is to get out to the community what is really here and to bring more local people into the membership," he said.

Country club membership is currently at 235 full memberships, which include golf and 100 social memberships, which do not include golf.

He explained the golf course will still be open for public use and he plans to make limited personnel changes.

Two of his close contacts, Cynthia and Brian Kautz, of Punta Gorda, Fla. will be replacing former club manager Ron Braniecki and director of membership and marketing Kathy Boyer.

Cynthia has a degree in communications and journalism and has taught at Punta Gorda High School for 15 years. Brian was head golf pro at Florida's Vines Country Club for 15 years.

These are some of the new faces behind the operation of the Charlevoix Country Club, which changed hands in early July. They are: (from left) Brian and Cynthia Kautz, general manager and membership director respectively and new owners, Nicki and Kip Thomas. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

The family of Terry Boss would like to thank so many for the kind words, help and support we received during the days following our loss. To Sheriff Lasater, thank you for the kindness you showed in being the bearer of bad news and the professionalism in which you handled things. To the hospital staff, all we can say is you were wonderful. Thank you for understanding. To Pastor Pete Aronson and his wife Patty, you knew Terry so well. The time you spent with us putting together the memorial was so appreciated. To Safe Harbor Baptist Church, it is not possible in words to thank you enough for all that you did – that little church is truly a family in Christ. To the community that sent so many cards and flowers as well as attending the memorial, Thank You. To Harbor Industries, who employed Terry for the past eighteen years – this company should be commended for the sense of family they give to their employees. Terry loved going to work every day. Other companies could learn a lot from Harbor Industries. All of those mentioned and some not mentioned is why Terry loved Northern Michigan. Thank You.

Sincerely,
The Family of Terry Franklin Boss

Happy 1st Birthday Lauren!

We're so glad you're here.

We love you and wish you a long life full of joy and happiness ... and may all your dreams come true.

Love, your family,
– The Reisings

Work already started on next year's festival

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

Dan Barron, president of the Venetian Festival Board of Directors, took a deep breath as he walked into downtown Charlevoix Sunday morning to sip coffee and peer out at Round Lake.... Charlevoix's whirlwind Venetian week was over.

No live music flowed from Bridge and East parks, no more carnival giggles filled Mason Street and the smell of popcorn and toasted cinnamon elephant ears was gone.

"The tranquility was overwhelming, it was a wonderful stark contrast. Life was immediately back to normal and I sat down and gathered my thoughts," Barron said.

Life during the Venetian Festival was busy — restaurants and hotels were full and merchants were hopping. And Sunday morning, with another successful Venetian Festival under his belt, Barron sat hack and smiled at Charlevoix's small town serenity, restored after seven days of celebration.

Last week, his role as president of the 10 person Venetian Festival Board of Directors, earned him a tan complexion from spending the week in the sun and a few gray hairs from his part in organizing two nights of fireworks, 45 bands, an hour-long parade and more.

To recuperate, he took Monday off from work, anticipating a long slumber. But, instead, he woke up early and got on the phone with Venetian Festival's master pyrotechnicians, Colonial Fireworks, and dialed a few Rhythms of Venetian acts.

That's right, at 8:20 a.m. Monday, Barron was planning the Seventy-third Annual Venetian Festival.

For those who partook in even one of the laundry list of Venetian events this year, Barron's year in advance pre-planning is believable. This year's celebration started July 21 and literally rolled straight through July 27.

Residents to start recall procedures

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

> "We're just hoping to get some people who don't take the lawsuit personally and are willing to work with the township."
> Nancy Ferguson,
> Eveline Township resident on a recall

The recall machine has been officially engaged by Eveline Township residents as they try to unseat township board supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski and clerk Don Hayden.

At 12:45 p.m., July 23 Eveline Township resident Nancy Ferguson filed a request for certification of recall petition wording at the Charlevoix County Clerk's office in Charlevoix.

"We're just hoping to get some people who don't take the lawsuit (facing the township) personally and are willing to work with the township. We need someone who is responsive to the people and that certainly isn't Dan (Skrzeczkoski) at this point and time," Ferguson said.

She explained that she and other township residents opposed to wind turbine generators being located on the property of Dawson Way near Ferry and Brock roads look to Skrzeczkoski for leadership and they feel he's failed to serve them in this capacity.

She feels his leadership failed during the zoning ordinance revision process that opened the door for turbines.

Residents, officials discuss marina options

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A Charlevoix Municipal Marina renovation public hearing proved the community's general consensus is, "bigger isn't necessarily better," but help funding any renovation has to mean more docks.

Community concerns voiced at the July 29 meeting at the American Legion, surrounded the initial design options drafted by the marina engineering firm United Design Associates of Cheboygan in the summer of 2000.

The designs depicted docks extending 380 feet into the lake with 83 slips and 390 feet into the lake with 111 slips, a huge change from the current marina which consists of 17 docks, the largest of which extends 75 feet into the lake.

City Manager Mike Wiesner described the United Design plans as, "a major intrusion without a doubt."

However, he said several times that this was never the city's plan and explained it was a way to show the state funding agency, the Waterways Commission, a survey of the available area.

"The Waterways mission is to create slips on the Great Lakes. We had to play the politics a little and asked United Design Associates to develop the maximum plans within the riparian area, to satisfy the funding agency. I don't think anyone was advocating them," Wiesner said.

Waterways Commissioner and Belvedere Avenue Round Lake waterfront resident John Winn echoed Wiesner's comments and said the state funding agency uses fuel tax from boaters and boater's registration fees for its projects. He said the commission would possibly fund 75 percent of the renovation and some costs associated with the East Park renovation, but boat slips have to be added.

Wiesner said, "We have to be realistic, we are dependent on Waterways funding and have to see some slip increase. I don't see the ability to do the project without them."

Winn said there is no designated number of additional slips needed to qualify for funding, but more than the 17 docks that currently exist have to be part of the plan to get the money. He stressed that he has a slip on Round Lake and has nothing to gain in any renovation or expansion.

Winn said transient slips are what Waterways is looking for and suggested a percentage of no more than 30 percent seasonal slips. The marina currently hosts 11 seasonal boaters and on July 29 was full with 58 boats.

Aside from resident's concerns about the effect a massive expansion could have on Round Lake aesthetically and environmentally, many questioned whether the Army Corps of Engineers and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ), permitting agencies, would allow such an expansion.

R.J. Button, a Belvedere Avenue resident with a home and dock on Round Lake, questioned, "If I can't get a 10 foot dock extension, how are you going to run 400 feet?"

A representative from United Design said during the drafting of the plans, the MDEQ was contacted but no official go ahead was given.

With that in mind, the meeting moved forward with design options drafted by local residents Josh Barnes, Charles Unbehaun, Richard Lepman and John Campbell and Water and Air Team Charlevoix (WATCH).

Barnes rendition of the marina renovation received high praise. He opened his presentation with something many residents were hoping to hear.

"My goal for the marina is to have the docks reach no further than the furthest dock there now," he said.

His plan straightens the bulk head and allows parallel sets of docks with a pier running north to south on the east. He said this pier stretches 330 feet and could accommodate tie-ups for transient boaters and a cruise ship during the shoulder seasons.

The WATCH plan was described by the environmental group's president Bill Henne as a compromise. It straightens the bulkhead, adds 15 slips and extends 150 feet into the lake at its longest dock.

The Unbehaun plan was similar to the WATCH layout, but added 26 slips and extended 210 feet from the renovated shoreline.

The Lepman plan was also a close neighbor to the Unbehaun and WATCH layouts, but it also included an underground parking idea. Lepman stressed the need to incorporate a focus on traffic, boats and parking.

The three plans were not well received by owners of the Ward Brothers Charter Boats, Don and

Venetian director arrested last week

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

An incident that occurred between a Venetian Festival Board member and the Charlevoix City Police at the Rhythms of Venetian Music Festival resulted in serious charges.

John Taylor, an Ellsworth resident, a member of the Venetian Festival Board of Directors and a Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority member, is facing two felony counts of resisting and obstructing a police officer and a misdemeanor for disturbing the peace following the incident that occurred July 22 in East Park.

Each felony count of assaulting/resisting/obstructing a police officer carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and/or a $2,000 fine. The disturbing the peace misdemeanor count carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and or a $100 fine.

That night of the incident was the end of the second full day of the Seventy-second Annual Venetian Festival events. The evening featured two blues concerts. The second, Dr. Duke Tumatoe and the Power Trio, was winding down when the episode occurred in the back northeast corner of the park.

There were an estimated 200 people in the park at that point.

In a police report about the incident, written by Charlevoix City Police Officer Jim Schlappi, he explains he was in the park with city park ranger Dan Bennett, watching Tumatoe's act, when around 10:30 p.m. he saw a verbal altercation between Mark Walter, a member of the Venetian sound crew, and Taylor.

In a written statement Walter reported he asked several people to move out of the line of sight between the sound booth and the stage so he and fellow sound technicians, Christopher Kellogg and Randall Nash, could see the band. The three technicians reported Taylor moved to the right and then stepped back to where he was standing, in front of the sound booth.

Walter returned and asked Taylor to step aside again. According to Schlappi and information given by Walter, Taylor responded, "F-- - you."

In Schlappi's report he added that Taylor's verbal response was accompanied by him swinging his elbow around, "as if attempting to strike the sound crew member."

'Just a thought'

This time of year always makes me feel a little conflicted.

This is one of those times when editors are asked to make a choice when it comes to politics. This choice is called an editorial endorsement. As a journalist, I really do not like coming out in support of one side over the other politically. But as an editor, it is something that I have to do.

I am faced with one of these moments right now as voters in Charlevoix prepare to cast ballots in the primary election Aug. 6. Therefore, I need to stress to my readers that these picks that I make are only my opinion.

I have chosen to discuss the race for Charlevoix City Mayor, Charlevoix County Commission Districts one and six and a Michigan Court of Appeals seat. The winners of these elections are not put into office, they only are allowed to proceed on to the November election to face other competitors.

Let's start with the Appeals Court, since it is the easiest for me. For this race we have three men running: Thomas E. Brennan, Jr., a district court judge; James G. Cavanaugh, a Lansing attorney; and Bill Schuette, a Republican state senator.

You may have noticed something odd right away on these candidates; only one of them actually has experience as a judge — Thomas E. Brennan, Jr. You would think that the best person for a job is someone who has experience at it, wouldn't you?

The others may be nice guys with good heads on their shoulders, but experience is what counts when I am voting for a judge, sheriff, prosecutor or clerk.

Next up is the race for Charlevoix City Mayor. With this one, all I have to do is pick the two candidates I think should go on to the November election. The candidates are: Incumbent Alvin Russell, council member Gabe Campbell and city resident Steven Smith.

When I attempted to interview each of the candidates for newspaper stories before this election, several telephone calls to Steven Smith were not returned.

In fact, on one occasion, a woman picked up the phone and proceeded to yell at me for calling Steven Smith's home. She told me never to call there again, even if I had to talk to him.

What does this tell me? Steven Smith will not be very accessible to the public if he was a mayor and it seems he was not very serious about this election in the first place, even though it was his candidacy that forced a primary election for the mayoral seat.

Therefore, I strongly suggest you cast your vote for Russell or Campbell.

Next, the Charlevoix County Commission. We will start with the District One seat for the Republican party. The winner of this primary goes on to face Democrat Paul Richards and Green Party nominee Bill Henne.

The Republican candidates are: Incumbent Don Smith and challenger Valerie Snyder.

You may remember Don Smith from the stories about the alleged Open Meetings Act violation by the commission's Personnel Committee. The State Attorney General's Office ruled there was no violation, but said the commissioners — Don Smith included — came dangerously close to breaking the law.

Snyder is a new mother and a respected lawyer for a local law firm. She was also a member of the Charlevoix City Council who worked hard for her ward.

To be fair, Don Smith has worked hard for his district and has pretty good plans for the future that need further thought, such as a county administrator. But, I just can't seem to shake this Open Meetings debacle out of my mind.

The part that keeps coming up was how Don Smith asked a deputy clerk to leave the committee meeting, so the discussion could be more frank and honest. If he thought this meeting was posted — as he said he did — then why did he ask someone to leave it?

Plus, I am having trouble with a report in a police investigation of the incident where he called this deputy clerk at home saying he was looking for a "scapegoat."

It all seems a little funny to me. Therefore, to be on the safe side, I think it is time for a change on the county commission and I am endorsing Snyder.

Lastly is the race for County Commission District Six. The candidates are: Incumbent Shirley Roloff, challenger and former commission member Richard Gillespie and challenger John Elzinga.

First of all, Elzinga is a very, very nice man who I had the great pleasure of meeting recently. The problem is, he recently moved to Charlevoix County. Therefore, I can't endorse him.

Now it is down to Roloff and Gillespie, making it a very hard choice. Both of them have worked hard for the district as commissioners.

Roloff has been tireless in spearheading several new programs, such as recycling, and has great plans for the future. Gillespie is a great voice for the areas of his district which seem to get forgotten, Beaver Island and Norwood Township.

I just can't make a pick here. So, I am not going to.

To help you in your decision, take a look at our story on this race on page 32.

Lastly, good luck to all the candidates.

'Ear to the ground'

The 2002 Michigan Fishing Guide lists five of what it calls aquatic nuisance species.

First the Eurasian Ruffe, which is a small perch-like fish, even if its name suggests it might be some exotic breed of dog. The Zebra Mussel makes the list, although calling that mussel a nuisance is an understatement equivalent to calling Lake Michigan a nice little lake. The Rusty Crayfish is included, as are the Round Goby and the Tubenose Goby. Both the last two are fish imported by accident in bilge water from somewhere near the Black Sea.

We are encouraged by the DNR to prevent the further spread of these kinds of creatures, which some feel threaten native species of fish or shellfish.

But since they are already part of the general aquatic scene in the Great Lakes, there must be more comprehensive solutions. If a nuisance can be turned into profit, if a potential problem can be converted into an opportunity, then the entrepreneurial spirit so strong in America will manage the problem.

I have some suggestions, based on both personal experience and historical analysis.

For those of you not familiar with the now-resident Gobys, they are small fish, up to 8 inches long, that dwell in rocky places. The easiest way to see one is to drop any part of a nightcrawler on a small hook into the rocks near the edge of the Pine River Channel. Wait 10 seconds and pull in a Goby.

Writer's idea for dealing with foreign lake species

They look something like a small catfish and have a sucker-like disc on their underside. They are a nuisance if you are trying to catch Smallmouth Bass, but they have potential. Alan Davison, one of the world's best known writers about fish and fish cookery, says Gobys are a food fish of some importance in Turkey and even in France.

I caught, skinned and cooked four Gobys a couple of weeks ago. When marinated briefly and gently sautéed they taste like catfish. They have no small bones if filleted properly and look good on a plate.

I can almost imagine one of our more avant-garde local restaurants providing a sort of Goby Nouvelle Cuisine. A half dozen Goby fillets, a bit of watercress and a delicate cream sauce.

It might not solve the Goby problem completely, but if we can eat them, they are a resource, not a nuisance. One has only to decide how to catch enough of them to sell to eateries. It might also be a good idea to change their name. A Tubenose Goby just doesn't sound appetizing. How about Black Sea Catfish? That's no more a lie than calling a fish Chilean Sea Bass, rather than its proper name Patagonian Toothfish.

The Rusty Crayfish provides a similar opportunity. Most of the crayfish that live off our local Lake Michigan shore are of that nuisance kind. I can attest that they taste at least as good as the Louisiana variety. After an all night strong west wind, it is possible to pick up hundreds of them still alive from the beach north of the Pine River Channel. Extracting the meat is labor intensive, but the outcome is worth it. At our house we look forward to Michigan Crayfish Etouffee at least once each summer.

I see in my imagination a dense set of commercial crayfish traps in shallow water and a great culinary opportunity for someone willing to bet on an unusual local food item. I offered a few hundred of them to one of our restaurants a summer ago and was met with a long silence, but then I am not as good a salesman as many entrepreneurs.

It should be easy to get enough Zebra Mussels for almost any project, although I can't recommend them as human food. But think about this. Ground and dried Zebra Mussels as chicken feed. They have high protein, sufficient fat and the calcium-rich shells needed for laying hens is already incorporated. I offer it as a free idea to any adventurous entrepreneur.

Using a nuisance for food is not exactly a new idea. Some may recall that Jonathon Swift satirically offered it in the early 1700s as a solution to the Irish Problem. It will probably work as well for us as it did for the English 300 years ago.

Many thanks go out to the Venetian Committee, Dan Barron and his staff, all the wonderful volunteers, and financial contributors. Correction

Editor:

In your July 24, 2002 article on County Commissioner candidates for District One, you said that the Republican primary winner would be running against the Democratic winner. You neglected to mention that a third candidate would be on the ballot in the fall election.

I will be running as a Green Party Candidate. I feel that it is important that all candidates be represented. I want to be sure that the people of the first district know about my candidacy. I am available to answer questions or make comments about the issues at any time.

Roloff helped in recycling

Editor:

Recycling in Charlevoix County is nearing the completion of its second year. It has been an extremely successful program due to the participation of our citizens. We would like to give a special thank you to Charlevoix State Bank and WATCH, who each took one month to monitor the Charlevoix site. We hope other groups might also be interested in helping at the Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City sites.

Our program continues to grow. In September, Charlevoix will have its first household hazardous waste collection. Please watch the paper for further details on time, place, how to register and items that will be taken.

The Charlevoix County Recycling Committee is chaired by County Commissioner Shirley Roloff. She brings a dedicated enthusiasm to this role. Meetings are on time and on task. In addition to carefully watching the budget, working on contract wording and bringing new ideas, Shirley also takes her turn at monitoring the Charlevoix site and all the other "assignments" listed by the secretary at the end of the meetings.

Charlevoix County Recycling works because of the commitment of our citizens, the committee members and Shirley Roloff.

Charlevoix investors react to stock market

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

The stock market has been on a steady decline, but not every investor is losing all they have, as people are all affected differently when the market takes a plunge.

Financial Counselor Garrett Miller of Investment Planning Associates in Charlevoix said people are financially and emotionally affected by the stock markets down turn.

"It's the normal operation of the market over an extended period of time," Miller said.

Investors react to the down turn differently and Miller said some have sold part of their stock and reinvested in safer areas while others see the decline as an opportunity.

According to Miller, government bonds and municipal bonds have done well despite the decline.

Investment Advisor Derek Chowen of Edward Jones in Charlevoix said many of his investors haven't been devastated by the decline in the market. He added that the affect the market has on individuals depends on what they have invested in.

According to Chowen, the technology and telecommunications sectors of the market have been affected the most.

Despite the negativity surrounding the market right now, Chowen said many of his clients have been buying stock. He added that some have sold only to reinvest it in other areas.

The ups-and-downs of the market are temporary and Chowen said the market will eventually rise, but the time it'll take is unknown.

Steve Floto, a sales associate for Vacation Properties Network, worked on Wall Street for seven years and was involved with money management. Floto was also engaged in position trading for his own account for three and a half years.

As of July 19 he no longer manages money professionally.

"A position trader trades financial instruments and holds the instruments, long or short, which is a position, overnight," Floto said.

Floto said that historically when the stock market was down it eventually rose again.

For the stock market to increase, Floto said some new business or technology will have to emerge with the ability to impact the economy.

Floto said the confidence investors have in the market can be restored if Osama Bin Laden is captured or killed and if Americans "regain trust in accounting practices subsequent to events that occurred with companies like ENRON and WorldCom."

"There's a huge problem with investor psychology right now," Floto said.

Her bouquet was blue bird roses, bells of Ireland, dark purple stock, white freesia and a touch of greens.

The organist for the ceremony was Ruth North of Charlevoix and the soloist was Chris Dominic of Charlevoix.

The maid of honor was Holly Curtis of Alanson. The junior bridesmaid was Alicia Valler. They both wore dark purple satin sleeveless gowns and carried bouquets that were smaller versions of the bride's.

WIN THIS CAR!

This 1934 roadster will be auctioned to raise money for Charlevoix Area Hospital. Patti Aikin and Sharon Blossom, co-chairs of Holly Daze and Lowell Blossom, owner of the car stand next to it. (Courtesy photo)

Irresistible, embraceable, lovely to look at... all adjectives used by Patti Aikin and Sharon Blossom, new co-chairpersons of Holly Daze 2002 to describe this rare vintage roadster donated by Lowell and Sharon Blossom of Charlevoix. Raffle tickets are now available to purchase with proceeds going to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The 1934 Singer LeMans, built in Coventry, England, is one of only 100 produced and is valued at $18,000-$20,000. The dark red two seater sports car with tan interior has a 4 speed manual transmission and hydraulic brakes. This racy car comes with a full top, side curtains and dual mounted spare tires.

Holly Daze, a major fundraiser, includes a live and silent auction event and a week long silent auction held at the hospital culminating with the raffle drawing on Nov. 30, 2002. According to the new co-chairpersons, raffling a vintage sports car will certainly be one of the many new highlights of the hospital's 10th annual event and an opportunity to buy a piece of history.

Tickets are $50 each or 5 for $200; a real bargain for a unique car in such beautiful condition. For more information or to purchase raffle tickets, call 547-8685. The car will be on display at various events throughout the summer and fall and only 500 tickets will be sold.

New zoning ordinance may face referendum

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

After two years of work, the Charlevoix Township Board passed its revised zoning ordinance, but a referendum could mean it's back to the drawing board.

The board unanimously passed the ordinance July 15, but township resident Charles Scherping filed a letter of intent to mount a referendum campaign July 22 with Charlevoix Township Clerk Carol Martin.

Scherping has until Aug. 14 to gather over 104 signatures to bring the ordinance before the voters and ultimately to decide its fate.

If he is able to gather those signatures before the deadline, the Nov. 5 election ballot will ask voters whether or not they will accept the ordinance.

Until Aug. 14 the township's original zoning ordinance is in effect. After that date the new ordinance will be law.

The township planning commission met June 19 at one of three public hearings where this ordinance was discussed with many residents who attended. The commission then met at a special meeting June 26 and voted unanimously to recommend to the township board that it approve the ordinance.

Following the planning commission's decision, the Charlevoix County Planning Commission met July 11 and reviewed the ordinance. It too recommended approval, with minor changes.

Nancy Rajewski, planning commission chair and township board trustee, said the county planning commission recommendations were not incorporated into the final ordinance because of the likelihood of referendum.

"We didn't do anything with the county's recommendations at this point. We knew there was a possibility it would go to referendum and wanted to get it in so it would be on the November ballot and we were on a time frame," Rajewski said.

"We'll go through those afterward, none were major changes. If it doesn't go to referendum then we'll look at the county's recommendations and see what ones we need to do."

Any changes to the zoning ordinance would require public hearings, a planning commission recommendation and a township board decision.

The board based its decision to hold off on integrating county recommendations on its experience last summer, when just as the ordinance was revised and ready to be instated, a group of residents, including Scherping, found out about the changes, reviewed the ordinance and concluded it was restrictive and violated their rights.

Scherping then gathered 109 signatures from township residents and generated a referendum.

Residents went to the polls on Sept. 18, 2001 and rejected the ordinance by a vote of 223 to 114.

Now the revised zoning ordinance has again been approved and Rajewski feels in spite of Scherping's opposition, the revisions do address residents' concerns.

"We compromised, we listened to the people, we've had at least three public hearings and sent every voter a letter before the planners (planning commission) voted. The letter told people what was changed and asked them to come to the hearing and let us know what they want to do," Rajewski said. "We've done everything we can to notify people to let them know we're not trying to bamboozle them."

Some of the notable changes include the omission of a permit requirement for fences and a change in the limitation on the number of animals permitted in agricultural zones. The ordinance's purpose was also elaborated on, as were waterfront requirements.

The revised ordinance also lowered the density in both planned unit development (PUD) and planned residential development (PRD) zones.

"We've tried for at least 20 years to get this density and PUD and R-4 (PRD) lowered," Rajewski said.

But in spite of their efforts it looks as though Scherping is bound and determined to bring the issue before the voters.

In a previous interview, he said, "I think they are trying to do something over and above what needs to be done."

The two year ordinance revision process has required countless hours of work and has cost the township close to $20,000 in election costs and expert insight and drafting fees paid to its planner, Fred Hoisington of the Traverse City consulting firm, Gosling and Czubak.

"Our current ordinance was last revised in 1987; we really needed to get up to date language," she said.

The ordinance can be reviewed at the Charlevoix Township Hall located at 12491 Waller Road, at the Charlevoix County Planning Department located at 301 State Street in Charlevoix and at Charlevoix Public Library located at 109 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

The township hall is open from 9:30 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday.

Bills officially takes helm of the ACACIA

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In a change of command ceremony Thursday, July 25, in Bridge Park, Lt. Commander Keith Bills officially took over control of the United States Coast Guard ship ACACIA in Charlevoix.

Bills takes over for outgoing Commander Michael Shomin. Shomin is being sent to Cape May, New Jersey.

This is the second time Bills has been stationed in Charlevoix. In 1988, Bills was the operation officer and navigator onboard the MESQUITE, which was stationed in Charlevoix before the ACACIA.

"I fell in love with Charlevoix right away," Bills said. "I always knew I wanted to come back. Now I want to stay. I am planning on retiring here."

Bills said he thinks the people of Charlevoix add to the beauty of the area with their friendly attitudes.

He added he is excited to meet the many people that make up Charlevoix. He said his door is always open to the public.

"Come and see me if you want to discuss some things," he said.

Bills joined the Coast Guard in 1977 and was first assigned to the Halteras Inlet Station, where he served as boat crewman and coxswain of a motor surfboat. He was later assigned to Jonesport, Eastport, Woods Hole, Mass. and Kodiak, Alaska before coming to the MESQUITE in Charlevoix.

"I fell in love with Charlevoix right away. I always knew I wanted to come back."

Since his stay in Charlevoix, Bills has been the commanding officer of the Coast Guard Cutter POINT BONITA in Portland, Maine, was the Aid to the Navigation Branch in the First Coast Guard District in Boston, Mass — where he also served three months temporary duty in the Arabian Gulf during Operation Desert Storm — and was commanding officer of the Coast Guard Cutter BISCAYNE BAY in St. Ignace.

Keith Bills

In 1998, Bills was promoted to his current level and served the Aids to Navigation Branch of the Eighth Coast Guard District in New Orleans, La.

Bills has a wife, Becky, and two daughters: Hallie, 9, and Jessica, 11.

During the ceremony where he officially took control of the ACACIA, Bills was greeted by the Charlevoix Community Band, whom he was highly complimentary of.

"I was very impressed with the band. Every single musician was very good," he said.

Also during the ceremony, outgoing commander Shomin expressed his gratitude to the people of Charlevoix. He said he will miss the people and the area and hopes to come back again someday.

"I loved Charlevoix more than anywhere else," he said.

Bills took the ACACIA out for his first run on Tuesday to perform some drills in the area.

Area fund-raisers help many organizations

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Three recent happenings in Charlevoix, and one that is just around the corner, prove some local events are more than entertaining.

Proceeds from Symphony on the Green, Home Tour, Garden Walk and the upcoming Charlevoix Area Community Pool Auction benefit local beautification efforts, educational endeavors and nonprofit community support services like Charlevoix Area Hospital and the public pool, ensuring Charlevoix's residents are served by quality care and services in a beautiful environment.

The entertaining fund-raising kicked off with the Fourth Annual Symphony on the Green July 14 at Dunmaglas Golf Course and raised $64,615 for the hospital expansion project, $20,000 more than was raised last year.

The funds bring the hospital within arms length of fulfilling its $6.5 million expansion goal. Construction fundraising started in the spring of 2000 to back a larger obstetrical department and a new emergency wing.

According to hospital event coordinator Patti Barraw, over 400 people filled the barn and lawn area at the course to hear.showtunes presented by the Traverse Symphony Orchestra. One of the afternoon event's highlights was a rendition of Leroy Anderson's "The Typewriter," a showtune literally played on a typewriter.

The Kappa Sigma chapter of Beta Sigma Phi also donates proceeds from its annual Home Tour to the hospital project.

This year's twenty-fourth annual tour took place July 10 and showcased six local homes. According to co-coordinator Ellen Jenson, it raised an estimated $9,000 for the hospital and the Judy Edger-Sue DeYoung Memorial Breast Cancer Walk.

The event sold 677 tickets, down 200 from last year and Jenson said the sorority feels this is due in part to inadequate news coverage. The sorority is also considering moving the event date from its traditional first Wednesday following July 4 to a Saturday, to increase participation.

Tricia Petrosky will chair next year's event.

After two years of hospital fund-raising, including events like the symphony and home tour, a dedication ceremony and grand opening of the emergency room is scheduled for 4 p.m., Aug. 11.

While the hospital continues to grow with the help of fund-raising, so too do area gardens, thanks to the Charlevoix Garden Club. The club currently plants and maintains six gardens around town and helps fund the streetside petunia planting effort, due in large part to their major fundraiser, the Garden Walk.

This year's fourth annual walk, "Old Fashioned Gardens" took place July 17 and featured five gardens and a standard flower show at the Depot Museum. The group sold 400 tickets and Mary Kengle, the event chair, said that beat last year's record.

The club is working to expand its garden at Charlevoix Area Hospital where patients and visitors enter and to establish a heritage garden at the Depot Museum.

Those who missed these fun fund-raising afternoon activities can participate in the upcoming annual pool auction scheduled to take place Aug. 4.

The auction helps support the facility's continued presence in the community as a place where residents and visitors exercise, have fun and learn water safety.

The "Typewriter Song" was performed during the Symphony on the Green on July 14 at Dunmaglas Golf Course. The event was just one of many fund-raisers in the area this summer. (Courtesy photo)

Porter opens new dental office in Charlevoix

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

After a hiatus as a fund-raising consultant, Dr. Jeffrey Porter has returned to dentistry in Charlevoix with a newly remodeled office overlooking Round Lake and equipped with many high tech tools designed to make procedures easier for the doctor and patient.

"I missed patients and I think patients missed me. I have made a true commitment to dentistry," Porter said.

Porter had been a dentist for Charlevoix and Beaver Island for 27 years, before he left the practice to go into business as a fund-raising consultant. With a certificate for fund-raising management from Indiana University School of Philanthropy, he helped raise money for several area nonprofits, including the Crooked Tree Art Center.

But, for as much good as he was doing for these groups, Porter said travel associated with the job was starting to get to him. So, rather than retiring, Porter went back to dentistry, adding he has 15-20 more years with his patients ahead of him.

"I thought I could certainly practice, rather than sit here and watch stuff on television or play golf every day. I think there is more to life than doing that."

So, Porter started searching for a new office location to reopen his practice. And he found a grand site that needed a little revamping in the downtown area.

"I also enjoyed being downtown and taking a space that needed rehabilitation and turning it into a twenty-first century dentist office," Porter said. His office opened in May.

Patients in his office can watch the United States Coast Guard Ship ACACIA and Round Lake through windows that are mirrored on the outside, creating privacy for the people in the dental chair.

Additionally, Porter uses some of the most up-to-date equipment on his patients, such as a high speed drill that is very quiet and fully computerized records of his patients that can be accessed at the touch of a button.

He is planning on more high-tech additions to his office, including digital x-rays. Digital x-rays could make film processing obsolete and allow dentists the ability to e-mail x-rays to specialists instantly.

Porter provides patients family dental care, comprehensive restorative dentistry, dentures, cosmetic bleaching of teeth and preventative services. He is a member of the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, the current vice president of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Committee and a member of the Charlevoix Lighting Committee.

Porter's office is open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Thursday. Other times are available by appointment.

He can be contacted by calling (231) 547-9516.

Geneology meeting Aug. 1

The Charlevoix County Genealogical Society will have Elden Johnson as its guest speaker at the Aug. 1 meeting.

Johnson has been researching Antrim County families for about 15 years. He has compiled a computer database which includes Antrim County families from the 1850s to about 1908, the county censuses from 1860 to 1880, cemetery transcriptions for all the county cemeteries and some adjoining areas, early obituaries and much more.

Johnson is currently working on a book on Antrim County family history which will be coming out soon on compact disc.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Johnson will begin speaking and answering questions at 8 p.m.

It will take place in the basement community room of the Boyne District Library located at 201 East Main Street in Boyne City. The public is invited to attend at no charge. For further information contact Joy at (231) 582-3440.

Roloff responds to flyer being sent out by Elzinga

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

In response to a flyer being sent to Charlevoix County Commission voters in district six by candidate John Elzinga, incumbent candidate Shirley Roloff sent the Charlevoix Courier a letter saying the flyer is wrong.

In the mass mailing, Elzinga makes several charges against Roloff on topics such as health insurance for commissioners, spending county tax dollars and the recent charges of an Open Meeting's Act violation by the commission's Personnel Committee.

Elzinga said all his information came from newspaper reports and a "reliable source." He added he stands by everything in the flyer.

"As far as I know, it is all true," he said.

Roloff said before she sent the newspaper a letter regarding the flyer, she called Elzinga and told him the charges he made in the mailing were not true. She added she told him to find out himself what is true and not true about her, because she can back up her record.

"He should name those 'reliable sources,'" she said. "I don't like to do this. This is not my way of getting into office. My record should stand for itself. I want to know where this is coming from."

In the flyer, Elzinga states, "....County Commissioners work part time, seldom meeting more than twice a month. Yet both of my opponents (Roloff and candidate Richard Gillespie, who is a former commissioner), while serving on the county board have voted themselves a salary and fringe benefit package that now costs you the taxpayers up to $20,000 per year/per commissioner."

Roloff responds, "For the past four years, I have averaged over 12 meetings per month. Attending some of these meetings in Traverse City and Beaver Island."

As for the charges of a salary and fringe benefit package, Roloff said she has not voted on any salary or benefit package for the commissioners and none of the commissioners make $20,000 per year. She added she did vote against cutting the commissioners health insurance in 2001.

Elzinga also states in the flyer that taxpayers pay for a "Generous Retirement Package" for the commissioners.

Roloff said she does not receive any type of retirement plan from the county and does not expect to.

Elzinga also brings up Roloff's involvement in a lawsuit over a reapportionment plan last year.

"....adding insult to injury, last June my opponent joined in a lawsuit to create another commissioner's district, potentially costing taxpayers another $20,000 a year or more — the Court of Appeals quickly rejected her lawsuit," Elzinga states.

Roloff responds, "I joined with others to have the judge look at both plans submitted to the Reapportionment Committee (John Haggard's plan and Jane Brannon's plan — which was adopted). What was so wrong about that decision? The filing fee was paid by the individuals filing the petition, not Charlevoix County."

Finally, Roloff takes issue with the flyer's statement regarding charges of an Open Meeting's Act violation by a county committee. The Michigan State Attorney General's office investigated the meeting and said there was no violation.

Elzinga's flyer states, "And there's more....my opponent voted to pay a downstate lawyer (Pete Patterson) over $12,000 to help her fellow commissioners avoid charges for their secret meetings."

Roloff said there were no secret meetings, according to the Michigan State Attorney General.

"I did not hire a downstate lawyer. I voted to pay his bill the same way we approve all other county bills, whether I liked it or not. We had no other choice," she said.

Music mixed with other types of fun throughout Venetian week in Charlevoix, as people young and old danced, took part in the Kids'Day activities or the carnival. Charlevoix ends festival with a colorful boom

Large crowds attend musical events at festival

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson estimated over 100,000 people were in town during the week.

Halverson said the caliber of the musical entertainment made last year's Friday and Saturday crowds a thing of the past. This year, "1964: The Tribute," Beatles impersonators had East Park packed with Beatle mania Thursday night and the crowds didn't stop until Sunday.

The three-night all out party had the police on its toes. Over the seven day festival, seven of the city police officers logged a combined 100 hours of overtime.

During that time they dealt with normal calls like keys locked in cars, traffic accidents and parking violations, but indulgent revelers added alcohol-related incidents to their list. Halverson pointed to minors in possession, driving while under the influence of alcohol and disorderly people.

"This pushes us to the limit with manpower and they (city police officers) responded very well to that," he said.

Halverson estimated crowd numbers peaked Saturday when 25,000 people were packed into East, Bridge and Chamber parks for the annual Grand Electrical Boat Parade, featuring 14 entrants and a "Fireworks Tribute to the Armed Forces."

First place big boat parade honors went to THREE WISHES owned by the Wellmans, decorated in the theme, "Yankee Doodle Dandy" and first place small boat honors went to the Collier family's GOT BUGS.

Following the boat parade and fireworks display, many exclaimed they caught a show to remember.

Barron said this year's Saturday night stadium fireworks were double the explosive charge of last year as he boasted Charlevoix was host to a big city show with innovation to spare.

Saturday's first rate fireworks followed a night most people said can't be beat. Crowds stationed at area beaches, and in East Park, erupted with supportive cheers following Friday's fireworks show. Barron said this year Colonial shot off 3,000 pounds more explosive charge than last year.

Evening entertainment that included those fireworks shows and live music was complemented this year with afternoon activities, including Native American Heritage Day and the ever popular Kids' Day.

According to city officials and Barron, everything but the Elvis performance went off without a hitch. Those still stewing after Elvis left town without a performance July 21, due to stormy weather, can rest assured the impersonator, his two dancers and 10 piece band will be back to try for sunshine next year.

When asked if next year's festival will span seven days as it has over the past two years, Barron said he thought the festival length was appropriate, but will be cutting back some.

Some areas being considered are eliminating Bridge Park acts when big names are in East Park.

> "Everyone in town owns this festival. I think it's a real reflection of community pride; it's a wonderful way to host family and friends when they come back to Charlevoix for this reunion."
> Dan Barron,
> Venetian Festival president

The festival's over $200,000 budget got a kick start for next year from the boat raffle, the official Kim Left Venetian art auction, which raised $3,100, the carnival, the craft courtyard and the sale of Venetian merchandise.

Barron said its revenue generating opportunities are limited, as the board can't charge for fireworks or music entertainment, both of which come at a high cost.

But this year, 400 volunteers and over 200 burgee club sponsors each giving between $100 and $5,000 made each of the seven days a success.

"Everyone in town owns this festival. I think it's (volunteer and sponsor involvement) a real reflection of community pride; it's a wonderful way to host family and friends when they come back to Charlevoix for this reunion," Barron said. "My vision of this festival is best coined by recognizing it as a big time festival with small town appeal. And the board is looking to maintain that."

Airport received grant for over $127,000

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Fences at the Charlevoix Municipal Airport recently received good and bad news.

The good news was a $127,778 grant the airport was awarded from federal, state and local sources and the bad news came in the form of a seriously destructive storm.

The federal government granted the airport $115,000, the state of Michigan awarded the facility $6,388 and the local match was $6,389.

The money will help extend security fencing and install new gates at the site located on the south end of the city of Charlevoix.

"The gates and fencing will serve multiple purposes and will get us in a more secure position," airport manager Karyn Brooks, said.

According to Brooks, the fencing and gates are not a reaction to new regulations for airports, but will help the local airport stay a step ahead of Federal Aviation Administration requirements.

Brooks explained that from a safety standpoint, the extended fencing will help close areas currently open to vehicular traffic that cause rifts with pedestrians. It will also minimize pedestrian traffic to the planes.

Brooks said pedestrians currently venturing out unescorted will be inhibited by the fence.

It's the airport's new recognition as a "primary airport" that made it eligible for this grant and a total of $1 million annually.

Construction of the fencing and gate will start after Labor Day and is expected to be complete 30 days after work starts.

While new fencing is being planned for, old fencing had to be replaced and several planes took quite a beating in a storm last week.

"This is the first time there have been aircraft damaged since I've been here. It was a pretty wild thing for me to see. Knowing how aircraft owners love their planes, my heart fell when I saw the damage," Brooks said.

On July 21, a storm blew into Charlevoix during the early morning bringing with it wind speeds estimated to be up to 60 miles per hour.

The wind was so strong it loosened the tie downs on one plane. Brooks said the plane's ropes held, but the wind strength literally straightened the hooks that the ropes were fastened to.

The plane, one of nine privately owned aircraft that were damaged, literally lifted up and was carried to perch on nearby fencing and ultimately slammed into the ground.

Brooks said the plane was a total loss and another was severely damaged when the unsecured plane collided with it and others.

Brooks was unable to quantify the damage.

The airport was closed at the time of the storm and the damage was discovered by an Island Airways employee who works out of the Charlevoix airport. She said this individual was able to secure some of the planes.

The damaged fence has been repaired and planes were able to fly out later that afternoon.

It's 'Lights, camera, action...' for pool auction

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool will be having its thirteenth Annual Fund-raising Auction Gala and Dinner on Aug. 2.

Auction Coordinator Jill Billiau said money raised by the auction goes to support the pool.

Last year the auction enabled the pool to raise about $70,000. Billiau said she is optimistic and is hoping to raise $80,000 this year.

Billiau said the money raised through the auction helps cover operating expenses that aren't covered by the $3.75 swimming fee.

"We're dependent on fund-raising from the community," Billiau said.

According to Billiau, the pool doesn't receive any money from the government and receives funds from swim team and hospital fees.

Billiau said the pool has contracts with both Northern Michigan Hospital and Charlevoix Area Hospital, which pay to use the pool's facilities to aid in physical therapy.

This year's fund-raiser will start at 6 p.m. with a silent auction followed by dinner at 7 p.m. and a live auction at 8 p.m.

Tickets cost $50 per person and it include the auction and dinner.

The theme for this year's auction is "Lights, Camera, Auction," which is also reflected in the items offered.

One of the cinema related items on the live auction is the chance to have Charlevoix's local movie theater, the Cinema 3, rented out privately for the evening. Billiau said the winner will be able to choose the movie and fill the theater with their friends.

Aside from movie related items, there will be plenty of large items to bid on. Some of the large items include a 2002 Chevy Tracker, two one-week trips to Hawaii, a one week stay in Marion County just outside San Francisco and a long weekend stay in a luxury apartment in New York.

Billiau said the New York trip is popular for it has been a part of the auction for a couple of years in a row.

Other items up for auction include a social membership to the Charlevoix Country Club valued at $13,000. Billiau added that there are many golf related items up for auction along with dinners to local area restaurants.

According to Billiau, some individuals have offered their homes for the site of dinners. Billiau said with these items, an individual can have a nice evening either in a nice house or on someone's boat.

This Tracker will be in the upcoming pool auction. (Courtesy photo)

The Charlevoix Area Community Pool opened its doors six years ago, but has been fund-raising for 13. Billiau said the first seven years were spent raising money to open the pool, but now the fund-raising is to ensure the pool continues to function.

According to Billiau, many of the items at the auctions are donated by local people including the trips to Hawaii.

"Folks know the need of the pool and do what they can," Billiau said.

Man injured while riding motorcycle on US-31

A 39-year-old White Cloud man was injured around 5 p.m., July 28 in a two vehicle accident on M-66 near Kmart in Charlevoix Township.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, David Bier, 39, was driving a 1994 Yamaha motorcycle south on M-66 when he failed to see a vehicle stopped in front of him. Bier's motorcycle ran into the rear end of a 1991 Chevrolet driven by Anthony Williams, 20, of Charlevoix.

Bier was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service for multiple fractures to his right leg. He was later transferred to Northern Michigan Hospital in Petoskey for surgery.

Williams was uninjured.

According to the sheriff's office, Bier was wearing his helmet, which showed extensive damage from the crash and greatly reduced the severity of his injuries.

The Charlevoix Township Fire Department assisted at the scene for a gas leak.

The crash is under investigation at this time.

The Depot Heritage Garden, a joint project of the Charlevoix Historical Society and the Charlevoix Area Garden Club, has received a $5000 grant from the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

This grant will help fund the planting and maintaining of an historically accurate garden of trees, shrubs, vines, herbs and flowers that were a part of Charlevoix history from the 1870s to the 1930s.

The project organizers, Patti Aikin and Rhea Dow, expect to break ground this fall and welcome the first visitors to the garden in 2003.

Located on the west side of the Charlevoix Depot, a state and national historic site, the garden will contain vintage plants donated by area residents.

The Charlevoix County Community Foundation has provided money for area projects since 1992. Supported by contributions from individuals, it has assets in excess of $7 million and has distributed more than $3 million in grants.

Both the Historical Society, 547-0373, and the Garden Club, 237-9196, welcome new members. To find out more about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, call 536-2440.

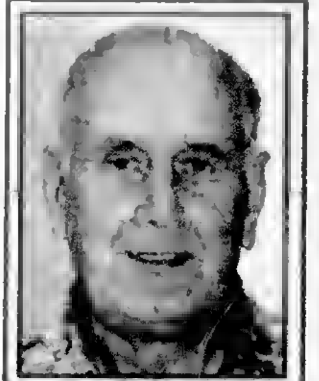
PRIMARY ELECTION

District Six candidates discuss the area's issues

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

As voters in Charlevoix County Commission District Six go to the polls Aug. 6, they will be asked to pick one of three candidates for the republican nomination.

The winner of this primary election will go on to the November general election. Those candidates are: Incumbent Shirley Roloff, former commissioner Richard Gillespie and Charlevoix resident John Elzinga.



John Elzinga

District Six includes Beaver Island, the city of Charlevoix south of the bridge, Charlevoix Township south of the bridge and Norwood Township.

Richard Gillespie

Roloff came to Charlevoix in 1974 and is known for her involvement with senior citizens. She was on Charlevoix City Council for 12 years and is currently a member of the Charlevoix County Commission.

Gillespie was born and raised on Beaver Island. He is a private businessman who is into real estate and building. He is a former member of the Charlevoix County Commission and was previously defeated by Roloff.

Shirley Roloff

Elzinga is new to Charlevoix County. He previously spent 20 years as the Banks Township treasurer in Antrim County. He is a retired farmer and fruit grower.

Recently, the Charlevoix Courier sat down with these three candidates and asked them five questions. Those questions and their answers are as follows:

Why are you running for the Charlevoix County Commission?

Elzinga — On Nov. 1, I fully retired from 50 years in farm market and orchard business and now I figure I've got the time and energy to spend to do something a little different. I've been involved as Banks Township (in Antrim County) treasurer for 20 years and a lot of other boards. I've been reading all the difficulty they have been having on the county commission. So, I thought it would be kind of exciting to get involved.

Gillespie — I think that not only does Beaver Island need good representation, but I think that I am a better candidate. I can speak from a lot of different experiences, such as the experience of living out here (Beaver Island) and the ingenuity that living on an island brings to you helps you no matter where you go. It helps you to think things through thoroughly and quickly and make decisions that count. I believe I do have the qualifications to help Charlevoix County, especially through times we are in now with the issues we are faced with.

Roloff — I've been there four years and there are things that I would still like to see completed. I am interested in recycling and have been a big part in getting that off the ground and running. I think that is really important. There are things I would like to do for the island (Beaver Island). Like having a second deputy over there, I think they really need one. Also I'd like to build a new substation over there and give (Sheriff Deputy) Mike Russell his home back. He has never had one, it has always had the station at his home. The numbering system for Charlevoix County, I am really interested and working on that. I'd like to make sure that people do get their house numbers out so the fire and ambulance can find those numbers without difficulty. It's the only way I really know to give back to my community. I feel this is the best thing I can do. I have the time, I'm dedicated to my county and want to do the best that I can to make sure the services that we have are provided for everyone that we have.

What is the big issue facing the county?

Elzinga — There are a lot of different issues — I am just getting involved in this, I don't really know what Charlevoix County Commissioners have been doing in the last couple of years. I got the time and the ability and I would like to see what I can do. I have been in business for a long time, I have always had a budget and stuck to it at the market and I don't believe in overspending.

Gillespie — In my travels one of the things that I am hearing more and more is the question of county administrator again. You have to give it a fair hearing is the most I am willing to say. I've been out of it for six years. Another issue, the burgeoning tax load for people, whether they are homesteaded or business owners, when I voted for proposal A and what came back to me I feel is different when the legislators got through tweaking it. But as a person in business who owns commercial real estate I gained nothing. What effect can the county board of commissioner have on the improvement of that and school funding is a large question. But I think there are questions that are going to have to be dealt with. So administrator, taxation, roads ... it's always going to be roads the way things are going, I am afraid.

I have to add one other thing, health care for both senior citizens, we do have a county operated facility called Grandvue critical care facility. As the baby boomers continue to age that is going to become more and more of an issue; maintenance and improvements at Grandvue and what happens in health care.

Another thing I think we really made a big mistake on is not necessarily the closing of the landfill by Ironton, but when I was a commissioner I was told we had to let garbage come in from everywhere. It filled up our landfill and now we are trucking it out of Charlevoix County and I think that is a very sad commentary. We probably could have survived for years if not for that. What can we do? The extensive cost of establishing another landfill, I don't know if it is in the realm of possibility because of the cost having to bring more garbage in and I am sorry I don't agree with bringing garbage into our little corner of the world. I think we should have been more astute and more reluctant to allow the influx that we did, which just caused us a bigger problem.

Roloff — I've got a whole new district ahead of me. I was given the south side of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, I have Norwood Township and St. James and Peaine townships. I really don't know what the other townships need from me. I feel that we as the commissioners, we should represent our districts. A lot of times I know there are things that we can do to solve their problems. For instance, back to Beaver Island, just to throw something out, I think they were negotiating with Great Lakes Energy and they said, "Shirley, do you know anybody that can help us?" I said, "Yes. Roger Westenbroek." Well they get him and it worked for them. That shows that if you just ask me, I know or I can find out who can do it. When they wanted to Beaver Island boat dock over there and I set up a meeting with Tom Johnson for the Great Lakes and he really got things rolling for them. If you've been around for 20-some years, you kind of know somebody out there can give you a hand. It may not be me, but I can find somebody that can do something for you.

Please comment on the high county surplus?

Elzinga — I'm a retired person right now and we got involved with senior group here in town and they are looking for money for a lot of different projects. I would like to help along too, as much as possible and see what we can do. There are places where that money could be spent right now. Senior citizens and Beaver Island, they want roads really bad. As long as money is in the bank, we might as well use some of it.

Gillespie — The Board of Commissioners are elected to serve the best interest of the taxpayers. I think that if the county board should have a need and can agree that it is something that will benefit taxpayers equally throughout the county, that it would be reasonable for them to consider the expenditure of tax funds. For the most part, I go back to when I was a commissioner and we expanded the county building and the recent expansion of the sheriff's department, and I was involved when we also expanded Grandvue Medical Care Facility. I don't believe the taxpayers on any one of those issues were actually asked to vote. And I do believe that they should consider having referendums if the money is available or maybe there should be a cap on what those expenditures might be at the discretion of the board. I am not complaining about any of those facilities, they were all necessary improvements, but I want to make sure, once again, that we are following good public policy.

Roloff — I've always questioned why we need a high surplus and I have always tried to keep the millage down. They'd always explain it to me that we got the new jail, we got the new county building without having to borrow money. It's really one way that if you have a project, you can pay for it yourself. You don't really have to go out and borrow when you never know what the interest rate is going to be. This is a way we can take care of Charlevoix County and its people by giving them the services that they need.

What is your opinion of County Commissioners having county health insurance?

Elzinga — I read a little bit about that, I guess I am not involved with trying to get insurance because I am over 65 now and we get Medicare. They are spending $7-8,000, like I saw one figure. I guess that is going way overboard.

Gillespie — My position on that has been the same since the day I ran. Do take into account that one commissioner's base compensation is $2,400 a year, as I recall. Surely you would agree that is not a lot of money to attract qualified candidates. So, if the compensation comes in the form of health insurance or whatever benefits they might be, I couldn't complain about that, I wouldn't complain about that. I would look at how its put in balance. When I was defeated in 1996, my opponent said it costs too much money to keep this commissioner and that the commissioners were overpaid and the commissioners should not have health insurance. Since that time, Roloff has been the highest paid commissioner collecting health insurance and all of that since that day. So, the question of how the compensation is put forth whether it be in the form of $2,400 base plus meeting and or expenses and health insurance, I guess you just have to establish what a reasonable compensation would be for a county commissioner that is helping managing a budget in excess of $5 million.

Roloff — I do receive it. In the county of Charlevoix, we don't have a controller, we don't have a manager or director. We already pay them, the people, probably over 100-and-some-thousands of dollars. I have 10, 12 meetings a month already set up for me that I attend, without the special meetings or another one that pops up on storm water. These are things that I have to go to. I do a lot of traveling to Traverse City. I am on the road a lot. We have a small business and when I go, I'm away from the telephone, so I have to depend on somebody else. It's just that part of the business to have $50 if I go to Traverse City or wherever. So I am taking a trip way out of town for a whole day when someone in town takes an hour and gets the same amount of money as I am. So, I don't feel badly about it, because I think I am doing, I am working full time for my county. I am not doing a part-time job. I feel that I am doing a full-time job.

What will you do to protect the Open Meeting's Act and the right of the people to access information in the county of Charlevoix, in light of the recent mess the commissioners went through?

Elzinga — As I said before, I have 20 years as Banks Township treasurer (Antrim County) and I have worked with all the county people down there. I realized a long time ago that eveything's got to be public meetings. So, that's my stand: to have everything out in the open.

Gillespie — I think that question really answers itself. There is a set of rules that should be and should have been followed. To me it is very simple, no one should cause that question to come up. It is the people's business. We are in the business of representing the people's best interest. Not ourselves. Not individually. If you violate those standards, especially with the rules and regulations that exist, you've got problems. I think as previous articles have indicated, as well as personal contacts I have made, we've got problems and I think I've said in the past that Vic Patriek (county commissioner) took great courage to do the right thing. All the other commissioners who voted for the compensation of a lawyer who shouldn't even have been hired, since no charges were filed, really violated the public trust. When the situation went down with the personnel committee and how the, shall we say meeting, became something else. It just should not have happened. It is not that difficult to maintain the continuity and integrity to keep these things from happening.

Roloff — I think they all have to be to the community and for the community. They have to be open, no matter what we do. I believe in the Open Meetings Act. I think that every time there is a meeting it should be posted in enough time so the public is aware there is a meeting. I don't want to say anything about what happened. It happened. It's too bad it happened. I hope we've all learned something from this and not make the mistake again. That is not our job to keep things away from the public.

Several plans presented on marina to public

MARINA

Sonny Ward, who said the layouts were too close to their fuel docks and boaters would be unable to maneuver, resulting in a loss of a useful service.

The Wards did support the Barnes layout.

Campbell then produced an up and coming marina service that doesn't alter the shoreline and renovates the docks currently in the marina without adding any. But more boats could be in Charlevoix by tying up to a series of mooring stations in the lake.

During the off seasons, fall and winter, the moors would be removed, at the city's expense, and tied to the docks attached to shore.

Winn did not support the mooring idea because it would add navigation problems in the lake.

Other comments included a focus on amenities like sewer hook-ups and larger boat docks and about five at the meeting advocated more docks.

Jim Sell said, "You just can't get in here. Those who don't boat, don't realize what we're confronted with . We're confronted with no place to go. You people have to understand when a boater comes here they bring a lot of money to your community."

Virginia Lahde also brought up the possibility of the United States Coast Guard cutter ACACIA leaving town, opening up more space and said maybe planning should hold off until that decision is final.

But any further delay could mean a loss of funding.

Winn said he and one other of seven Waterways commissioners represent this part of the state and when his term expires its likely that Charlevoix will no longer be at the top of the commission's list.

The next step in the marina planning process is scheduled to take place at 7:30 p.m. Aug. 15. A place for this meeting has not been set in stone.

At the meeting the Charlevoix City Council and the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority will meet to discuss goals for the marina renovation with planner Peter Pollack, principal designer with the firm Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor. The Pollack firm has been contracted to work with both the East Park and marina renovations.

After that meeting Pollack and United Design will produce alternatives for the community to discuss at another public hearing expected to be scheduled in September.

Director faces three charges in incident with police

TAYLOR

But he further states that after interviewing Walter he found, "Walter did not believe that Taylor had attempted to hit him, but did believe that Taylor was being hostile."

Walter then walked away.

After witnessing the exchange, Schlappi walked over to Taylor and put his hand on his left arm, "Because of the loud music, to get his attention." He states Taylor responded by raising his elbow, "as if to strike" him and yelled, "F--- you."

Schlappi said Taylor then recognized him as a police officer and he instructed Taylor to leave the park because of his language and "violent behavior."

Schlappi states Taylor again used obscene language and said he didn't have to leave. Schlappi said this response prompted him to take a hold of his left arm and put him in "an escort hold" to lead him out of the park.

Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson said he is satisfied with his officer's response.

In a written statement regarding the incident Halverson explained, "A disorderly person in a large crowd is an immediate law enforcement concern. A disorderly person can be extremely unpredictable and effect the dynamics of a crowd very quickly. Officers are trained to separate these individuals from the crowd as quickly and quietly as possible. With that in mind, there obviously has to be a certain amount of cooperation from the person in question."

But according to the report, Taylor wasn't cooperative.

Schlappi says Taylor attempted to pull away and he informed him he was under arrest and escorted him out of the audience area and down towards the lower level of the park.

"While escorting the subject (Taylor) he repeatedly attempted to pull his arm away," Schlappi states.

Once on the lower park level, Schlappi said he asked Taylor to have a seat on the grass, which he refused to do and continued to pull away. He further stated that when asked his name, Taylor refused to tell him, citing his fifth amendment rights and self incrimination as the rational behind refusal.

Schlappi said it was at this point that he told Bennett, the park ranger, to call for backup. Officer Gerard Doan arrived first and Sergeant Dale Meredith came on the scene a few minutes later.

The report states Doan and Schlappi took Taylor to the ground and instructed him to place his hands behind his back so he could be handcuffed. Schlappi said he again refused.

"While during the struggle to handcuff the subject (Taylor), he was advised by Doan that he would be charged with 'resisting' if he did not comply," Schlappi states.

While Doan and Schlappi attempted to handcuff Taylor, Meredith arrived and tried to get him to comply "but the subject (Taylor) still refused."

Doan reported that the ground struggle went on for approximately 9 minutes.

According to Schlappi, Taylor then agreed to walk to the patrol car and was lead to Doan's vehicle, placed in the rear seat and transported to Charlevoix County Jail at 10:51 p.m. Taylor was not drunk at the time of arrest.

After spending the evening and the next afternoon in jail, Taylor was arraigned at 4 p.m. July 23 in Charlevoix County's 90th District Court. He was released on a personal cognizance bond.

Because the charges are felonious he was unable to enter a plea. A preliminary examination was set for 11 a.m., Aug. 15 in district court.

According to Dan Barron, president of the Venetian Festival Board, who was in the park at the time the incident occurred, "Our fiduciary obligation as board members is to the festival. The board won't take a position on this."

Taylor declined to comment at this time.

Three Lives Lost in Lake Tragedy

SAM HAMILTON, LOCAL BOATMAN, ONE OF VICTIMS

Carl Bogren and Brother, Fred Lundberg, Petoskey, Perished When Pleasure Yacht Burned

With the last meager thread of hope gone, Charlevoix has given up reluctantly the search for Sam Hamilton, one of the city's most respected pioneer citizens, whose life was taken last Wednesday night in one of the worst lake tragedies this region has known in many years.

Petoskey also mourns the loss of beloved ones, for Carl Bogren, prominent businessman of the city and his half-brother, Fred Lundberg, went to their death along with Mr. Hamilton when Bogren's yacht, "Two Brothers," sank following a fire and explosion in Grand Traverse Bay off Norwood.

The blow came so unexpectedly that it was some time before local citizens and members of the bereaved families of the victims fully realized the full import of the tragedy.

The three men set out last Wednesday afternoon in Bogren's yacht for Northport Point to set an anchor buoy for John Davis, summer resident of the point, who owns the schooner, "Malabar" of this port. They completed the task and were known to have left on the return trip around 6 o'clock that afternoon.

At 8:50 Wednesday night, Charlevoix Coast Guard received a telephone call from Robert Holecheck, Norwood youth reporting that a boat had caught fire and exploded in Grand Traverse Bay at a point believed to be midway between Northport and Norwood. The Coast Guard made the run to Norwood in their motor launch, but failed to find any trace of the burned boat.

Holecheck reported that he first saw flames, then an explosion. Flames still appeared for a short time after the explosion and then all was dark.

When his father and other members of the party did not return Wednesday evening, Ray Hamilton became alarmed and Thursday went to Northport with a small boat. In the afternoon he found parts of a burned mattress, a canopy and a gasoline can, articles he knew to be part of the missing boat's equipment. Despite this evidence of the tragedy Ray was reluctant to believe the worst. Coast guards were notified and they joined the search. Private boats took up the vigil, two airplanes from Petoskey, Commander Eugene McDonald's yacht "Mispaw" Logan Thomson's yacht "Sylvia" and many others from this region.

Every inch of the shoreline between Charlevoix and Northport was combed. Search of all water in the territory was made and the shores of nearby islands covered.

Friday, numerous pieces of wreckage were found. The ships spar, splintered bits of railing, charred pieces of plank, a hatch cover, etc. Positive identification was made by evening of that day all hope of finding the men alive was abandoned.

No one will ever know the details of the tragedy. It is believed that the men experienced motor trouble and were working on the motor when the fire started. Whether they were blown to bits by the explosion or jumped into the lake is merely speculation. A dinghy belonging to the yacht was left on the dock at Charlevoix. Possibly the men would never have had a chance to use it.

Search is being continued in hope of finding the bodies. Heavy seas have hindered efforts on the lake and when conditions are favorable, an effort will be made to locate the hull. If it is found, the lake will be dragged in that vicinity.

Mr. Hamilton was practically a life-long resident of Charlevoix. He came here with his parents at the age of seven and had since made the city his home. He was 57 years old.

Mr. Hamilton was better known as head of the Hamilton & Son Boat yard, which connection has made him known to lake-faring men in nearly every port on the Great Lakes. His friends were legion. He first started in business with a rowboat livery and gradually expanded the business to its present position. He was public spirited and served his city for years in various capacities such as harbormaster, deputy sheriff, member of the fire department and in other ways. He leaves a huge niche to be filled.

Besides his wife, there are four children, one daughter, Mrs. Clara Reed and three sons, Ray, Ralph and Reno, all of Charlevoix. A sister, Mrs. Katherine Ripley of Chicago, Ill. is visiting at the home here.

Turbine issue prompts recall action by residents

"I go back to the 250 letters. Dan (Skrzeczkoski) couldn't look at that and say re-notice. This would have been over by December; who would it have hurt?" she said.

But Skrzeczkoski said the decision to not re-notice the public hearing for the ordinance change was a board decision, not his.

"If a board makes a decision, how can you go after one person for that decision? The attorney (Bryan Graham of Bellaire) was there and he said legally we can't do it. We're working on changes," he said.

Ferguson said they were further irked when they found out Skrzeczkoski had told Way a possible use of the agriculturally zoned property would be an R-4 rezoning, mobile homes.

"I think when Dan (Skrzeczkoski) went to Dawson (Way) and suggested the R-4, that was it. It's almost like I don't know what he's going to do next to be punitive and for that reason everyone is like, 'maybe it's time to get him out of there,'" she said.

Ferguson said Hayden's inappropriate comments including telling a resident at a planning commission meeting to, "sit down and shut up," and the "incorrect" notice he posted in the Petoskey News-Review alerting residents of the public hearing to discuss the turbine zoning ordinance change, prompted his inclusion in the recall.

"I think they leave us no choice. I think they're not working with us," Ferguson said.

After the language is approved, the group has 60 days to gather 137 signatures and Ferguson doesn't see any problem getting them.

"Frankly, I've already had people call and say where's the piece of paper, I want to sign it," she said.

The petition's wording will undergo a clarity hearing by the Charlevoix County Elections Committee at 2 p.m., Aug. 12 in the Charlevoix County Commissioner's room located at 203 Antrim Street in Charlevoix.

Both Skrzeczkoski and Hayden were served with a copy of the recall petition on July 23 by officers with the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office.

By law, both Skrzeczkoski and Hayden have the right to attend this meeting and present any arguments they have for denial of the petition's clarity.

Hayden said he already has 11 points to refute in its wording.

"I'm going to oppose the recall vigorously. I already have 11 polnts of rebuttal I plan to present to the election commission. Frankly, I think its a frivolous action that costs the township money. But, I do support their right to do so," he said.

He added, "I represent 1,560 residents of the township, not just 20 people who can't get their own way."

While Hayden is ready to fight back, Skrzeczkoski is less sure of his next move.

"I don't know how much I'm going to fight this. I'm really undecided. I'm getting really frustrated," he said.

Every elected officer in the state, except judges, are subject to recall by voters of the electoral district where they serve. If either Skrzeczkoski or Hayden resign after the calling of a recall election, the election is discontinued for that officer.

The county election commission's decision can be appealed by the officers being recalled, or by the sponsors of the petition drive, to the county circuit court.

The appeal must be filed within 10 days after the election commission's decision.

Petition signers must provide their signature, home address and date.

Those who sign the petition have to be registered voters in the township and can't sign more than once.

Skrzeczkoski and Hayden are permitted to check the signatures on the petition for eight days after it has been filed.

Hayden has been township clerk since 1996 and Skrzeczkoski has been supervisor since July of 2000.

Township supervisor injured in two car accident Saturday

Charlevoix Township Supervisor Oscar Stroud, 90, was injured in a two vehicle accident around 7 p.m., July 27 on US-31 near Ance Road, that also injured two others.

Stroud was in fair condition at Charlevoix Area Hospital as of Monday, July 30. Also injured was Robert Frame, 70 and his wife, Mary Frame, both of Charlevoix.

The Frames were treated for their injuries at the hospital and released.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Robert Frame was driving a 1999 Ford Station Wagon south on US-31 when a 2002 Subaru Station Wagon driven by Stroud pulled out in front of the Frames' vehicle from a private drive.

Robert and Mary Frame's vehicle broadsided Stroud's vehicle, according to the sheriff's report on the incident.

Stroud had to be extracted from the vehicle by the Charlevoix County Fire/JAWS of Life and transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service. The Frames' were also transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by the Charlevoix Emergency Medical Service.

The Charlevoix City Police and the Charlevoix Township Fire Department assisted the sheriff's office at the scene.

According to the sheriff's report, the accident is under investigation at this time.

CONSIDERING TAKING ACTION IN REAL ESTATE?

"I have parked myself in front of a streaming real time quote machine nearly every working day for the past ten years, both in New York and here in Charlevoix. Investing in stocks can be rewarding, thrilling and recently, terrifying and brutally painful. The idea of investing, of course, is to maximize gain and minimize risk."

"Although risk is ever present in any investment, Real Estate may provide some advantages. According to the National Association of Realtors, the purchase of a median home appreciated at an annualized rate of 20.5% over the past three years! And, unlike capital gains realized in stock transactions, the current tax rules, as it pertains to gains from the sale of your main home, have allowed many who qualify exclusions from $250,000 to $500,000!"

"Additionally, it is no secret that some locations here in Northern Michigan are among the most desirable in the world! Just a little nudge in case you are thinking of doing something...and if you are thinking of buying or selling Real Estate in our beautiful little area, give me a call!

Voters in Tuesday's primary election decided the fate of mayoral candidates, county commission Republican nominations to the general election and several millages.

Results of a close city of Charlevoix mayoral primary election are indicative of a competitive race that will lead to the November general election.

Incumbent Mayor Alvin Butch Russell will face current second ward councilman Gabe Campbell at the Nov. 5 general election. The third primary candidate for mayor, city resident Steve Smith, received 61 votes, while Russell brought in 219 and Campbell earned 243.

Campbell said, "I'm really happy, I didn't know how it was going to come out. We'll see what happens in November, it was pretty close."

Russell said, "November will tell the story."

For the County Commission seats voters have ensured a new county commissioner will be in District One and are sending an incumbent on to general election in District Six.

Valerie Snyder beat incumbent Don Smith for the Republican nomination in the Charlevoix County Commission District One race. Snyder had 376 votes to Smith's 245, giving her 60 percent of the vote.

"I am excited," Snyder said. "I think the people of Charlevoix are ready for a change and I am up for it."

Snyder also won every precinct in

Michael Kelsey Barnard, 15, of Charlevoix was killed in a one vehicle crash Monday night in the "Ironton Curves."

Michael Kelsey Barnard

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office responded to the crash that took place at 8 p.m. Aug. 5 in Eveline Township.

According to the Sheriff's report, Barnard was killed when Theodore Degenhardt, 16 of Troy lost control of the 1997 Chrysler Sebring Convertible he was driving. Man injured when brakes fail

A 35-year-old Ellsworth man was injured in a five car accident around 11 a.m., July 31 on Bridge Street. Jonathan Ray Michael was traveling north on Bridge Street when the brakes failed on his vehicle. Michael maneuvered his vehicle between the other vehicles on Bridge Street — striking four of them — before his vehicle went into East Park and struck a tree. He was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital for minor injuries. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Wind tower areas under discussion

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In Eveline Township, drafted master plan and zoning ordinance revisions reveal an extensive area where wind turbine generators could be allowed despite concerns voiced by a group of township residents.

"The property use trend in Eveline Township is going toward residential. I don't understand why now they are creating industrial areas that appear to encompass half of the property in Eveline Township — they (wind turbine generators) are industrial machines with moving parts and they have to consider that when they try to put these so close to homes," Eveline Township resident and farmer Sue Kiteley said. "I want to see these appropriately placed and I don't believe that place is next to homes. It may be that Eveline Township is not an appropriate place for them."

This is an opinion Kiteley and several other residents have voiced and she said she was surprised to see a possible master plan revision that includes a wind turbine district overlay with prime locations for the turbines on both sides of Lake Charlevoix's South Arm.

The revision process started in April after over 200 residents found out wind turbines were proposed for a nearby neighborhood and became outraged.

The request for a special use permit to construct a wind monitoring tower was made in November of 2001 by Steve Smiley, president of a wind turbine generator supplier out of Suttons Bay called Bay Windpower.

Smiley looked to locate the tower on the property of Dawson Way, near Ferry and Brock roads. The proposal outlined a project to include seven commercial wind turbines, five on the Way property and two on nearby property owner Ralph Richardson's land, if adequate winds were detected.

After several delays Smiley received the special use permit for the tower. It has not yet been constructed, but no matter what its readings may be, the fate of wind turbines at that site will be determined by these upcoming master plan

How can we plan for an unknown future?

EDITORIAL

While we are happy that the city of Charlevoix is hosting all of these meetings with the public to discuss the East Park plans and marina plans, there is one big question that still bothers us — the future of a Coast Guard cutter in Charlevoix.

There have been many plans presented to the public outlining future uses of East Park, as well as several citizen plans for the marina. Each plan has its faults and its merits and the discussion on them has been excellent, but perhaps we are jumping the gun here.

The United States Coast Guard is saying once the cutter ACACIA is retired in 2006, Charlevoix will not be getting a replacement. But, the local politicians are going to bat for Charlevoix and fighting to get a replacement.

In the meantime, this means the city does not know if there will be a large cutter docking in Round Lake in the near future. Yet, we are making plans for that very future now.

To be fair, the city is saying that they will have engineers design some park options that do not include a Coast Guard cutter, in addition to plans that do. And the city argues that we need to make a decision now to make sure there is money available from the Waterways Commission for the project.

But, the ACACIA takes up quite a bit of docking space in Round Lake right now. Plus, there is a large office and meeting room for the ship's crew under Bridge Street. If the ACACIA is not replaced in Charlevoix, then we have a lot of space that needs to be factored in to any future park plans or marina plans created by the community.

This means we are spending time and money to create very different plans for an unknown future? What happens if we pick a plan including a cutter, get the money for and suddenly find out we are not getting a replacement cutter? How much money and time did we waste creating that first plan then?

Perhaps instead of spending all our energy discussing what could happen, our city should work on getting a replacement for the ACACIA in 2006. Once it is known if we will get another cutter or not, this will create a future that we can actually plan for.

Remember to enjoy the 'Sweetness of Nothing'

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

On a sunny afternoon, while I momentarily withdraw from the mainstream of society to take advantage of a long summer vacation, I love to sit on my front porch and watch the energetic strollers, joggers, roller bladers, bicyclists, dogs, tricycles and foot traffic pass by.

Let's forget the fast paced, multitask, health/work environment. I am vigorously engaged in doing nothing! The Italians call it, "La dolceza di fare riente," or the "Sweetness of doing nothing."

But in reality, I am doing something.

I am counting how many different shades of green there are within my view: the dark green of pine, tipped with new, lime green needles; the Kelly green of grass; the leafy green of maples; the dancing green when the sun finds a young leaf; the black green of deep shade.

I will lose count as a black squirrel suddenly races up a tree. He leaps on to the tight rope of electrical wire and performs his graceful, aerial act just for my benefit.

On the ground I notice a small ant carrying a large seed across the steps leading up the porch. I hear the sweet sound of a pair of cardinals calling to each other and when the wind is right, I hear the waves of Lake Michigan beating against the shore. Of course there are times when I don't hear a sound, when it seems as if the God of rain is holding his breath, the quiet before a storm.

Sometimes I enjoy the sweetness of doing nothing when the copper sun reflects like diamonds on sparkling windows across the street and the sprinklers are twirling crystal ropes through the air.

But at night, sitting on my porch, it's even harder to enjoy the sweetness of doing nothing. I am forced to marvel at the dark blue sky, strewn with twinkling stars, a full moon that throws a silvery beam across the lawn and my eyes follow the bats feeding on moths as they swoop back and forth silhouetted between the tree branches.

While all this action, design, color and light stretches before me, I wonder if I am truly enjoying the sweetness of doing nothing, or instead, am I soaking up the peace and contentment that nurtures one's soul?

Isn't that what a summer vacation ought to be doing for you and me? Let the philosopher, Henry Thoreau (1817-1862) have his Walden Pond, but I have my front porch! May I ask, "Where do you enjoy the sweetness of doing nothing?"

Concerned about park's changes

Editor:

I am writing this letter because I'm deeply concerned about the future of East Park, the marina and Bridge Street.

Beginning in 1935, after the Charlevoix Hotel burned, the city of Charlevoix has had as its goal to make all of the east side of Bridge Street one continuous park (See Bob Miles' Charlevoix, page 243). This goal was finally realized after 67 years with the purchase and demolition of "Neff's Grocery" and the Parkside Restaurant. Those dedicated to the beautification of Charlevoix envisioned "a green carpeted, terraced park (Bob Miles' Charlevoix, page 243). We will see 67 years of perseverance, dedication and planning destroyed with the current direction the designs are taking.

The latest design included buildings designed to accommodate various activities, including concerts, festivals, art fairs, cookouts, ice skating and lawn games. Add to this the fact that the water and marina plans are not yet developed, and will be developed later, traffic problems have not been studied, and the city manager stated that the city does not yet have a budget; I see serious problems and a potential for a lot of wasted money.

1) The city spent 67 years acquiring land to open the view to Round Lake and now we're planning to build various structures?

2) People of all ages come to enjoy the beauty and serenity of the harbor; they cannot do so if it is congested with festivals and cookouts, among others.

3) Bridge Street is a U.S. highway where all north and south traffic must funnel through the draw bridge, that opens every half hour. This has been studied for years and there is no way to reroute the traffic. A plan that would increase congestion, parking and traffic would be a nightmare. Not everyone is on vacation. For people trying to conduct business, keep appointments and travel across town, it is a serious problem already.

4) The needs of boaters who pay for their slips are neglected. Stepping off their boats to the congestion, trash and already overtaxed public facilities is not a good plan.

5) The needs of a three month seasonal industry that benefits many transient businesses seems to take precedent over those of property owners and year-round businesses who pay the bulk of the taxes. Half of downtown Bridge Street is vacant, papered over retail space nine months of the year, giving the appearance of a ghost town.

6) Turning East Park and Bridge Street into a carnival midway is not a good plan for a harbor and land of such natural beauty.

7) Due to the current trend in planning, we now have a post office and a high school that are outside the city limits of the city of Charlevoix. This does not engender a sense of community.

8) As for the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce's need to be "visible and convenient," the post office building on Mason Street is vacant since the post office is now out on M-66!

I hope the citizens of Charlevoix will continue to attend public meetings and express their views so that the good works of the last 67 years by "the dedicated and unselfish group so loyal to the idea of Charlevoix beautification" (Bob Miles' Charlevoix) does not come undone.

Festival needs your help

Editor:

Now that the Seventy-second annual Charlevoix Venetian Festival has concluded, it seems that everyone in town agrees it was a fantastic event, with outstanding fireworks displays, great concerts, the best street parade ever, the Venetian Games and a wonderful Kids Day, to name a few of the events.

There is one aspect of Venetian Festival that only a few people seem to understand: Just who, exactly, is in charge of this festival? Who pays for it, runs it and, finally, who benefits from it?

While the city of Charlevoix is a major sponsor of the festival, along with a number of local businesses, boards and individuals, the festival is not run by any of those organizations. The Charlevoix Venetian Festival is a non-profit organization run by 10 volunteer board members, with the help of hundreds of community volunteers. And who benefits from it? You.

You, the resident of this town; you, the resorter; and you, the visitor. This festival wasn't designed as a vehicle to promote local businesses, it is designed to serve the families, friends and visitors who get together and enjoy the entertainment and events.

Over 100,000 people attended this year's Venetian Festival; are you one of them? If so, I would like to make one point clear — Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc., makes absolutely no money from this event. Every year, we struggle to raise the money to pay for all the great concerts and fireworks that are free to the public.

In fact, as of this writing, the festival board is $15,000 short of our budgeted costs.

The Venetian board members would love to call on you personally and ask for a donation, but the 10 of us can't possibly call on each and every one of the thousands of people we saw in the park who aren't on our current contributor list. So please, don't put blinders on and say to yourself, "I'm glad somebody else pays for all of this." You ARE the somebody else.

We need your contributions to maintain the high level of quality entertainment and safe, world class fireworks displays that we provide to you. If every person reading this contributes to the festival — based upon their financial ability and enjoyment of the events — it would easily pay for this terrific festival. It would also spare the board from having to make the painful decision to eliminate either the Friday or Saturday night fireworks displays.

If you enjoyed this festival, please send a check to: Charlevoix Venetian Festival, Inc., P.O. Box 120, Charlevoix, MI 49720.

If you'd like to send along a comment or suggestion regarding the festival, please feel free to do so as well. I speak for all of the Venetian Board members when I thank you in advance for your generous donations.

Laurie Lounsbury
Member of the Venetian Board

Art show had porn

Editor:

My family and I were in the Charlevoix area during the July 4 week and decided to visit your art fair. We were very disappointed to see the nudity and just plain pornography of at least four of the artists. I know that many will speak of the freedom of speech or the beauty of the human form, which I happen to agree with. However, being a man, I understand how men think. And as men know, if we are honest with ourselves, when we are painting or taking pictures of naked women, it's all about sex, and nothing but sex.

We are told it is about beauty and freedom but, if we are honest, we know better. This makes it porn!

Some would say that I am the one with the problem. That I am the perverted one. Just keep in mind who is displaying the paintings/pictures and who is opposing it.

These types of pictures/paintings are just not necessary. It makes victims of children and women and makes men look like animals. People are being hurt.

We men are responsible to see to their protection. I would advise the Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce to stop pushing porn.

John E. Breault

Thank you

I would like to send many thanks to the City of Charlevoix and the Venetian Committee for the endless music, the clean beaches, parks and bathrooms during the most amazing Venetian week.

Downstate boy, 13, swims Lake Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

For some the highlight of their day July 27 was the evening Venetian Festival fireworks, but for Matthew Scallin, 13, of Walled Lake, that afternoon was the day he achieved his summer goal, swimming 2.5 miles across Lake Charlevoix.

Matthew Scallin

"I have been going up north all my life and have always loved the water," he said.

Scallin arrived in Charlevoix, his summer destination for the past 12 years, in late June. After dropping their bags, many teenagers would straight away hit the beach and then cruise downtown for summer love interests.

But Scallin is anything but typical. Instead, he went looking for a personal challenge.

After taking his first dip of the summer in Lake Charlevoix, Scallin, an accomplished swimmer, knew what that challenge would be....a difficult swim across the lake.

So he started training by swimming dock-to-dock near Evergreen Point and his last day here, July 27, marked the end of training and the start of goal meeting day.

Scallin's grandfather, Charles Lee of Charlevoix and West Bloomfield, followed behind on a jet ski to protect his grandson from boats as Scallin pushed himself to the limit in a trek that took him from just east of the C & O Club, back to the Lee home, built in 1990 at Evergreen Point.

After over an hour of continuous freestyle strokes through Lake Charlevoix's warm summer water, Scallin said he felt tired and feared he would have to give up. But, instead, he persevered and after 1.5 hours completed the swim he had trained to do for over a month.

"I was tired and out of breath. There was a point when I wanted to stop, but I decided to keep going and see how far I could go and I made it," he said.

Lee was confident Scallin would make it. He said his grandson had just returned from Cranbrook swim camp, trains all winter at the Novi Sports Center and knows Lake Charlevoix well.

"He's a very competent dedicated young man; they swim 2 miles in most of their workouts," Lee said.

Scallin had proved his competence in the water in March at the competitive 2002 Michigan State Swimming Championships that took place in Lake Orion. At the meet, he placed second in the 50 yard backstroke and fifth in the 100 yard backstroke and eighth overall for the age 12 and under division.

Swimming isn't his only passion though. When Scallin isn't submerged in the water he is an avid water-skier.

Some may say he's water logged, but his way with the water is matched only by his academic success. He maintained a perfect grade point average last year after skipping seventh grade and will be a freshman at Walled Lake Western High School this fall.

While academics are a priority for him, when the going gets tough you won't find his nose in a book you'll find it perched under a pair of swim goggles.

"Whenever hard things are going on, if I just get in the pool it's a nice relaxing thing to do to calm down. It's a lot of fun," he said.

Those who didn't get the chance to congratulate him on his feat can catch him in September when he is planning another visit to Charlevoix.

Pool auction brings in $60,000

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff Writer

The Thirteenth Annual Fundraising Auction Gala and Dinner given by the Charlevoix Area Community Pool was a blockbuster hit.

The event occurred on Aug. 4 and according to Auction Coordinator Jill Billiau the evening was a success.

"The board is very pleased with the turnout of community members both in attendance and in financial support," Billiau said.

According to Billiau, over 180 members of the community came to the event, which supports the operation of the community pool. The event raised almost $60,000 for the pool.

Many items were up for grabs, including some large wins and a few vacations in exotic locations.

One item available was the chance to have Charlevoix's local movie theater, the Cinema 3, rented out for private enjoyment with friends. According to Billiau, Jack MacKenzie was the lucky winner.

She added that MacKenzie also won a cruise from CEMEX.

Another item available at the auction was a 2002 Chevrolet Tracker, which Billiau said was won by Bill Haggard.

Three one-week stays in tropical Hawaii were available as well. According to Billiau, two of the one-week Hawaiian trips were won by Trudy Center. Billiau added that the third trip went to John Haggard.

Hawaii wasn't the only vacation spot, for there was also a one-week stay in Marion County located just outside San Francisco. Billiau said Steve and Anne Hansen received the trip.

A long weekend stay in a luxury apartment located in New York was also available, and according to Billiau, was won by R.J. and Sandi Button.

"With the theme and everything we had surrounding the theme it was a great time," Billiau said.

New emergency room to be dedicated

It's been over a year since Charlevoix Area Hospital broke ground for a new emergency department and now, only a few details remain, as work crews put on the finishing touches in preparation for an upcoming dedication.

At 4 p.m., Aug. 11, officials will cut the ribbon, accept keys to the new facility and launch the ER's heliport as supporters, employees and friends gather for "Lift Off." The public is invited to join in the celebration and tour the new addition.

"This is a beautiful facility — and an important health resource for our community," Bill Jackson, hospital CEO, said. "We're very grateful for the support we received from hundreds of individuals, businesses and organizations in our area. Their gifts made this a reality."

Utilization of the hospital's emergency area has increased 400 percent since it was expanded 20 years ago and the new wing adds significantly to the existing hospital. At 7,600 square feet, it's over twice the size of the existing ER.

The new department has been designed for speed and efficiency. Ten spacious treatment rooms dedicated to cardiac care, trauma and triage are arranged around a central nursing station to facilitate patient care and monitoring. A separate imaging area with new x-ray equipment is part of the addition, eliminating the need to move patients and hastening diagnosis and treatment.

Also included are a new admitting area, family conference room and a comfortable waiting suite for visitors. An expanded Urgent Care Center, part of the emergency department, will treat non-emergency patients on evenings and weekends.

Outside, there's a protected ambulance bay and the rooftop will support a heated heliport. As the designated emergency control center for Charlevoix County, the hospital's helicopter landing pad will expedite rapid triage, treatment and transportation of critically ill patients.

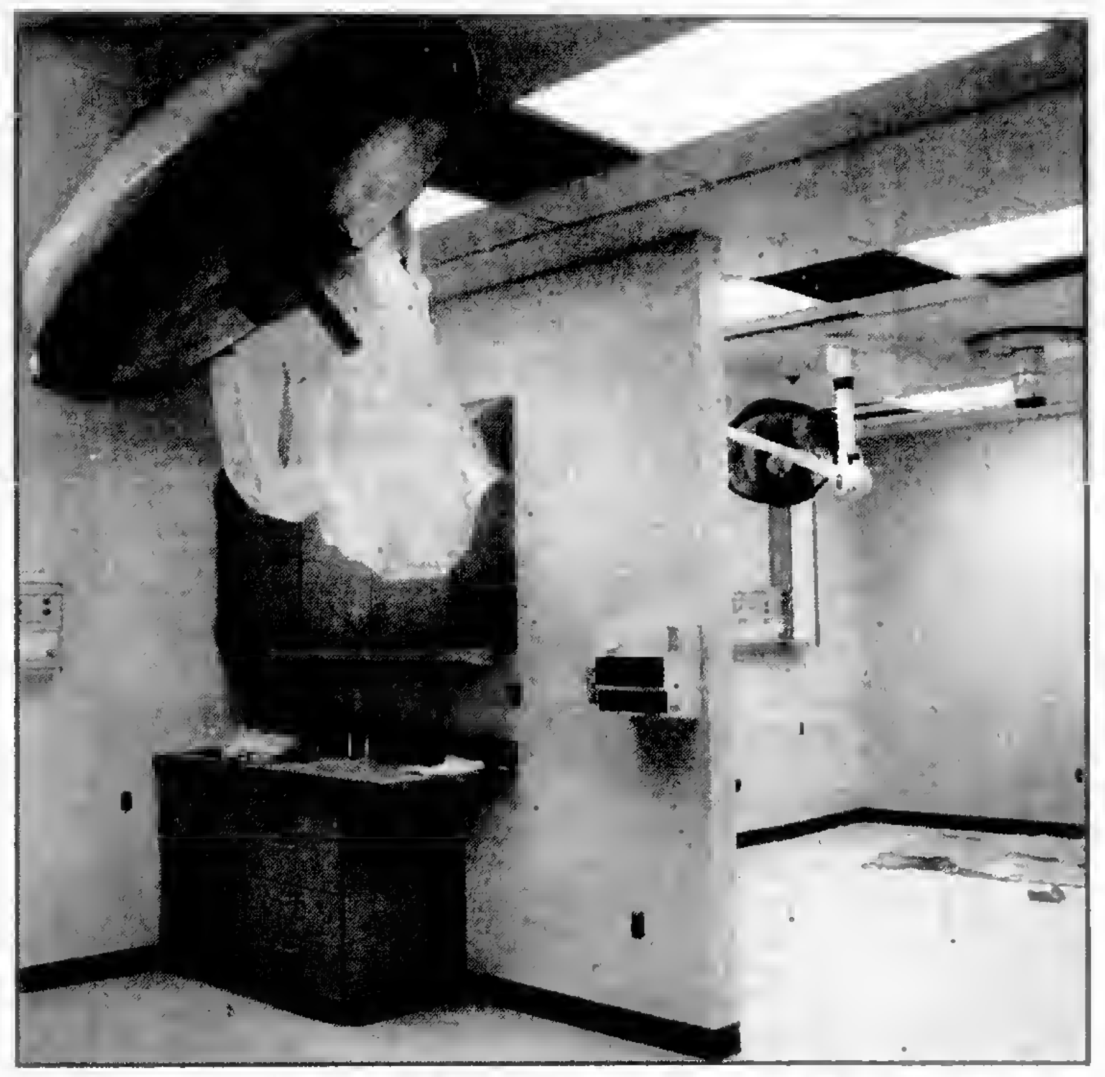
Dennis M. Joy, M.D. emergency director for the hospital, said area residents and visitors should feel confident they have access to quality care when unexpected illness or injury occur.

"With this new facility and equipment, we're prepared to handle almost every type of emergency. Yet we're small enough to retain the kind of personal attention and one-on-one concern our hospital is noted for," he said.

The ER wing is part of a multiple expansion project for Charlevoix Area Hospital. Later this year, a new lakeside wing with additional labor and delivery, post-surgical and intensive care rooms will open.

Following that, the existing admitting, billing and medical records and visitor waiting areas will be relocated and remodeled. With the recent closure of Park Avenue's west end, the hospital is also redesigning its campus to add new parking areas, landscaping and walkways.

"This is the culmination of a $6.5 million, 41,000 square foot renovation," Jackson said. "All of us are really proud of what we've accomplished — and when the community sees this new addition, we think they'll be excited too."



Charlevoix Area Hospital's new emergency department will have its dedication at 4 p.m., Aug. 11 between medical professional buildings C and D off Upright Street. The new emergency room will include a heliport, on-site imaging room, two cardiac rooms and seven examination rooms. Above is the main trama room with state-of-the art surgery lights. City's summer projects shaping up nicely

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Residents and visitors are reaping the benefits of the last few busy months of infrastructure projects in the city of Charlevoix as they stroll new sidewalks, drive newly paved roads and kick back at renovated beaches and parks.

"Things are winding down right now. It's been a very busy summer so far. Overall, the projects went very well. People love it," John Martin, city street department superintendent, said.

The major highlights of the construction season include extensive renovations at Depot and Michigan beaches. Martin said compliments on the beach projects have been pouring in.

Michigan Beach renovations including a repaired concession/bathroom facility, a new beach wall and a new picnic pavilion are complete with the exception of minor additions to be made at the Park Avenue portion of the project.

The Park Avenue park is a new addition to the area and includes lit, mulched trails leading down to the Lake Michigan pier and beach and interpretive areas highlighting the historic role of the water tower that once stood at the site.

The bulk of the Park Avenue project was finished July 1 and according to Martin the project is just waiting on cast pieces for the stone compass at the top of the hill to designate directions and interpretive plaques.

Martin said Depot Beach construction is on schedule and will be complete by Sept. 1. Carlson Home Improvements of Charlevoix will finish work on the bathroom facility and H & D will build miscellaneous walkways to finish the entire project.

At Depot Beach some walkways, stone retaining walls, fencing, a children's play area, curbing and underground preparation work for the bathroom facilities have been completed.

Those who haven't visited the beaches still have plenty of time. Martin said the street department doesn't gather and store picnic tables and other beach features until use has dropped off and fall and winter are in full swing.

H & D was the general contractor for both beach projects which got underway in the fall of 2001.

While H & D was busy at the beaches, CCMS and Associates of Sault Saint Marie tore up and rebuilt Michigan and Belvedere avenues.

For about a month in June and early July, residents questioned whether street construction would ever end, but life is back to normal on both streets and the drive is smoother. At both locations, CCMS and Associates completed road work, constructed sidewalks and performed both utility repair and construction.

This summer, CCMS and Associates also completed a city sewer extension to the C & O Club.

Other summer changes included the city's completion of its plan to acquire and demolish the Wharfside building. After the building came down in late May the site was sodded and restored.

Martin said the bulk of the city's summer work, which included the aforementioned projects, is over and during the next three weeks it will continue miscellaneous street resurfacing projects but has no major construction efforts on the schedule.

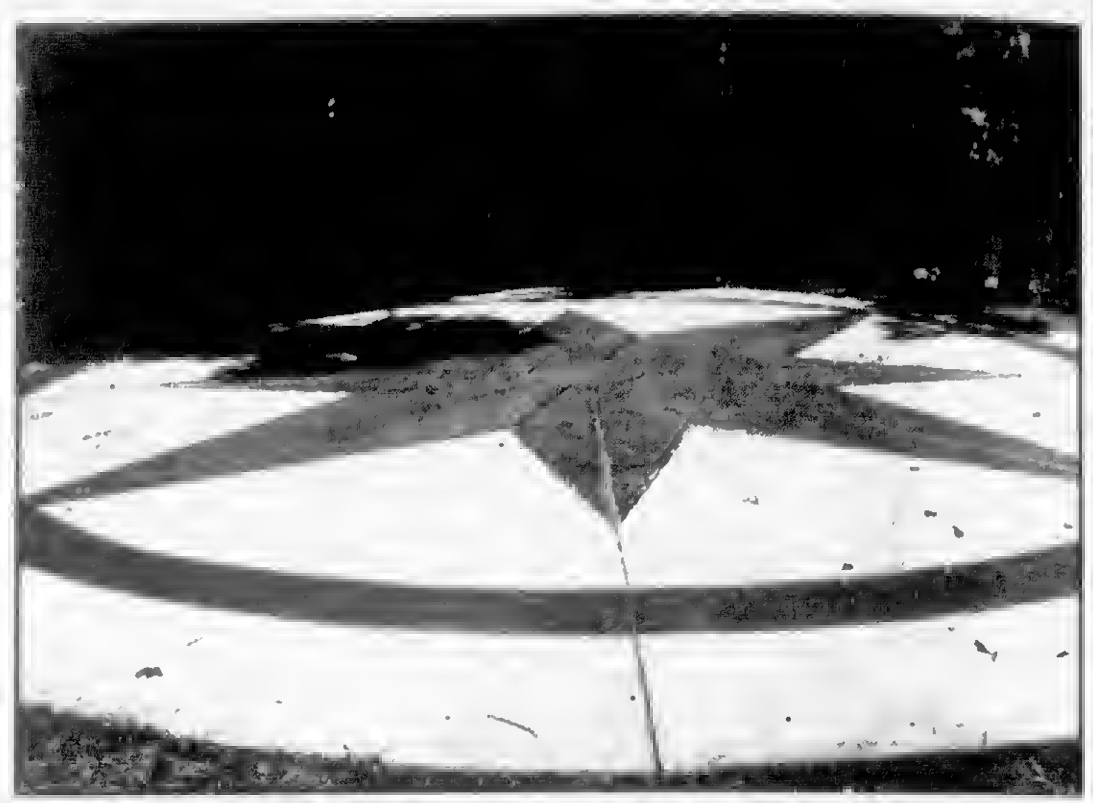
But, he added that the city crew isn't resting after the rush, the completion of these infrastructure projects means planning starts for next year.

The next phase of projects will be discussed at public budget hearings with Charlevoix City Council in February of 2003 and will be finalized before the end of March.

"There are always plenty of projects to do," Martin said for the upcoming season.

Two major future city projects are renovations to East Park and the Charlevoix Municipal Marina. Those who wish to be involved with planning can attend a public meeting concerning East Park which is scheduled to take place at 5:30 p.m. Aug. 15.

A marina goal setting session will follow at 7:30 p.m. Both are scheduled to take place at the American Legion Hall, 106 East Garfield Avenue, Charlevoix.



Above, this new walking and historical information site is where the old watertower used to be in Charlevoix. Once directional markers come in for this compass and a plaque to mark the park, it will be complete. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

Protect your skin in the sun throughout summer

Daniel Mann, M.D.

'Your health'

As a physician, I see the damaging effects of the sun on one's skin on a daily basis. The spectrum of this problem includes all age groups and ranges from seemingly innocent suntans to severe sunburns and skin cancer. Fortunately, like many other medical issues, prevention is a key ingredient. With the sun, it revolves around common sense and applying the proper sunscreens regularly.

However, there are some misunderstandings and confusing areas regarding sun exposure. I'd like to answer some of the common questions I hear and provide some helpful information to limit sun damage.

How does sunlight damage skin? Sunlight contains several types of ultraviolet radiation. UVA causes skin wrinkling and sunspots, whereas UVB causes sunburn and skin cancer. A suntan is damaged skin and repetitive tanning causes compounded injury. On the other hand, a sunburn is permanent, irreversible damage. Regular use of sunscreens can prevent these injuries.

What sunscreen should I use? Sunscreens act as a chemical barrier to the sun by absorbing its radiation. Purchase one that is at least SPF 15, preferably higher, and broad spectrum, meaning it blocks both UVA and UVB. Usually this label is on the front of the bottle. Otherwise, the key agents are as follows: Products containing PABA, cinnamates and salicylates block only UVB. Benzophenones block both UVA and UVB. Avobenzones, including Parsol 1789, are excellent at blocking UVA.

If you are going to be in the water, apply a sunscreen that is water resistant or waterproof, which must protect at the rated SPF for 40 and 80 minutes, respectively, in the water. Remember to reapply after toweling.

If you are traveling to high elevations, remember to use a higher SPF than usual, as sunlight is 10 percent more intense with each 1,000 feet of elevation.

Other agents include titanium dioxide and zinc oxide, which act as physical blocks to reflect sunlight. These are often good for children or others with sensitive skin that have stinging or burning with other sunscreens. There is also lightweight sun protective clothing that reflects the sunlight as well. In addition, many skin lotions and moisturizers now contain sunscreens.

What does SPF really mean? SPF, or sun protection factor, is very confusing. Yes, the higher the number, the better the protection. But, there is much more to the issue. SPF means how long you can stay out in direct sunlight without burning. For example, if you burn in 10 minutes in direct sunlight, a product with an SPF of 15 will allow 15 times that exposure, or 150 minutes, or 2-and-a-half hours. Interestingly, applying more sunscreen after that time period does not afford more protection. One then needs to apply a sunscreen with a higher SPF!

Furthermore, when the FDA ranks a product, SPF is determined by applying the sunscreen a half to one hour prior to exposure and every hour throughout testing. Rarely does one apply sunscreen that often. What does this all mean? Basically, we need to apply sunscreen several times throughout the day and at a proper SPF.

Treat a sunburn as you would any skin burn

How do I know if I am sunburned? Obviously, if you press on you skin and it blanches, you arc already burned. One needs to gct out of the sun before that occurs. Everyone is familiar with becoming redder several hours after exposure or waking up to a painful sunburn. Redness develops several hours after exposure and peaks at 24 hours! If you are already red and still in the sun, it's too late. Your skin is irreversibly damaged and peels because it is dead.

How can I treat a sunburn? A sunburn is a burn and should be treatcd like one. Common practices include cold compresses, aloe vera gel, oatmeal baths, cold cucumber and witch hazel which soothe the skin and provide evaporative cooling. Anti-inflammatories may help the discomfort.

I've also read that applying cooled black tea to the skin or mashed eggplant can be helpful.

Steroids or formal burn creams are often reserved for severe reactions or swelling from burning. Remember, these are just tcmporary measures as there is no way to cure a sunburn.

How can I prevent sunburn and skin cancer? The frequent use of a broad spectrum, high SPF sunscreen is imperative. Other measures include avoiding sun when it's most intense, generally from 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. Wear proper clothing that limits skin exposure, as well as a hat. Apply sunscreen even on cloudy days, as up to 80 perccnt of UV radiation can reach the skin.

I hope this has been an enlightening and educational article and will help you enjoy our beautiful northern Michigan summers safely.

Dr. Daniel Mann can be contacted at the Pine River Medical Center, located by Charlevoix Area Hospital, by calling 547-6554.

Teen injured in boating accident

A Bloomfield Hills teenager was injured in a boating accident around 6 p.m., Aug. 4 on Lake Charlevoix near Northwest Marine.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Patrick M. Berg, 13, of Bloomfield Hills was riding in a 26 foot 2000 World Cat motorboat driven by John Berg, 45, of Bloomfield Hills when the vessel struck a large wake causing him to be thrown from his seat.

Berg suffered a broken leg as a result of the impact and was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The accident was investigated by Marine Deputy Speigl and remains under investigation.

Sequanota Club celebrates 100 years

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A lot has changed in the world over the past 100 years, but Charlevoix's Sequanota Club is one place where things are almost as they were in 1902.

"The club is important for us because of the way the world is now. When you're here it's just like being in the 1940s and 50s. It's a stable, safe environment for kids to be, a place of peace and tranquility," outgoing Sequanota board president Peter Vance, 57, of Fenton and Charlevoix said.

The Sequanota Club celebrated its one hundredth birthday July 26 and 27 and while children of club members weren't out at the icehouse chipping ice blocks for tea, everyone did celebrate at the same clubhouse their predecessors built and used as a gathering facility in 1903.

Vance said the clubhouse plays a key role in the community, providing a historic gathering place for lunches and dinners, five days a week. Since 1903 it has incurred repairs, but no major remodeling has taken place and it continues to function as a constant reminder of the community's long, rich history in Charlevoix.

The club was founded in 1902 by John Winter Thompson of Galesburg, Ill. and Frederick William Mueller. The two traveled to Ironton from the Knox College campus and spent summer retreats basking in northern Michigan's beauty and fresh water resources.

Thompson and Mueller spent one afternoon of rest and relaxation picnicking at the Wolcott farm, the current site of the club, and just couldn't leave the tranquil setting behind.

That day they vowed to buy the property and turn it into a permanent place dedicated to the pursuit of relaxation.

The site they later purchased is situated off M-66, one mile north of Ironton, shouldering Sequanota Bay.

The visionaries even outlined their mission, which Vance said is alive and well 100 years later and is reflected in the landscaping and in the mindset of cottage owners.

The founding fathers' mission statement was recorded as a desire, "To secure this place and create out of it a place to return to, year after year, for real recreation — physical, mental and spiritual."

The two then set out to make their vision of grandeur, a reality. Soon after, 13 original cottages followed, as did the current clubhouse under the State of Michigan non-profit residential club regulations as outlined in the 1800s. These same rules were used to establish other familiar local summer communities including Petoskey's Bay View and Charlevoix's Belvedere Club.

The Sequanota Club has since blossomed to 22 cottages but hasn't lost its bucolic feel.

Vance said just last week a 3-year-old boy, strolling the row of cottages fell and skinned a knee and the closest cottage owner emerged, cleaned and Band-aided his wounds and sent him on his way — evidence of the close knit community.

Vance said many of the current residents have summered together since they were children and now their children are experiencing summer at Sequanota, continuing the club's rich legacy.

The Eads cottage, one of today's 22 cottages, was one of the original 13. And the Vance cottage is on the cusp of being one of the first. Vance explained his family cottage was built by his grandfather Elbridge in 1914.

And just as Peter's father brought him there to experience old world summers, Peter has brought his children, Jessica and Jon, to soak in the practically extinct old world flavor.

This flavor was relished at the club's centennial birthday bash July 26 and 27. That Friday, 150 people, including Sequanota residents, family and friends, gathered at a potluck and followed the dinner up the next day with games, an auction, Sunfish sailboat races and a dinner catered by Stafford's for 232 people.

With just over five weeks left until school starts and only five winterized cottages at the club, things at Sequanota will soon be quiet. But next summer the club will be 101 and alive with activity once again.

AUG 2002

Residents, visitors asked for their visions of county

Five town meetings will be conducted over the next two months in Charlevoix County which will offer opportunities for year-round and seasonal residents to assist in charting a common future for Charlevoix County.

The town meetings are part of a comprehensive community planning effort and offer everyone the opportunity to visualize a better community and take the first steps toward achieving that vision.

This first set of town meetings will identify the aspirations and desires of residents regarding the future character of Charlevoix County and serve to dramatically shape the preparation of a Land Use Plan for Charlevoix County.

All citizens of Charlevoix County are invited to attend. The first meeting is scheduled for Aug. 14 and will take place at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Bells Bay Road in Charlevoix Township.

The first set of meetings will include a "futuring" session where participants will explore the future potential of the area.

The meeting begins with a journey into the past, helping everyone to understand the changes that have resulted in present conditions. Participants are then broken into small groups and asked to identify what makes them proud about the community and what makes them sorry. Each group selects two to three of its proudest "prouds" and sorriest "sorrys" for presentation to the other groups.

Next, project consultants will present local trends and conditions facing the community. Finally, participants will again break into groups and be asked to visualize how they would like to see Charlevoix County evolve in the next 20 years.

A second series of town meetings will take place during the winter. They will focus on draft goals and objectives for the county's land use plan.

Alternative land use patterns will also be presented for public review and comment. Prior to adoption of the new plan in 2003, the county planning commission will host a series of public hearings to obtain additional public input.

The first series of meetings offers an opportunity to help shape the plans and policies which will affect the development of your community for years to come.

Planners urge the public to translate ideas to action by attending town meetings, bringing friends and helping chart the future direction of Charlevoix County.

Those with questions about the meeting can contact Larry Sullivan, Charlevoix County Planning Director, at (231) 547-7234.

The meetings are scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., Aug. 14 at the Charlevoix Knights of Columbus, Sept. 9 at the Chandler Township Hall, Sept. 16 at the Hayes Township Hall, Sept. 17 at the Boyne City Hall Auditorium and Sept. 23 at the Jordan Valley District Library.

Deputies find man in diabetic shock

At 10:15 a.m., July 28 Charlevoix County Sheriff's Deputies responded to a property damage crash at the intersection of Boyne City/Charlevoix and Burgess roads.

The accident was reported by a passerby who said no one was around the vehicle.

Upon arrival, deputies found a 50-year-old male inside the running vehicle in diabetic shock. Temperatures had reached between 80 and 85 degrees and the cab of the vehicle was full of exhaust fumes.

The driver had been there for approximately three hours before help arrived and was in serious medical trouble.

The Sheriff's Office urges those who see a crashed vehicle to stop and check the scene and report your findings to 911. There may be injured people in need of treatment that can't be readily observed and this information can help law enforcement determine if an emergency response is necessary and if the Emergency Medical Service is needed.

County Senior Expo to be Aug. 29 in East Jordan

The first Charlevoix County Senior Expo 2002 will take place from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m., Aug. 29 at the East Jordan Senior and Civic Center, 110 Main Street in East Jordan.

Admission to the event is free. The afternoon will feature representation by several agencies and vendors who will provide information to senior citizens and their families.

These will include: residential housing, end of life issues, community services, recreational/hobbies/crafts, senior employment and volunteer opportunities, health services, medical equipment, home care and hospice services, long term care planning, adult day services, Alzheimer's Education and Services, financial/legal and education.

Health screening, including fasting, cholesterol and blood sugar will be from 8 to 10 a.m. provided by Charlevoix Area Hospital. Low cost bone density screening will also be available for $10 per person.

Food and beverages will be available in the morning and again at noon, provided by the East Jordan Senior Center. All guests will be eligible for gifts and door prizes from individual vendors.

Helen Open to be Aug. 18 at city course

The second annual Helen Open will be Aug. 18 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

In its first year, the tournament had 13 teams of five people for a nine hole scramble and raised over $10,000. Those funds were given to the American Cancer Society and the Charlevoix County Hospice.

The Helen Open was established in 2001 as an honor to Helen Weislik, whose family has owned The Townhouse Bar in Charlevoix for almost 40 years. Weislik died from cancer in June 2001.

In keeping with the focus of the first tournament, this year's Helen Open will give its proceeds to the Hospice of Northwest Michigan.

Two teams have been added to this year's lineup, making spots for 75 more golfers, with first priority given to those who golfed in last year's tournament. There is a $50 per golfer fee that must be paid at registration.

During the event, signs with donor's names will be printed and placed on the course. Two complimentary drinks at the Townhouse will be provided to each person donating at least $50 and food will be available to non-golfers for a donation of $10 per person.

For more information on the Helen Open, call Rochelle Whippo, chairperson, at 547-3518 or 547-0881.

Townies keep trophy

Charlevoix County's oldest circulating trophy will stay in town again as the local team ended a nail biter by scoring five runs in the top of the seventh and winning 13-6 over the Belvies.

Joe Battle hit two doubles early with runners on base to garner Most Valuable Player honors for the Townies.

It was Will Bloom for the Belvies whose patrol along left center field's shoreline featured several plays including catch of the day.

Ben McKinney hit two home runs for the resort team while Dave McKenzie hit a long one for the locals.

Another pitchers duel between Potter Orr and Dave Novotny was enjoyed by over 90 fans this year.

Women golf to raise funds for breast cancer research

The Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course was an official site for the 2002 Rally for a Cure, a breast cancer research fund-raiser, July 30.

This is the fourth time that the course has joined in the effort. A total of 20 players came to the event at the course.

As part of the Rally for a Cure activities, a closest-to-the-pin contest is given at a designated par-3 hole. Golf balls bearing the pink ribbon breast cancer awareness symbol are awarded to every player who hits the green and a prize is given for the shot that lands nearest to the hole.

Golfers also receive early detection literature and a Rally pink ribbon golf pin to wear for the day, plus a full-year subscription to Golf for Women Magazine.

A special 90 yard, seventh hole shot was made by Joyce Stewart. She won by being closest to the pin and took home a Ping putter.

Breast cancer is the leading cause of death for women ages 35-54 and the disease also accounts for more than 75 percent of all cancer deaths in women, 55 years of age or older.

Waterfront Art Fair an artist favorite

Over 100 artists from the United States and Canada will gather to display their work at this year's Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Aug. 10 in East Park.

This event ranks as one of the most prestigious outdoor shows in the state and attracts both well-known artists and savvy buyers and browsers. This will be the forty-fourth year of the event.

"Charlevoix was one of the finest art fairs that I did that treated artists like professionals. Both the fair and staff and the people who came to see the work, took the time to look at the work and appreciate it. It made me realize that one could make a living and be respected as an artist," Doug DeLing, of Mason, said about the art fair.

"Now almost 30 years later, I would like to thank the Charlevoix Art Fair for maintaining high standards, providing artists a professional format in which to present their work and for being a helping hand 30 years ago."

DeLing will be at this year's show. His media is Raku-fired clay.

Dot Replinger, an artist from Urbana, Ill., added, "Charlevoix is my favorite art fair as a participant. Not only is the setting beautiful, but the committee is helpful (and not officious). The people who attend the art fair are knowledgeable and appreciative. It's fun to see some of the same customers year after year. I consider them among my circle of friends. The other artists who show their work are quality artists and many of them have become friends as well."

Replinger's media is fiber and weaving.

This sentiment was also repeated by Pam Kessler, an artist from Clarkston.

She said, "The Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair has always been one of my favorite shows to participate in. The philosophy of its committee members seems to be one in which the emphasis is placed on 'the arts,' which creates a wonderful forum for the artists to show their work. The forum they create is just that — a forum to show your work without the distractions that draw the public's attention in different directions. And the community that the show draws does patronize the arts. Visitors bring their knowledge and enthusiasm for the arts to this show."

The Charlevoix Waterfront Art Fair is sponsored by the Charlevoix Council for the Arts, a non-profit organization. The fair channels all proceeds back into the community each year.

This year, the council's annual scholarship has been awarded to Elizabeth Tebeau, an aspiring young artist. The group also purchased a conservatory grand piano for the auditorium of the new high school.

The mission of the founders, as well as the present committee, is to bring fine art to residents and seasonal visitors to Charlevoix.

Wind tower areas in township plans

TOWER

and zoning ordinance amendments.

"The master plan gives an overall view of the township. It's not actual zoning, it gives a picture of what we would like to be there and zoning controls it," Eveline Township Planning Commission Chairman Eric Beishlag explained.

According to Beishlag, the amendments to the zoning ordinance and master plan address residents' concerns and would likely exclude the Way property as a potential site for wind turbine generators.

"I think the ordinance would restrict it enough so it (a wind turbine generator farm) probably wouldn't be there," he said.

Amended zoning ordinance restrictions he pointed to that may prohibit the Way property from being a viable site for wind turbines were setbacks from the road and blade size limitations.

But Kiteley, a close neighbor to the Way property, said not allowing the Way turbines to be built wouldn't quell her concern.

"I would be just as concerned from the bigger standpoint. I want to see good and fair zoning for all. They need to look at this carefully for the good of Eveline Township," she said.

She stressed the public safety issue and the economic impact such a use could bring to the township, a "resort and residential area."

While the master plan district overlay includes areas other than the Way property, where the commercial turbines could be located, Beishlag said that doesn't mean they'll pop up all over.

"I don't think we're talking a real big area (in the overlay), considering the size of the township. I think the ordinance is good; it's restrictive, but it gives us flexibility," Beishlag said.

Leslie Sickterman of the Traverse City planning firm Gourdie and Fraser, who helped draft the master plan addendum and overlay and the zoning ordinance changes, echoed Beishlag's characterization of the changes as "restrictive."

She explained that the district overlay is an extensive areas, but not all parcels are suitable or meet the requirements of the zoning ordinance to be eligible for approval.

Changed restrictions include height limitations and setbacks.

The maximum height of wind turbines is proposed to be reduced from 390 feet to 230 feet and the proposal increases setback requirements to a minimum of 500 feet and a preferred distance of 2,600 feet.

He explained the master plan overlay is not a zoned district, but does offer potential wind turbine suppliers an indication of where a special use permit request for such a tower could be considered.

He said the overlay points to districts where the turbines are best suited and the zoning ordinance makes sure they follow stringent rules.

Suitability is based on a positive and negative point system. Those properties with high elevations and prime agricultural soils get positive points and negative points are assigned to heavily wooded areas, wetlands and those properties in close proximity to the airport.

Beishlag said the negative and positive attribute scoring is an attempt to pinpoint the optimal location for wind turbines in the township.

"We never all get everything we want, we need to come to a compromise. If its a satisfactory plan I would like them (opponents) to accept it. We've been at this for a year, I think it's time to move on," he said of the drafted proposal.

But it doesn't look like any plan will be accepted by everyone.

In fact, one of the lead voices in the group, Eveline Township resident Nancy Ferguson, said in a previous interview that this issue is too serious and no matter what the ordinance looks like, she'll work to take it to a referendum vote.

The proposed changes are expected to be the topic of discussion at a September public hearing.

Kiteley is hoping to see the township survey residents to gather their thoughts and opinions for the master plan.

No date has been officially set but will be discussed at the planning commission's meeting scheduled to take place at 7 p.m., Aug. 14 at the Eveline Township Hall, 08525 Ferry Road in East Jordan.

At this same meeting Way is expected to present a proposal for a R-4 zoning change for his former wind turbine tract of land.

The property is currently a hay field.

The master plan addendum and the revised zoning ordinance can be reviewed by calling Beishlag at (231) 547-2666.

Sickterman urges those interested to note both documents are drafts and are subject to change.

THE JOINT COMMISSION on Accreditation of Healthcare Organizations will conduct an accreditation survey of Community Choice Michigan on August 26, 2002. The purpose of the survey will be to evaluate the organization's compliance with nationally established Joint Commission standards. The survey results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded the organization. Joint Commission standards deal with organizational quality of care issues and the safety of the environment in which care is provided. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent and valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the Joint Commission's field representatives at the time of the survey. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for a public information interview must be made in writing and should be sent to the Joint Commission no later than 5 working days before the survey begins. The request must also indicate the nature of the information to be provided at the interview. Such requests should be addressed to: Division of Accreditation Operations, Organization Liaison, Joint Commission on Accreditation of Healthcare Services, One Renaissance Boulevard, Oakbrook Terrace, IL 60181. The Joint Commission will acknowledge such requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the organization of the request for any interview. The organization will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time, and place of the meeting.

White Cane days

On Aug. 9 and 10, the Charlevoix Lions will be out and about Charlevoix for their annual "White Cane Safety Days" Fund Drive. Donations to the Lions help support the Michigan Eye Bank and Transplant Center; the Michigan Leader Dog Training Center and Puppy Search and Development Program; the Welcome Home for the Blind in Grand Rapids. Locally the Lions Club provides glasses for needy individuals with special eye problems. The Lions also take in used eyeglasses for distribution in third world countries.

"White Cane Safety Days" takes it's name after the familiar red-banded white cane, which is recognized worldwide for identifying and protecting the sight-impaired when they are crossing streets, or otherwise moving about. As a symbolic reminder, each of the Charlevoix Lions, who are collecting donations, will carry an official white cane. Lions Walt Hufford and Nick Kling are co-chairing this year's White Cane Safety Days fund-raiser. Used glasses can be dropped off at Steve Voci's office at 103 Clinton and Reed Freidinger's office at 14730 Park Ave.

Patterson is a long term, musical mainstay at Bay View. Anyone attending Bay View's vespers concerts is well aware of Patterson's outstanding ability to play any and all types of selections. In addition to his instructing and accompanying duties at Bay View, Patterson has been often featured as a concert soloist.

This concert is a summer offering of the "Sundays at Four" program series at First Congregational. The series highlights gifted professional musicians such as Patterson as well as local instrumental and vocal students. There is no admission fee and the public is cordially invited.

ACCIDENT

Barnard who was in the right front convertible passenger seat was also transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital, where he was pronounced dead of massive head injuries. He was wearing a seatbelt at the time of the accident.

Barnard is the son of Susan and Michael Barnard, also of Charlevoix. He was a sophomore at Charlevoix High School and an accomplished athlete as a member of the Rayder track and field team, with which he pole vaulted, the boy's soccer team and the ski team.

Varsity ski coach Sue Miller described Barnard as vibrant and talented and said the loss to the team, the school district and the community is incalculable.

"He was a good all around kid with a lot of talent and a lot of heart. As someone told me once before, he was full of life and had so many opportunities," Miller said.

Barnard's other family and friends were not ready to comment at this time.

Lasater said it took two hours to clear the scene of the accident.

The Sheriff's office was assisted by the City of Charlevoix Ambulance and Fire departments and the East Jordan Ambulance. The crash remains under investigation.

Many decisions made by voters in primary

VOTE

the district: the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township north of the bridge, Hayes Township and Bay Township.

Smith said, "I congratulate Valerie (Snyder) and I would like to express my appreciation to all the people that supported me in the past few months."

This means Snyder moves on to the November general election, where she will face Democrat Paul J. Richards and the Green Party's Bill Henne.

While Snyder won in District One handily, the vote was much closer in District Six, where there was a three way race for the Republican nomination by incumbent Shirley Roloff and challengers Richard Gillespie and John Elzinga. District Six is made up of the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township south of the bridge, Norwood Township and the two townships on Beaver Island, St. James and Peaine townships.

In this race, Roloff harely won with 286 total votes to Gillespie's 276 and Elzinga's 141. This gives Roloff 41 percent of the total vote, Gillespie 39 percent and Elzinga 20 percent.

As for the precinct breakdown, Roloff was the favorite on the mainland while Gillespie, a native islander, handily took Beaver Island with 195 total votes to Roloff's 75.

But, since Roloff was the overall winner, she will go on to the November general election to face the Green Party's Joseph King.

In the District Five Republican nomination race, Dennis Jason beat Jon Jasinski with a total of 129 total votes to 85. Jason had 60 percent of the vote.

District Five consists of Marion Township, Eveline Township and parts of Wilson Township.

The bulk of millage support was in favor of road maintenance and repair dollars being generated as road improvement millage requests were widely accepted by voters in four Charlevoix County townships.

Residents of Boyne Valley, Marion, Hudson, Peaine and Eveline townships all passed road millages.

Emergency service and community support organization millages passed in Melrose, Peaine and St. James townships.

But, Peaine turned down an airport millage.

West Nile Virus found in area crow

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

The West Nile Virus has been discovered in a dead crow found in Charlevoix County, the Northwest Michigan Community Health Agency announced last week.

According to Dr. Joshua Meyerson, medical director of Northwest Michigan Community Mental Health, the hird was found around the Bay Shore area. Meyerson said the discovery of a crow with the West Nile Virus is not a cause for panic in Charlevoix, because there is a low possibility of area residents becoming infected.

According to information supplied by Meyerson, the West Nile Virus can be passed onto humans through a mosquito bite. The virus cannot be passed from human-to-human.

Most people infected with the virus have no symptoms of illness, hut some may become ill three to 15 days after the bite.

Health authorities believe about one in four infected persons will have mild illness with fever, headache and body aches, sometimes with a skin rash and swollen lymph glands. Encephalitis is less common and may include headache, high fever, stiff neck, stupor, disorientation, coma, tremors, muscle weakness, convulsions and paralysis.

Community mourns loss of student

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

It was a beautiful summer day in Charlevoix Aug. 8, but smiles and laughter were in short supply and an invisible gloomy cloud loomed overhead as the community mourned the loss of Michael "Kelsey" Barnard, 15, a son, a friend and an accomplished student athlete.

Kelsey's life was cut short at 8 p.m. Aug. 5 in a tragic one-vehicle car accident that occurred in Ironton.

That night and the next two days were painful for those close to him and the Barnard family, but when it came time to say a final farewell Aug. 8 the joy Kelsey brought to lives across the globe shined.

Tears welled up in the eyes of his mother, Susan Barnard as she described the evening service for her son. She said an estimated 1,000 people filled Charlevoix's Assembly of God Church, many driving long distances to support the family, pay homage to Kelsey and share their grief.

At the service, the gloom lifted as cherished Kelsey stories filled the church and a poem written in his memory hy Charlevoix High School students was read aloud. During the service tears were complemented by smiles when Kelsey's trademark grin splashed across a hackdrop the Barnard family used to roll a slide show highlighting unforgettable moments and accomplishments in his life.

"It wasn't a funeral, it was a celebration of his life," Susan said.

And friends, family and school administrators

Island had many changes in recent years

By JC REINDL
Special to the Courier

Beaver Island roads through St. James were recently renovated. (Photo courtesy of Phyllis Moore)

While a ferry ride over is still two hours and a graduating class can often be counted on one hand, much has happened in the past five years on Beaver Island.

Home and business construction has progressed at an unparalleled rate, infrastructure improvements take place faster then ever before, the year-round population is increasing, former residents are returning home and a greater number of law enforcement officials are now patrolling Beaver Island then ever before.

Additionally, the island is currently experiencing a housing boom. A 25-year period of slow, but steady, population growth has picked up the pace in the last five years.

"It's amazing how many new homes are going up," said Bill Cashman, director of the Beaver Island Historical Society.

Since 1998, 117 new building permits for houses have been issued on Beaver Island by The Charlevoix County Building Department. Between the island's two townships of St. James and Peaine, most of the construction has taken place in Peaine, where 67 of the building permits were issued.

This housing boom was prompted by the introduction of the Emerald Isle ferry in 1998 by the Beaver Island Boat Company, Cashman said.

A bigger class of boat than the previous Beaver Islander, the Emerald Isle contained a much larger garage and storage area below the passenger decks. This storage space permitted the transportation of large trucks, equipment and construction vehicles to the island for the first time on regular ferry trips.

The Emerald Isle ferry brought the capacity to transport enough components to build about one house per day. The cost of construction also decreased with the introduction of supplies from the mainland, furthering the housing boom's magnitude.

The island construction boom extends beyond houses — the hardware, grocery store and hotels are among the buildings that have experienced major renovations and additions in recent years.

A new brewery and bed and breakfast are on their way, along with a million-dollar community center, Cashman said. The downtown sidewalk, street lamps and sewage system have also undergone improvements recently.

The year-round population on Beaver Island has also been increasing. The most current census places the population at around 550 residents, up from 404 in the 1990 census, which is a 36 percent increase.

The population has also expanded by way of the trend of one-time residents returning after leaving the island at the end of their childhood. Hardware store owner and veterinarian Jeffrey Powers observes how "a lot of island families are moving back here after they retire."

One such resident is Jim McDonough, operator of McDonough's Market. After graduating from Beaver Island high school is 1980, he moved away to Grand Rapids.

"Our parents insisted that all the children leave the island to get a taste of the rest of the state," McDonough said.

By 1998 the family run market, which his mother and two brothers had been operating, needed more help. So after spending 18 years away, McDonough returned to Beaver Island to fill the position.

Time spent away on the mainland has given McDonough a perspective for seeing changes that have taken place over the years.

"Even today I still am surprised by how much its changed," McDonough said. "We've started seeing tourists by late April, where before it was only real busy from Fourth of July weekend through mid-August."

As tourism has expanded, the number of police on the island has expanded as well.

"We needed more assistance, the island was getting overwhelmed, so we asked the state for more help" said Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater.

Lasater tells how during his 26 years of service Beaver Island had always been assigned one part-time deputy sheriff. The year-round, part-time sheriff has become full-time and for four months during the summer season an additional deputy is stationed on Beaver Island.

He just recently proposed to relocate the substation to an independent location, instead of at the home of sheriff deputy Mike Russell and is looking at creating some kind of lock up on the island.

A small number of Michigan State Police troopers have also been assigned to Beaver Island. Troopers, based in Petoskey, journey over to the island for a two to three day stay every week.

1st Lt. Aaron Sweeney of the Petoskey post said in the past there had been a State Police presence on Beaver Island, although until recently it had been discontinued.

"It's not a new thing, it has just been resurrected" he said.

The decision to reintroduce troopers to the island was made last year after meetings with the Petoskey State Police and some local business owners. The consensus of these meetings was that with the high level of tourism, the island's residences and businesses could use the additional security that troopers would bring.

It has been an adjustment for some Beaver Island residents to adapt to the new police presence as the State Police pull motorists over for what some islanders consider minor traffic violations.

"Beaver Island has traditionally been a lawless community — we are not used to following the letter of the law," Cashman said .

Many long time residents have spent their entire lives accustomed to not wearing seat belts or have never worried about parking on the right side of the street. Following such formalities seemed unnecessary on an island with such a small amount of traffic.

Though many may be astonished at the growth and changes which have occurred on Beaver Island lately, some island residents have put its recent developments into a greater state and nation-wide context.

"The trends going on in the country at large have been mirrored here on Beaver Island," said Robert Cole of the Beaver Island Historical Society.

Cashman added, "We're getting more like the mainland every year."

A general concern when small communities experience rapid periods of growth is that the new and faster pace of life will tarnish the unique flavor of the community that made it an attractive area to begin with.

Cashman believes that so far growth has been good for the island. Beaver Island has "gone from a more closed community to an open, progressive, forward looking community," he said.

Although no one can say if Beaver Island will ever fall prey to over-development, Cashman is optimistic about the future of the island and its residents.

As the growth rate continues, Cashman's goal for the Beaver Island's Historical Society is that "....we can preserve the best of Beaver Island and its character."

Congratulations to hospital for new ER

EDITORIAL

While many residents, donors and hospital personnel watched, Charlevoix Area Hospital's new emergency room and heliport officially opened to serve patients at 4 p.m., Sunday, Aug. 11.

With an increase in of 400 percent in emergency room use in the past 20 years at the hospital, the new emergency room adds 7,600 square feet — over twice the size of the original hospital. This expansion has 10 treatment rooms for cardiac care and trauma, a separate imaging area with new x-ray equipment, a new family conference room, new admitting room and a new waiting suite for visitors, as well as an expanded Urgent Care Center for non-emergency patients on evenings and weekends.

Added to this is a new helicopter landing pad on the roof of the hospital that will greatly help in the treatment and transportation of critically ill patients.

But, this event marked just part of a major expansion and renovation project that is being conducted by the hospital at a cost of $6.1 million.

Visitors, patients and staff at the hospital can expect to see a new lakeside wing with additional labor and delivery rooms, as well as post-surgical and intensive care rooms in the near future. And the existing admitting, billing and medical records and visitor waiting areas are slated for remodeling.

All of this adds up to a world-class hospital that the residents of Charlevoix can be proud of. The hospital is meeting the needs of a growing community and doing so with beautiful new additions to its existing building.

We would like to congratulate Charlevoix Area Hospital as it opens its new emergency room and salute them as they continue construction of more improvements.

Northern summers are short, but filled with life

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

A Euonymus bush grows just outside our kitchen window. It's an Asian import cultivated for its brilliant fall foliage. The native Euonymus is sometimes called Burning Bush for the same reason. Just about this time of year, the first hints of red appear on a few of the leaves, like the sunburn on an August visitor with too little sunscreen. For the Euonymus leaves, it means that the work of this season is over, and they, like the other summer visitors, will soon depart (you might say they are "leaving"). Its not a long trip for the leaves from bush to ground, but they are traveling down, like many of our other down state visitors.

Summer is the season for making the most of the time available, whether by a human visitor to Charlevoix or by one of the other biological visitors to Charlevoix or by one of the other biological visitors around us. We are visited with abundant life during our short summer. The creatures who live above the forty-fifth parallel must pack nearly all of their living into the few months of northern summer and having completed most of that living, they are biologically expendable. Not only leaves are expendable at this time of year, so are most of the insects and fungi that have been living on those leaves.

This is the finest time to be a spider in northern Michigan. The insect food is super-abundant and most of the insects have already ensured their next generation. Those things that eat leaves or live on them, like the fungi that make the black spots on your Norway Maples, are likewise using for food a biological resource that has already finished its work. The tree is not harmed and the old, senescent leaves are providing for additional life in the form of molds and insects. Biodiversity is in general a good thing.

Think of the leaves on your deciduous trees as visitors who bring beauty, cool air, oxygen and other resources and then depart. The number of such leafy visitors is almost uncountable, but they have been counted. A forest of maples and beech trees here produces about three tons of leaves per acre each year and surprisingly the forests here in the north produce more leaves per year than do southern forests with a much longer growing season.

The trees compensate for the short growing season by making more leaves, about half again as many as a similar forest in southern Indiana. More leaves and longer days mean more food for everything. You cannot easily see the difference in leaf numbers, but it can be accurately measured. Those leaves are living life to the full during their short time on the tree.

Maybe that's why so many of our fellow humans come north. The biological world tells us that you can pack more living into a short time here. A decade ago, before we moved here permanently, the first red on the Euonymus meant that we would soon be leaving, but I always supposed that two weeks in Charlevoix was worth two months anywhere farther south.

Letters to the editor

Keep Charlevoix beautiful

Editor:

I just finished reading an article in the Petoskey News-Review about a meeting regarding enlargement of Charlevoix City's marina.

There is no doubt in my mind we should ask the state to give us money to fill in Round Lake so we can make it a parking area for cars and trucks. I also think it is a good idea to pave all of Ferry Beach, Michigan Beach and Depot Beach. And finally, to get more capacity for parking, (whether it is boats or cars) we should tear up the flowers along the streets that we put down this summer and pave that area also. Another idea; instead of paving over the lake to allow for cars, why don't we run a dock facility three-quarters across the lake on the same parallel as the Belvedere Club and the Chicago Club. That will give us approximately a tenth of the lake unused so we can turn the boats around and our boat customers can go out to The Big Lake.

This should give us at least 3,500 more parking areas in the surrounding area of Charlevoix, not only for boats, but for cars as well.

I don't think there is anyone in the city or the township who wants Charlevoix the Beautiful to turn into Charlevoix the Ugly.

The suggestions above would do that. And so would enlarging the marina in Round Lake. We are all so lucky to be here. Basically, we are all here for only one reason; the beauty of the area. I don't know another place on this earth where there are three lakes all joined together to make the Charlevoix Mystique. Anything that is a detriment to that is not the way to go. With the Coast Guard cutter Acacia leaving us permanently in a couple of years, that will immediately give us a cost-free already-built dock for small cruise ships. That saves us a lot of money and uses a facility that would be vacant. It also does away with any need for a larger dock.

I lived on Mackinac Island for 16 years and participated in a committee to study the benefits of enlarging the downtown marina (the economics, the money brought in, the problem of boat sewage, and others). After two years of analysis we discovered the worst customers we had on Mackinac Island were those who came and used our marina. They brought their own booze, they brought their own food, they brought their own clothes and they brought their own accommodations. Only 30 percent of them went for dinner on the island (The Grand Hotel, The Windermere, The Pink Pony, and others). It was obvious to us that our money from the state could be more profitably spent on the island than the marina. We did not enlarge the marina. After the decision was made, as the years passed, all of us were very gratified that we had not enlarged the facility as the state of Michigan wanted us to.

I think the same situation exists here in our beautiful little city. Let the state of Michigan keep their money, let us keep Charlevoix beautiful! Don't we all love it the way it is? The answer is "YES"!

Thank you

Editor:

Thanks for another successful Venetian Festival

We are amazed at how the Venetian Committee improves upon the Venetian Festival each year. They had such a wide variety of music available this year that we noticed a definite increase in the number of people who came to watch the concerts in the park. Kids Day was amazing to say the least. We have never seen so many people having fun in the park with all the different activities going on simultaneously! The mini Pow-Wow on Friday was interesting and informative to all who attended. We would like to thank all the volunteers who made this year's Venetian Festival the best ever with special thanks to Dan Baron for his tireless work and support of our troop.

We had a very successful fundraiser during Venetian Festival this year. This success was due in part to the hard work done by the parents and family members of the scout troop who put in many hours of time setting up, working and taking down the booth and helping behind the scenes.

We would also like to thank the businesses that donated ice and supplied us with pizza. Next, we would like to thank Petoskey Middle School and St. Mary's School for allowing us to borrow their popcorn poppers.

Thanks also to all of the public who supported our booth during the festival.

Thanks from former queens

Editor:

Thank you Dale Boss for decorating our float so beautifully, Jim Bemis for pulling the float, Dianna Phillips for doing such a great job on this year's Queen Pageant and court activities and Dan Barron and the Venetian Festival Board for an outstanding job again on this year's Venetian Festival.

And thank you for our breakfast before the street parade that was provided by area businesses.

Thanks to all.

Donations appreciated

Editor:

On behalf of the Charlevoix Girls Soccer Team I would like to thank Dan Barron, Dean Davenport, and the Venetian Committee for their efforts in making this year's festival such a huge success. I would especially like to thank Mark and Vicky Greyerbiel for their donation of the medals for the three-on-three soccer tournament. This donation enabled the girls to put on the tournament, keep the cost down for participants, and still raise some needed money for the program. Thanks for the support!

Blood drive a success

Editor:

On July 25, a beautiful and fun-filled day during the fantastic 2002 Venetian Festival in Charlevoix, a sister event was well attended and supported by the Charlevoix community and visitors.

The Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix hosted the American Red Cross for the fourth annual Venetian Festival Bloodmobile.

I am very grateful to all of the volunteers who worked and the 77 donors who came to the blood drive during this critical time of need for blood. Thank you!

Rotary Club to have golf tournament

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 5 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Billed as "The Affordable Golf Tournament," the entry fee is only $35 per person, the same as last year.

"After lengthy discussions with several financial consultants and reviewing our most recent retirement plan statements, my fellow Rotarians and I were convinced that the right thing to do was to keep the cost the same as last year," said tournament chairman Tim Petrosky.

The event is a four-person scramble. The entry fee includes golf, a dinner buffet at Giuseppe's, and a tournament trademark: Oodles of prizes. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, and to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle.

"It is due to the generosity of area businesses and residents, who donate prizes for the event, that makes the tournament so much fun for everyone," said Petrosky.

Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop. The event is limited to the first 20 teams that register. An optional skins game and "mulligan's" will also be available to teams. The shotgun start is at 4:30 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:30 p.m.

Rotary uses proceeds from the event to benefit the community with an emphasis on area youth.

Big Rock at its halfway mark in dismantlement

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Consumer's Energy restoration project at Big Rock Point, a nuclear energy facility in Charlevoix's Hayes Township, has reached another milestone....the halfway point.

The focus of restoration workers at the mid-way mark in returning the waterfront property to a green field, is dry fuel storage.

"This is a key milestone. It will allow us to do full-scale dismantlement of the containment and other associated buildings," Tim Petrosky, Big Rock Point Public Affairs Director, said.

The containment building houses both the reactor and spent fuel which will soon be loaded into canisters for storage.

But the process of relocating the fuel is not taken lightly and is done in multiple stages.

The first stage, "dry runs," started at the end of the last week and continued this week. Big Rock restoration workers performed dry runs or dry fuel relocation practices and will continue to do so until they are satisfied with the dry run performance.

After they are confident with dry run procedure, Big Rock administrators will contact the United States Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) who will also perform dry runs.

Petrosky said the purpose of dry runs is to ensure precision.

"You always have to be very precise when handling spent nuclear fuel and that principal guides everything we do. There's no schedule pressure, we'll practice as long as we have to, to ensure we do the job properly," he said.

Once the NRC is satisfied with the dry run procedure, the restoration workers will begin loading the casks with spent nuclear fuel.

Petrosky said the site has 441 fuel barrels to load into seven stainless steel casks or canisters.

These canisters are then inserted into concrete over packs, that stand 20 feet tall and are 11.5 feet in diameter and sit above ground on a dry fuel storage pad.

"This is one of the milestones that enable us to restore the site to a green field," he explained.

Other green field restoration efforts will then follow.

After the loading process is complete, the site's reactor vessel will be shipped to a low-level radioactive waste facility in Barnwell, S.C. and its steam drum will be shipped to a similar facility in Utah.

When the site was operational, the steam drum took steam from reactor where water was boiled, separated the moisture out and sent the steam to the turbine.

After those two major shipments have been completed, the landmark green spherical reactor building will be dismantled, as will the turbine building.

The restoration project began Aug. 29, 1997 and is expected to be complete by the end of 2004.

Petrosky said everything will be gone at that point, but the dry fuel storage facility. If the government's plan to relocate spent nuclear fuel nationwide to Yucca Mountain in Nevada ultimately is approved this storage facility may too some day be a thing of the past.

Traffic study may be completed soon

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A team of experts looking to understand Charlevoix's seasonal traffic debacle returned to town last weekend to gather another bundle of data.

The city of Charlevoix hired a group of six traffic watchers who operate under the direction of Richard Lyles, a traffic consultant with his firm Richard Lyles and Associates of Williamston to tackle the arduous task of solving the seemingly insolvable.

The group started its traffic study in late June and has since collected data to define the problem by looking at what the trends are, whether it be people crossing against the light or people and or vehicles doing something out of the ordinary.

To achieve insight into the traffic quandary, the group grabbed lawn chairs and watched and recorded what they saw. They were in town the weekend before Venetian Festival and spent the afternoons of July 18, 19 and 20 counting pedestrian volumes and pedestrian vehicular conflicts.

While it may have seemed the stop light at Bridge and Clinton streets was different during their study the Lyles group did not change anything, they only observed and video recorded a few key spots.

In addition to manual counting of people and incidents they took note of other elements impacting traffic flow including bridge openings, jay walkers and more.

"Obviously one huge problem is the bridge. That's always going to be a constraint in 'fixing the problem,'" Lyles said.

So, after studying traffic trends on relatively slow summer afternoons, the group returned last weekend for a "worst case scenario weekend," the Waterfront Art Fair.

"The weekend we were here before was in between big events. To be complete we collected a day of data during a big event. I expect we'll see the same patterns observed as we did the other weekend just more of it," he said.

Lyles said this was the last time they will collect data in Charlevoix. After the weekend study, the team returned to Williamston to draft a report on its findings to be presented to Charlevoix city officials.

> "I wouldn't get my hopes up with respect to some magic silver ball that will fix it. Part of what makes Charlevoix unique is its slow paced downtown."
> Richard Lyles,
> Traffic consultant studying downtown

Lyles expects it to be ready in "a few weeks."

They plan to incorporate Michigan Department of Transportation (MDOT) vehicle counts that have been done on more than one occasion and account for crash reports from the city police in the report.

The Lyles group will also recommend a range of solutions to temper the traffic issue including pros and cons of each of its recommendations.

He added that any possible solution will not be implemented by his group, it will ultimately have to be pursued by MDOT, the owner of Bridge Street, and the city of Charlevoix.

After the city has reviewed the findings and implements a solution, the Lyles group will return to reevaluate its utility.

"I wouldn't get my hopes up with respect to some magic silver ball that will fix it. Part of what makes Charlevoix unique is its slow paced downtown," he said.

Charlevoix graduate using her history skills

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Summer sketching is most often associated with sand castle silhouettes and wild flower renderings, but for Charlevoix resident Brooke Block, it meant drafting Turkish ruins dating back to the late Roman or Byzantine era.

Block, 21, was one of three students from DePauw University is Greencastle, Ind. to receive a summer research grant. The funds landed her in the middle of a rural Muslim community in Ankara, Turkey where archeologists were studying ancient civilizations and she was drawing pieces to the historic puzzle as they were uncovered.

The 1999 graduate of Charlevoix High School may hail from a small town in midwestern United States, but she wasn't intimidated by her long trek across the globe and 14 hour work days. She was ready to work.

Brooke Block

Block's pursuit of remnants of ancient culture stems from her curiosity and love of being challenged. Soon after hearing the good news, she started designing her summer project. She titled her endeavor, "Drawing Archeological Finds."

Prior to boarding a plane for Turkey, June 3, she did extensive research at the library and sketched objects similar to those she would document for publication.

While she spent the next three weeks drawing, she is not an art major. She said her artistic talent comes from her mom, Charlevoix native and Horton Bay resident, Jodi Lyons, an architectural designer.

Her artistic skills are noteworthy, but her knowledge of Greek history and now of Turkish culture are tied closely to her first love, Classical Civilization and Ancient Greek, her undergraduate major and minor respectively, at DePauw.

"There are so many new ideas to be developed in the field, it will never be finished, there's nothing absolute about it," Block said.

This lack of absolutes and expansive realm of possibilities is at the core of her interest and she said also often lead to heated academic debate.

"I learned a lot this summer in a room with all those people. This is their life, academia, you always have to prove yourself. You have to be able to hang before you can talk with the big dogs," Block said.

The site where she was stationed was a mound bordering a flat basin area called Elmali, where a lake once rippled with water.

Her group, established through associated colleges of the south, includ-

Local girl attends World Youth Day

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

Pope John Paul II touched many lives during the week-long World Youth Day event in Toronto, Canada and Charlevoix resident Melissa McDonough was there to see it happen.

McDonough, 19, attended World Youth Day from July 22 to July 28 with about 80 other individuals from the Diocese of Gaylord.

"It's a gathering of all the Catholic youths in the world. It's a celebration of God, but for everyone of the world youth," she said.

During the week-long event, McDonough was able to see Pope John Paul II as he cruised by in his "Pope-Mobile" when he arrived at the event on July 25.

"I could almost reach out and touch him. You were dumb-founded," McDonough said.

The reactions from the crowd varied as McDonough saw some people crying while others were praying or sitting there. The emotional intensity of the moment seemed surreal.

When the Pope spoke to the crowd, no one was left out.

McDonough said the Pope is fluent in eight different languages. She added that he gave most of his speeches in English, but other translations could be heard via radios the youth could use to understand the man they came to see.

"It was neat to hear him speak because he is very encouraging of the youth," McDonough said.

McDonough's week was comprised of rejoicing and guest speakers. On Monday night she and others from her Diocese arrived in Toronto. The opening night Mass was at 5 p.m. on Tuesday.

From Tuesday through Friday, McDonough said she stayed with a host family and attended dramas put on by Net Ministries, listened to a speech by a Cardinal from Ireland along with an Arch Bishop. Afterward, she said the youth would go to Exhibition Place, which is where they saw different performances.

The chance to attend such an event was placed in McDonough's hands. She said her church has never attended the event, but a week before the big event she received a call from a youth group in her Diocese. She said they asked her if she wanted to come because they had an opening.

"I don't know why I got to go. I never thought about going before, but then I was there," McDonough said.

The youth ranged in age from about 16 to 25, and McDonough said she didn't meet anyone who wasn't nice and enjoying themselves.

No matter how joyous the event, McDonough said she wouldn't go again, which would take her to Germany.

The experience she had was so moving and emotionally charged that McDonough said she wouldn't want to ruin that by attending the event again and having it not be as special as the first.

"It was a once in a lifetime experience and I don't think I could have that again," she said.

Greek, Turkish history comes to life for Block ed both American students and those from Bilkent University in Ankara, Turkey. They didn't actually dig artifacts, that excavation was going on at another time and was titled The Hacimusalar Project.

Instead the student group followed a non-destructive mode of study, survey studies around the mound, called Armutlu, under the direction of DePauw professor Pedar Foss.

Block's group did field walking, whereby they walked straight lines in given distances and searched for pottery pieces and shards.

They would then evaluate the concentration of pottery and try and link it to how that civilization might have operated.

Block said this survey process led them to pinpointing a smelting area and a road that they identified by the huge concentrations of pottery in a line.

Everything they found, including a coin, metal objects and terra cotta, was brought back to the group's central headquarters where Block would collect and sketch each piece.

She returned June 28 with an armload of pottery sketches ready to be scanned into a computer to be used in an archeological publication.

The subject matter that recently brought her to Turkey and has taken her to Greece twice is intriguing, but Block has faced one question from family and friends, "What are you going to do with it?"

Her response, "Anything."

She plans to continue her studies after graduating in June of 2003 and said her major is inherent in studies of government, writing and literature.

She is also juggling ideas of going to law school or entering a doctorate program in classical archeology.

But she faces a question she asked herself in Turkey and will grapple with her senior year, "Do I want to make a life out of this?"

The positives of pursuing classical archeology studies like travel and adventure, she has experienced and now her mission is to decide whether to dedicate her life to academia, publishing and libraries.

She'll start exploring that decision Aug. 21, when she returns to Indiana for her final year of undergraduate studies.

Weather turns out average for this summer

By J.C. REINDL
Special to the Courier

Many places around the country may be calling this summer the hottest and driest ever; aside from a late and cold beginning, Charlevoix's weather has been comparable to recent summers.

National Weather Service data reports that temperatures in northern Michigan have been similar to what they were last summer. The area's automated weather station in Pellston recorded average highs of 74 and 81 degrees for June and July. Summer 2001 data marked 76 and 78-degree averages, respectively.

One distinction of this summer was how long it took to arrive.

Charlevoix Municipal Marina Harbor Master Hal Evans said, "We started off absolutely frigid; It was the absolute coldest spring."

The temperature in May dipped below freezing three times and twice Evans and his dock staff had to battle snowstorms to arrive at work.

Alan Kinney, Petty Officer at the United States Coast Guard Charlevoix Station, attributes the unusually cold temperatures near the beginning of the summer to Charlevoix going through a later winter than normal.

"We didn't get an actual first snowfall until mid-December," Kinney said. "Because of that the weather sort of shifted a month."

Despite a colder May and early June, warmer temperatures throughout the rest of June, July, and August put this summer's weather on par with that of last year's. And the water levels in both Lake Michigan and Lake Charlevoix have gone up from low points last summer.

Kinney says that the water level in Lake Charlevoix has gone up about 2 to 2.5 feet. While this is an appreciated improvement, he said five years ago the water level was about 3 feet higher than it is now.

Kinney attributes the lower overall water levels of the past few years to the area's milder winters.

Both high and low water levels in Lake Charlevoix have their advantages. A high water level allows more flexibility in ship transiting and recreational boating. Lower water levels, like last year's, can extend the shoreline.

This was seen at the Belvedere Club beach last summer when low water levels extended the beach into the Round Lake channel. As levels rose this year, the newly uncovered beach became submerged again.

While this summer's heat has not adversely affected fishing in Lake Michigan too much, it has slowed the pace of fishing in Lake Charlevoix, according to Starre Jurney of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources.

Most fish prefer waters with a temperature around 50 degrees Fahrenheit. If the water becomes much warmer than this, fish will withdraw to deeper waters seeking cooler temperatures – as has occurred at times this summer in Lake Charlevoix, she said.

Jurney added, as the summer eventually cools off, "Cold fronts 'turn over' the lake, bringing fish into shallower waters." This situation, along with fish's instincts to return to where they were spawned, will ultimately improve Lake Charlevoix's fishing by the end of this summer and the beginning of fall.

Aside from the early cold temperatures, this summer's weather has been favorable for recreational boating and tourism.

Charlevoix harbor staff member Lisa Miller said, "We didn't have that many boaters in June, because the weather was too cold, but now we're pretty busy."

The common sight in Round Lake harbor in late May and early June was many boats in slips, but no one in town to sail them. As the temperature has warmed up, the boats' owners have made the trip up to rejoin their boats and enjoy another Charlevoix summer with beautiful weather.

Eveline recall wording approved

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Eveline Township residents will soon have recall circulators knocking on their doors, asking for support in their plight to oust township supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski and clerk Don Hayden.

Proposed recall ballot wording was certified by the Charlevoix County Election Commission Aug. 12 with the exception of a minor detail, which requires the circulators to change wording on Hayden's petition from Eveline County to Eveline Township.

The change will not require another election commission meeting.

County clerk Jane Brannon and county probate Judge Frederick Mulhauser both voted in favor of certification and the third election commissioner, county treasurer Joan Balch, was not present.

Both Skrzeczkoski and Hayden exercised their right to dispute the language, but both ran into road blocks in their plight to defend themselves.

Skrzeczkoski researched previous court decisions pertaining to recall wording and found one of the recall petition's statements was ruled an inadequate reason for recall in Moliter vs. Miller.

The statement he disputed reads "Mr. Skrzeczkoski does not faithfully represent the citizens of Eveline Township."

But Mulhauser told Skrzeczkoski, "You might be right, but someone who took that position would have to file a lawsuit in circuit court. We only decide whether the language can be understood."

Brannon further explained, "Whether or not the wording is true, is not for us to decide. Whether it's an accurate description is not for us to decide. It's whether or not someone reading it could decide yes or no. As far as I'm concerned, it is clear what the circulator meant."

Mulhauser agreed and the wording was officially certified.

Hayden then asked the commission if he had a chance to express his statements contesting the wording. He had a two page written rebuttal in hand.

The commission said yes he could, but the commission could not strike the inaccuracies he was alluding to, they too would have to be appealed to the circuit court.

"The recall is against me as township clerk, but everything they state there was against secretary of the planning commission. I think it should be thrown out on that reason alone," Hayden said in spite of the commission's inability to address his concerns.

Hayden said he plans to resign from two township board appointed positions, secretary of the planning commission and secretary of the zoning board of appeals, at the township board meeting Aug. 13.

Mulhauser said Skrzeczkoski and Hayden's only recourse is the possible special election that could follow the petition drive.

"Emotions run high on this issue, people feel strongly one way or another. Your expressions are best shared with voters placed on the ballot," Mulhauser said.

If the petitioners are able to collect enough signatures, both Skrzeczkoski and Hayden will have an opportunity to make a statement in 200 words or less, in their defense, on the ballot.

After the decision was made both Hayden and Skrzeczkoski said they have no intention of filing a circuit court case opposing the petition wording.

Hayden said the commission's inability to address his concerns made his presence at the meeting, "A waste of time."

"I won't file a circuit court case. They can have the job before I'll do that," he said.

Skrzeczkoski added, "The job ain't worth it. It doesn't pay enough to go to court."

In the wake of the commission's decision, petition circulators can start collecting signatures Aug. 22 and have six months to secure 137 signatures. If they are successful, a special election will be called for.

Skrzeczkoski has been township supervisor for two years and served as board trustee for 12 years prior.

Hayden has been township clerk for six years.

If Skrzeczkoski and/or Hayden lose in the possible special recall election, another township resident will be appointed to the positions until the special election.

"I won't file a circuit court case. They can have my job before I'll do that."

Dan Skrzeczkoski,
Eveline Township board supervisor facing recall

The group of residents campaigning for the recall filed for wording certification July 23 at the Charlevoix County Clerk's Office.

According to those mounting the campaign, this is part of their fight against commercial wind turbine generators being located in the township.

In a previous interview, Eveline Township resident and ardent opponent of the township's wind turbine issue, Nancy Ferguson said, "We don't think part of the board (Skrzeczkoski and Hayden) is representing us."

The recall comes after the township board approved a zoning ordinance change that opened the door for electricity generating wind turbines to be allowed by special use permit in agriculture and forest zones.

But when the first request came in for placement of a wind monitoring tower on Dawson Way's Eveline Township property, near Ferry and Brock roads, tempers boiled.

The tower would measure whether or not adequate wind velocities exist in and around the Way property to support a seven turbine wind farm.

The angry residents said they weren't informed of the project or the zoning change that paved the way for the project and a bitter fight ensued.

Now, the township is being sued by John and Nancy Cisne and 29 other residents who have joined the Cisne suit. A scheduling conference in this case took place the morning of Aug. 12, just before the election commission met.

Classic car show, cruise to be this weekend

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

The Street Legends Classic Car Club of Charlevoix will be displaying legendary cars during its Tenth Annual Street Legends Street Rod, Muscle and Custom Car Show on Aug. 18.

The yearly event starts on Aug. 17 when the classic cars are driven around Lake Charlevoix during the Lake Charlevoix Car Cruise and end their venture by parking along Bridge Street in downtown Charlevoix.

Judy Zednicek and Tom Eggers, co-chairs of the Street Legends Car Show, said the cruise will be followed by music played by Foot Loose and vocals provided a Buddy Holly impersonator.

Eggers said Buddy Holly is brought to life by Mike Perry, who has performed at the car show for about three years.

After the music fades into tomorrow, the real show begins. Participants will line their cars up at Shanahan Field, which is located on the north side of Charlevoix, and spectators are invited to come and view the rare cars.

Eggers said from about 8 a.m. to noon participants can register their vehicles. Afterward from noon to 1 p.m., voting will take place, which is followed by the Camp Quality Auction from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m. After the auction, trophies will be presented to the winners from 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Eggers said there are 33 classes of cars this year, which opens up the spectrum of cars entered.

"Basically anyone can enter the show," Eggers said.

Zednicek and Eggers said a new class was formed this year titled Fast and Furious, which features cars that are ready to fly.

During the show, there will also be a display of specialty cars.

Ron Zednicek said the specialty cars are there for the enjoyment of both spectators and participants.

"They are highly unique either in history, quality or rarity," Zednicek said.

Some of the specialty cars to be entered are one of a kind.

Zednicek said one of the specialty cars, owned by Ivan and Judy Whitthoeft of Charlevoix, was previously owned by the late John F. Kennedy, Jr., and is the only one like it in the world.

Zednicek added that the Whitthoeft's will also be displaying a new 2002 SLP Camero.

Zednicek said Time Machines, a restoration shop owned by Dave Draper, will display two rare imported cars. One is a XKE Jaguar and a Dino Ferrari.

Gennett reunites with her birth mother

By COURTNEY PACE
Staff writer

Family has a whole new meaning for Charlevoix resident Gayle Gennett, 52, of Charlevoix.

Gennett, was adopted as an infant and recently met family she never knew she had.

As an infant, Gennett was adopted by Edward and the late Bernice Nedwicki who gave her a loving home. Gennett added that she was born sickly and her adopted parents, who were a doctor and a nurse respectively, chose her and helped her to regain her health.

At 2 years old, the Nedwickis told Gennett that she was adopted. Gennett said she was too young to understand what adopted meant at the time. However, when she was old enough to understand she never desired to leave and find out where she came from.

Gennett said she is very close to the parents who raised her and she never would have searched out her birth mother if the woman who raised her was still living.

Three years ago when her father was in the hospital, Gennett said he told her to find her birth mother so he could thank her for giving birth to Gennett.

With the help of research and the Internet, Gennett was able to find her mother on Aug. 1, 1999.

Her father had found her birth certificate that had her birth last name as Blencoe. From here, Gennett went to her sister, who is a judge, and received more information.

The computer and Internet came in handy when Gennett used a phone book on CD ROM. According to Gennett, the disc lists all the addresses of people listed in phone books in the United States.

She typed in Blencoe and came up with several addresses. However, she knew her mother was raised in Seattle, so she redid the search and came up with seven names.

Gennett said she wrote a letter

After search, Gennett finds birth family telling the little history she knew of her mother and asking for a response to the seven addresses she found. As a result, two letters made their way to two brothers of Bobbe Blencoe-Freeman, her birth mother.

According to Gennett, her birth mother gave her up for adoption because she was only 22 years old when she became pregnant. Gennett said her birth mother always wanted to meet her, but didn't want to interrupt her life in order to do so.

The Blencoe-Freeman Reunion peaked on Aug. 3 when Gennett came face to face with nieces and sisters she has never met before. Now that Gennett's family is reunited, she had found out that her love of antiques comes from her birth mother.

"There's so much with genetics," Gennett said.

Gennett added that all of her siblings from her birth mother live near water, as she does being in Charlevoix. Gennett's adopted family weren't as fascinated with horses as she is, but two of her sisters from her birth family share her enjoyment.

Currently, Gennett is a school counselor at the Charlevoix Elementary School, which proved to be someone her birth mother wished she had had to talk to when she was a girl.

Gennett said she is lucky she was adopted by such loving people, but finding the woman who gave her life and the family she never knew she had was rewarding.

"My whole life is complete," she said.

Official says virus no cause for alarm in area

VIRUS

In a few cases, mostly among the elderly, death my occur, according to the information.

Meyerson said the West Nile Virus first appeared in humans in 1999 in New York. He said the virus is believed to have come across with a bird or mosquito that was on a boat or airplane from the Mediterranean or Middle East.

As of Monday, there have been no cases of the West Nile Virus being found in a human in Michigan.

Meyerson said dead crows are the best indicators of the disease, which is why they were being tested. Now that the virus has been found in Charlevoix, he said residents no longer need to send in any dead crows they find.

However, he said if residents find a large die-off of birds, they should report it to the health department's tip line, (888) 668-0869.

Meyerson said his department is getting a lot of calls in Charlevoix about dead crows, but he attributes that to people being more attuned through the media.

"If it persists later on, then it might mean something," he said.

While the chances of getting sick from this virus are small, Meyerson suggested several ways to reduce the risks. They are:

- Apply inspect repellent that contains the active ingredient DEET to exposed skin or clothing. Avoid applying repellent to children under 2 years of age and to the hands of older children because repellents may be transferred to the eyes or mouth, potentially causing irritation or adverse health effects.
- Maintain windows and door screens to keep mosquitoes out of buildings.
- Drain standing water in the yard. Empty water from mosquito breeding sites, such as flower pots, pet bowls, clogged rain gutters, swimming pool covers, discarded tires, buckets, barrels, cans and similar sites in which mosquitos can lay eggs.
- Wear light colored long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors.

Meyerson added horse owners should contact their veterinarian to discuss prevention. Some tips to keep horses safe are:

- Use approved insect repellents on the horses.
- Place the horses in stables, stalls or barns during the prime mosquito exposure hours of dawn and dusk and other times when mosquitos are present.
- Eliminate standing water, drain troughs and buckets at least two times a week.
- Consult with a veterinarian about using a recently developed vaccine for horses.

Charlevoix joins 23 other counties where crows have been found with the West Nile Virus. The other counties are: Bay, Berrien, Branch, Clinton, Genesee, Gratiot, Ingham, Kent, Lapeer, Lenawee, Macomb, Midland, Muskegon, Oakland, Oscoda, Ottawa, Saginaw, St. Clair, St. Joseph, Shiawassee, Tuscola, Washtenaw and Wayne.

For more information on the West Nile Virus, visit the Web at www.michigan.gov/mda or www.cdc.gov.

Ivan brings her 'Joy of Stitching' to customers

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Judith Ivan, of Charlevoix, can help bring the quilt pattern of your imagination to life.

Ivan, owner of the business the Joy of Stitching, provides customers with a custom quilt making service. This service can make a one-of-a-kind quilt that is designed by the customer.

"It is a collaborative effort. I look at myself as an interpreter," she said. "I can help others realize their creative design ideas or create something special for an important occasion."

All a customer has to do to get his or her own quilt made, is bring a design to Ivan and she will use a computer system to create various patterns and color schemes to accompany the design on a wall-size or queen-size quilt. Then, Ivan handmakes the quilt for her customer over a series of several hours.

Ivan said making a quilt can take about 75 hours of total work.

But, all this work is a labor of love for Ivan, who has been working with needles ever since she was a girl.

According to Ivan, "Ever since girlhood, I have been interested in anything having to do with needlework. My mother taught me to knit when I was 8 and my grandmother brought me my first sewing machine when I was 14. Take me to a fabric store and I get as excited as a kid going on her favorite carnival ride."

Using her skills in sewing, Ivan made clothing for herself in high school and costumes for the many musicals she performed in.

"Over the last 30-some years, I have sewn, knit, embroidered, crocheted and quilted. My son reawakened a long dormant interest in quilting when he came home from first grade three years ago with a tri-color-block art project that he wanted me to make into a quilt," she said. "I agreed and since that time have made three twin size quilts, four queen size, several wall hangings and a crazy lap quilt from old silk ties, which I embroidered and tied in the nineteenth century fashion."

Ivan, a resident of Charlevoix for 17 years, also decided to go into business with her skills and she opened Joy of Stitching in April 2002.

Judith Ivan stands in front of a custom quilt she is making for one of her customers. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

"I wanted to create a business in my home community," she said. "Because I love using fabric creatively, combining the unconventional with traditional block patterns or turning scraps into a tote bag, I recently decided to move on from my 25 year career as a public school educator and director of plays to this custom quilting business."

Joy of Stitching makes handmade quilts that are machine pierced, wall-hangings, table runners, tree skirts and does quilt restoration.

Ivan will also be making her own line of clothing in the near future.

To have Ivan create a specialized design for you or your loved ones, call her at 547-5662 to set up an appointment.

Braun to play 100 holes in one day for Junior Golf

Last summer when Belvedere Golf Club Professional, Steve Braun, played 100 holes of golf in one day, he raised over $4,000 for the Charlevoix County Junior Golf Program.

It was part of the PGA of America's annual fund-raiser for junior golf. And now he's about to tee it up and go again!

The event is scheduled for Aug. 20 at the Belvedere Club Course with his first shot slated to begin at 6:30 a.m. Braun, who has spent the last 11 years in Charlevoix, four at Dunmaglas, and the last seven at the Belvedere Course, has been pleased with the generous pledges from the Belvedere members and those from local residents. He hopes others interested in area youngsters will contact him at 547-2611.

"A pledge for so much a hole is all we're asking and the cause is a great one," he said.

Those seeking more information may call Dean Davenport at 547-6433 or contact Braun at the Belvedere Golf Club. Fans may view the golf marathon by stopping by the course as Braun's scores are posted as he finishes each round.

Barnard remembered as an athlete, good friend

BARNARD

all said even though he lived only 15 years, there was so much to celebrate.

Kelsey's aunt and neighbor, Shelly Paramo said every time he walked in her back door he brought with him indescribable joy, friendship and energy.

"He was fun loving and full of life, the apple of our eye. He will be missed, he is missed," Paramo said. Her grief quickly turned to proud admiration as she described just how full Kelsey's life truly was.

At 15, he was an Olympic hopeful and a four year member of the Junior Olympic Ski Team.

York Smith, a Charlevoix High School student and Kelsey's teammate on the Rayder ski team said, "He was very fast for his age; he was probably in the top 10 in the nation."

His high school coach, Sue Miller said as a freshman he placed second in the slalom event at the State Skiing Finals last year and was gearing up for another successful season.

His skills were to be further sharpened this month when he was scheduled to train with international level skiers in Switzerland and later this fall when he would take advantage of a scholarship to Stratton Mountain School in Vermont.

Roscoe Serrels, also one of Kelsey's ski teammates, said his athletic ability was off the charts.

As a freshman, he picked up pole vaulting with the track and field team, he was a soccer player and an avid water skier and boater.

Aside from the legacy Kelsey leaves behind as a fearless master of all things athletic, and a compassionate, loyal friend and family member, he also left a message that Paramo said resonates with her and will dictate how she goes about each day.

"Live every day to the minute, live every day like it's your last," she said.

So others can fulfill their dreams of becoming an Olympic skier and not waste one day, the Barnard family has established the Kelsey Barnard Assistance Fund, which will forever harness the spirit of Kelsey in its aim to promote the sport of competitive skiing.

Even though his life and death taught all those whose lives he touched many lessons, and through the assistance fund future skiers will race down slopes carving his memory in their path, there is a void created by his loss.

Paramo said his presence, sense of humor and kindness will be missed.

"I'll miss him just being here. The hardest part will be not seeing him walk in my back door," she said.

Four of Kelsey's close friends, Mike Wojan, Jake Teuscher, Mitchell Klooster and Jaimen Waha, echoed Paramo's take on what will be the hardest part of living life without Kelsey.

"I'll miss calling his cell phone and him answering, 'What's up Twinkle Toes?' And those days of going out and having fun with him by my side,'" Wojan said.

Teuscher added, "I'll miss having him by my side too, it seems he should be wherever we go."

This same sense of loss described by his friends and family will be faced by Kelsey's survivors, his parents, Susan and Michael Barnard of Charlevoix; his sisters, Karlee of Charlevoix and Jeannie Jarvie of Bloomfield Hills; his maternal grandmother, Donna K. Anderson of Charlevoix; his aunt and uncle, Shelly and Dr. Glenn Paramo of Charlevoix; his aunt and uncle Jill and James Barnard of Bellaire; and countless friends.

Barnard family writes letter to the community

Dear Friends,

Last week we lost our Kelsey. Everyone knew him as a happy, full of fun and life kid who loved sports, the water, boats and friends. He always wanted to win — to be the best. He loved life, soccer, skiing and biking. He was always smiling and teasing — always sensitive and caring.

His family always knew that he was a great kid and a great athlete. What we never realized was his greatest talent — his incredible ability to make everyone around him love him. Only this past week did we come to know how many people he touched and how many loved him.

Your expressions of support and sympathy for us and the love for him this week have been overwhelming. There is no way to thank you — there are not enough words.

Remember Kelsey forever as fifteen. He would want you to be happy and strive to be the best that you can be at whatever you do — just like he did.

Hold our Kelsey in your hearts forever — as we know he will hold you in his.

Thank you for loving him with us.

The family of Kelsey Barnard

SCRAPBOOK

Writer shares memories of the Class of 1950

Marilyn Boss

'Days gone by'

This past Saturday, Aug. 3, we had our annual class reunion. It was our fifty-second. The classmates decided several years ago to meet the first Saturday in August, each year and it has worked out very well. We decided that all who can meet together and we order what we want from the menu. This makes for less work and we have time to converse and enjoy each other's company.

When we were in high school, we used a big red brick building which had been constructed in 1901. It was used until the high school was built on Garfield Street in the early 1960s. Portables sit on the location today.

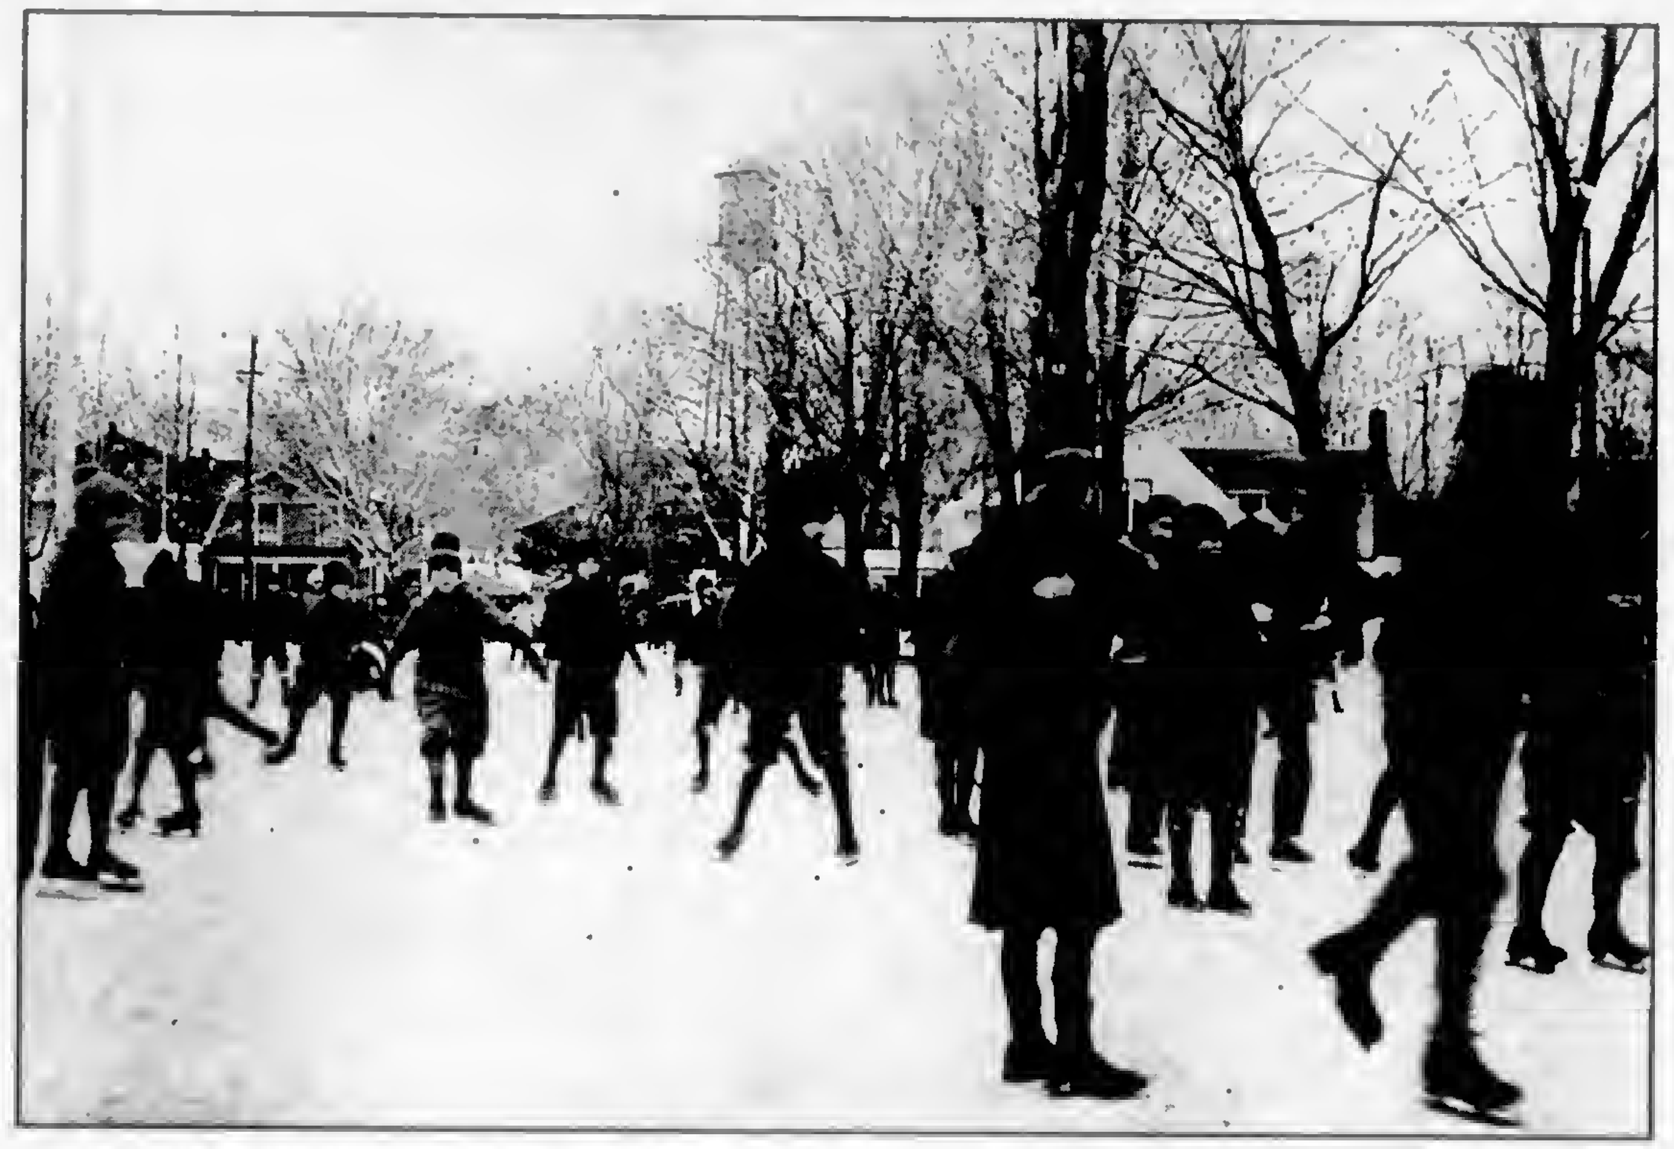
Our class of 55 members graduated in 1950. At that time, we had a staff of 14 teachers. Uno Suomela was our class sponsor and the school shop teacher. He was an easy going person and his students learned a great deal from him. Dale built our first home after graduation, and at that time we used hand tools to make everything. Uno built a little cabin on a lot he owned at North Point. When Dale and I bought a lot next to him, he was always available for any questions we had.

In later years, he asked if we wanted the little cabin, as he was going to build a new home on the lot. We moved it to the back of our property and it became our first rental unit.

R. G. Bennett was superintendent of schools at that time and also taught government. Harry E. Bingham was our principal. He was a strict man and we respected him highly. I appreciated the fact that when I hit a softball in the air outside his second story office and broke the window two separate times, he was very nice about it. Our ball diamond was on the concrete where the ice rink was located in the winter. It was a big ice rink, located beside the school, from Mason Street to Clinton. They played waltzes and other music all evening. There were three men who cared for the rink. They did an excellent job and the ice was very smooth. They made it all night long. These men, Les Everts, Carl Mitchell and Art Krulik, took pride in their work and also maintained the cemetery in the summer. Snacks were available in a big house across from the rink, on Mason Street, where candy bars were sold from a front room. This very adequate spot would work again for us as a skating rink today, as it is centrally located.

Clarence Odmark was our band director, and the first year he came to Charlevoix, I was in tenth grade. He asked me if I would learn to play the drums and he would give me lessons, which he did. I enjoyed three years of being a part of the band, both orchestral and marching. We played in mass band and went to competitions in southern Michigan. There were five drummers and we had to play some of the other instruments also. One time, we had mass band in Charlevoix, and of course, students from all the schools around gathered together to play.

On one song, the cymbals were needed and at the last minute, I was designated to use them. At the appropriate time, I lifted them in the air and hit them together, like I thought they should be done. The director stopped the entire band and in the devastating silence looked right at me and said, "Young lady, this isn't the anvil chorus." Needless to say this was one of my most embarrassing moments.



This is a scene from the 1920s at the skating rink by the high school. The school was located to the left. The picture is looking from Mason Street toward Clinton Street. (Courtesy photo)

C.M. (Max) Novak was our history and driver education teacher. He also was strict and a very good teacher. The only thing that used to bother me was the fact that he addressed the students by last name only. It took some getting used to. He used to place a glass milk bottle on the floor of the Driver's Ed car and it was supposed to stay upright through our driving. However, I remember one day, when I was in the back seat and a girl who was driving came to the stop sign on Upright Street heading east. She started up, panicked, stepped on the gas, turned the wheel to the right, made a sharp turn and ended up in the snow bank, heading west. I remember Novak being rather put out at me, because I couldn't stop laughing.

Ray Kipke taught our math classes and he also coached. Kipke Field was later named for him. Our other teachers were: Holly Johnson, home economics; Robert Richards, science; Norman Gallagher, Latin; and D.C. Maltby, typing.

Maltby also helped the students prepare the school paper, The Crimson Flash, and the yearbooks.

William Billings taught accounting. Rounding out the staff were Leonard (Pete) Burns, Miss G. Patterson, Florence Milner, who later become the town librarian, and Larry Tuomela.

Then there was Stewart E. (Irish) Coleman. I especially felt close to him because he was the father of my best friend, Sara when I was 11 through 13-years-old. Sara lived down the street from me and we rode bicycles together all over the neighborhood. We would go down to the Chamber of Commerce where Mr. Coleman was secretary-manager for 17 years. He would end up giving us a dime so we could go to the ice cream stand and get a nickel cone. He also was harbormaster for a time. He was our English Literature teacher and track coach whose teams dominated the Northern Michigan Class C league. He made English literature come alive and also made the dullest biology lesson interesting.

For many years, he introduced the school's young fry to the sport of basketball when they were in the early elementary grades. They were known as Colcman's Cats. His training was invaluable, as he turned out boys who knew how to play the game well by the time they reached high school.

We had junior and senior plays each year and they were also fun. We all took typing and so switching from standard to electric typewriters to computer keyboards was easy for us. We were fortunate to be able to go to Niagara Falls for our senior trip. We went by bus to Detroit and the end of Brush Street, where we boarded the South American, a beautiful cruise ship, that took us to the falls. We were on the Maid of the Mist boat with Hopalong Cassidy, who was most obliging in signing his autograph.

High school was a time of learning, but also a fun time and coming together with classmates is always a special time of reminiscing.

Middle School for sale

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The old Charlevoix Middle School building and property on Mason Street will soon be for sale.

The Charlevoix School Board voted unanimously Aug. 12 to give the "go ahead" to Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock, to list the property.

"We are looking at ways to keep the property viable in the community. While a lot of ideas have been set forth, we've made it known that if we can't come up with a viable solution we can't keep it on our rolls; it would be a money pit for our general fund," Sturock explained to the board.

"While we would like the building to serve a community function, we can't be left holding the bag."

So the district's only recourse is to sell the property.

The building and grounds committee — consisting of Dennis Halverson, Allen Telgenhof and Barney Way — met after the board's July 8 meeting and discussed the district's options.

Charlevoix Public Library Director Valerie Meyerson and library board member Gordon VanWieren also attended.

The group discussed the possibility of the library relocating to the site. In a previous interview Meyerson said the building is too large for its purposes, but part of the property may be an ideal relocation site.

They also discussed a swap of part of the middle school property for the library building. This concept will be pursued by appraising both pieces and having the building and grounds committee meet again and talk about the proposal and the district's priorities.

The problem with the library's interest is it is in no rush.

Telgenhof said, "They're not on a real fast track, but it sounds like they could be."

So, the district may offer the library the right of first refusal, whereby when a purchase offer comes in, the district notifies the library and it will have the chance to decide if it wants the building and property.

High school dedication planned for next Monday

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix Public Schools is ready to unveil its new crown jewel, the new Charlevoix High School.

After three years of hard work, the community will gather at the new Charlevoix High School to dedicate and celebrate its completion. The dedication ceremony and open house is scheduled to take place at 6:30 p.m., Aug. 26, at the new school, located at 05200 Marion Center Road in Charlevoix.

"I think people will be very excited when they get a chance to see that we're able to offer students and the community a first class facility that will enhance the education of our students," Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock said.

He said the new school offers incoming students science rooms equipped with advanced technology, a 600 seat auditorium for performing arts, an updated art facility, an enhanced vocational programs wing, academic areas with up-to-date technology, video production possibilities, room for 100 more students and many other features.

Sturock explained that all of this is made possible by three years of hard work by the school board and the staff of Charlevoix Public Schools and through the support of the community.

Consensus starting to form on East Park

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A common vision for the future of East Park is beginning to form.

People gathered at Charlevoix American Legion Hall off Garfield Avenue in Charlevoix for a special meeting of the Charlevoix City Council and Downtown Development Authority (DDA) Aug. 15. At the meeting, a revised East Park renovation plan was presented by Peter Pollack, principal designer with Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor, the marina and park planning firm hired by the city.

The East Park plan he presented was the fourth and consensus among those in attendance started to surface.

Charlevoix resident Traver Wood said, "Minor design detail issues are coming up, but I haven't heard any major complaints about the concepts. I find that really encouraging."

Positive and negative comments were taken at a public input meeting July 16 when three design options were presented by Pollack.

Pollack said he worked closely with the community's concern about architecture and placement of facilitys in the park including, the performance venue, the Charlevoix Chamber of Commerce and the marina/harbor master building.

Arguments made for, against bigger marina

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A Charlevoix Municipal Marina renovation goal setting session proved once again the jury is still out as to whether or not the marina should be expanded.

People gathered at Charlevoix American Legion Hall off Garfield Avenue in Charlevoix for a special meeting of the Charlevoix City Council and Downtown Development Authority (DDA) Aug. 15.

At the meeting, a revised East Park renovation plan was presented and a marina renovation goal setting session followed. The marina goals and objectives were unanimously accepted by both the DDA and council. East Park renovation planning will now take a back seat as marina refurbishing options are drafted for community comment.

Peter Pollack, principal designer with Pollack Design Associates of Ann Arbor, the marina and park planning firm hired by the city, estimated a marina alternatives presentation taking place later this summer.

Goals that were established to guide the drafting of marina alternatives include: honoring the environmental responsibilities and regulations, providing facilities and dockage appropriate for Waterways Commission funding, recognition of functional needs of adjacent dockage operations, a design using accepted yet inventive engineering standards and integrating water-based facilities with land-based facilities.

Providing facilities and dockage appropriate for Waterways funding was one topic of contention.

According to Waterways Commissioner and Round Lake resident John Winn, the commission may offer the project between 50 and 75 percent funding. But to receive that funding, there are some guidelines that will have to be met including the creation of transient dockage and an expansion.

Congratulations

Teen Reading Club Participants!

The Charlevoix Public Library had a great summer reading club for teens. The Club was a huge success: 27 teens (middle school age) completed the club requirements and were invited to our closing party. Throughout the six-week club, those teens read a whopping 157 books and wrote 22 book reports! They also attended six different programs on Tuesday afternoons. The incentive for our teens was a grand prize drawing at the closing party. The teens received entries by reading, writing and attending programs. The club's success was driven in part by our grand prize drawing for a shopping spree downtown!

Thanks to all the Charlevoix Businesses that donated treats, gift certificates, merchandise, and cash for our teens:

Ace Hardware, American Spoon Foods, Blockbuster Video, Bridge Street Book Shop, Burger King, Carey's Shoes, Cool Wave, Dairy Queen, Glen's Market, Gordon Food Service, Kilwin's of Charlevoix, McDonald's, Momentum, Murdick's Ice Cream, Oleson's Farm Fresh Markets, Pizza Hut, Rocking Horse Toy Co., Subway and Village Inn Pizza.

Club participants who completed the requirements:

Some random thoughts for summer's close

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

I've had many little thoughts bottled up in my brain lately.

Perhaps it is because it is the end of the summer season or maybe there are just too many thoughts I am storing and need to make room for others. Whatever it is, I need to unleash a few on the readers.

Bare with me.

East Park

While it is encouraging to see all these public meetings on East Park, I am still bothered by the plans that are being presented and it seems as though I am not alone.

The part I am having a hard time getting around is the building of a new Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce building and a "welcome center" as a part of the East Park plans. There are two points to this that have me shaking my head:

1) The Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce is not a government body, but a separate political organization whose goal it is to promote the Charlevoix area to businesses and tourists. I would hope that we would not use tax money to build a new building for a private political body.

I say, if the chamber wants a new building, let its members — which the Charlevoix Courier is one of — pay for the construction of a new one. If they want a welcome center in East Park, again, let its members pay for it.

Do not make the taxpayers foot the bill — or even part of the bill — for something that supports a political organization.

2) Is the city forgetting that we just spent about $1.2 million to buy and demolish a building in East Park? So, why do these designs keep including the construction of new buildings in East Park plans?

This is extremely puzzling to me and many others in Charlevoix. As Charlevoix resident Birdie Whitley put it during a recent East Park planning meeting, "You bought buildings and tore them down, now God forbid you build more."

Well said, Birdie.

If the Chamber of Commerce really wants a new building, then maybe its members — note the "members" part — should build a new one somewhere else. Maybe at the entrance to the city of Charlevoix, right where the old gas station used to be on Bridge Street and M-66. The old post office building on Mason Street could be a good location, as well.

The bottom line is, we don't need a new chamber building in East Park and we don't need to have the taxpayers pay for one. In fact, after spending so much money to tear down a building in East Park, we don't need any more new ones.

Peace and quiet

Summer in Charlevoix is always a fun time. With all of its beaches, wooded areas and quaint shops, visitors and residents always have something to do.

However, around here we want to give them more to do. It seems that every weekend this summer there has been some event taking place in downtown Charlevoix and every weekend East Park is turned into a little tent city.

I am not going to say these events are not fun and beneficial to the local economy, but after spending yet another weekend stuck in traffic and trying to fight my way through the crowds in the downtown area, I am beginning to question why we need so many.

Why do we need two art shows and a craft show in the summer? Why does the Venetian Festival have to be a week-long event? Why can't some of these events be moved away from the downtown area — many readers have suggested Castle Farms? Why can't we have some of these events during the fall or spring?

Charlevoix is a unique area that already brings in many visitors. By having so many events packed into the summer, perhaps we are just overloading our residents and mucking up the scenery that brings visitors here in the first place.

I hope officials take this into account when planning any more events in Charlevoix.

Beaches

Speaking of the scenery that brings people to Charlevoix, have you seen the local beaches lately? I know I have written about this before, but they are looking great thanks to the city's improvements.

Michigan Beach has a new stairway to the beach, a new covered picnic area and a newly renovated concession stand. Along with this, Depot Beach has a new playground area for children and is getting new bathrooms.

Each one of these projects looks like a piece of fine craftsmanship. The city and the construction crews working on these beaches should be commended on the work that was done and is being done.

Local chef to have tribute to Horton Bay's Red Fox Inn

Edith Gilbert

'Behind the news'

When the American novelist, Ernest Hemingway, lived on the Left Bank in Paris during the twenties, he reminisced in his book of short stories titled, "In Our Time" about Horton Bay.

"Horton Bay," he wrote, "the town, was only five houses on the main road between Boyne City and Charlevoix. There was a general store and post office with a high false front and maybe a wagon hitched out in front."

Shouting distance down the road was the Red Fox Inn where Hemingway used to sit in the kitchen and visit with Mrs. Lizzie Fox. Sometimes he even went fishing for brook trout with her husband, Vollie Fox, on Horton Bay Creek.

Any stranger driving by here today never notices that simple white farmhouse, because there are no bright signs commemorating its excellence. But the cognoscenti who used to arrive by jet and Lincoln Continentals on nostalgic pilgrimages from far off New York, Chicago and New Orleans to savor Mrs. Fox's country-fresh chicken dinners with dumplings and gravy, tomato pudding, freshly picked tender young corn on the cob, crisp cole slaw, hot cheese rolls, corn relish, pickles and strawberry jam and homemade burnt almond ice cream, they will never forget the experience.

At any rate, Wes Westhoven, owner/chef of the Rowe Inn, remembers his first and only experience!

It was in 1972, the year the inn closed, that Wes ate at the Red Fox Inn, but he still remembers the meal and the setting, which I describe in my new book, "Easy Entertaining." Wes plans to salute the memory of the Red Fox Inn at 1 p.m., on Sept. 8. His chef will prepare the original recipes that were given to me by the late Marion Fox Hartwell, who ran the restaurant for a number of years.

Reservations are limited to 55 guests, but many old timers have already called in their reservations.

Yacht Club praises helpers

Editor:

The Belvedere Yacht Club wants to thank the boaters who volunteered their help, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office and the Coast Guard all who helped rescue our five boats that capsized Aug. 11 on Lake Charlevoix. On Aug. 11 the Belvedere Yacht Club had its regatta in Lake Charlevoix. The weather was sunny, but winds were blowing out of the west/southwest at approximately 20-25 miles per hour. Our fleet of six Catalina 16.5s sailed out of the Belvedere Bayou and through the Round Lake Channel to Lake Charlevoix at approximately 2:45 p.m. We then sailed out to Oyster Point where the winds began to pick up and shift to the south. Within a matter of moments, four of our boats capsized and a fifth shortly thereafter.

We had only two power boats monitoring the race and they quickly became overwhelmed trying to deal with five turtled sailboats that the wind had scattered in the lake.

Fortunately, nearby boaters responded quickly to our emergency. Numerous young men jumped off their boats to help us right our boats and, in one case, to assist a young lady who had a gash in her knee that required fifteen stitches. Other boaters radioed the Coast Guard. Both the sheriff's water patrol and the Coast Guard responded immediately, stripping off their uniforms and diving into the water, where necessary, to assist in the righting of our boats. An injured young lady was sped by the Coast Guard to a city ambulance that took her to Charlevoix Area Hospital where her knee was stitched up and the sailors bobbing in the lake were recovered. All five boats were righted and towed back to our docks and safely secured at their berths. None of this would have been possible if it had not been for the spontaneous assistance that we received from the nearby boaters and the efficiency of our two government agencies responsible for water safety: the sheriff's office and the Coast Guard.

Since we do not know the names of the selfless individuals who came to our aid I ask the Charlevoix Courier to publish this letter as our acknowledgment and thanks for their acts of kindness and assistance. We are deeply indebted to them for their help and perseverance. We also want to acknowledge the American spirit that caused these spontaneous samaritan acts and the professionalism of our government agencies.

Editor:

William Schuiling's ludicrous reduction to absurdity of the proposals for alteration of the city docks and marina facilities and its apparent intention to ridicule any change does nothing to contribute to the spirit of moderation and compromise so badly needed to settle this controversy.

I believe that some modernization of facilities is both wanted and needed. Surely there is room for a minor addition to the current deplorable docking quite acceptable to the majority of residents while the state funding is still available.

Writer was right

Editor:

I would like to commend William E. Schuiling for his ideas of "Paving Round Lake and the other areas of Charlevoix he mentioned. It would solve the parking problem. And it would NOT be "Charlevoix the Beautiful" but "Charlevoix the UGLY" as he said.

My ideas are similar:

1) Don't enlarge the marina! You know how bad the traffic is when the bridge goes up now. What would it be like if we had 100 or 50 or even 30 more boats trying to get in and out of the channel? How long would the bridge have to be up for them to get through? Did anyone ever think of that?

2) Why don't you enlarge the chamber building where it stands? There is plenty of room on the south side to add an addition. It could have the bottom half for the Harbormaster and have new bathrooms and showers for the boaters. Above could be new public bathrooms. Remodel the existing bathrooms for more office space. It makes more sense than tearing it down and building a new one.

3) Leave the band shell where it is and enlarge it by bringing the back out and building on to the west side. That would also be much less expensive than "tearing it down and building a new one."

4) I do believe the sidewalk at the edge of Round Lake needs to be redone and a railing put up at the water edge.

5) And last but not least, use the Castle for the "Craft Show, Art Show and Art Fair." That would solve the parking problem downtown (suggested by Edith Gilbert). Trolleys could run from downtown out to the Castle for people who are visiting and boaters and whoever else would like a ride in the country. A small fee could be charged. Now that I have had my say, I would appreciate it if you would consider my ideas.

Come to meetings

Editor:

Two things continue to disappoint me as we go through the process of deciding what to do with our park and marina. They are the attitude that everything has to be all or nothing, and that "once I'm in, close the door to the rest of the world."

Whether a local resident or someone passing through town, everyone should feel welcome to enjoy what some of us are lucky enough to be part of full-time. People interested in the park and marina renovation should get involved, come to the meetings, and then make an informed opinion and share that with others so we end up with the best possible results. Those who have written letters about "doing nothing to the park or the marina" or those whohave written letters saying we should just "pave over all of Round Lake" need to come to the meetings and learn the real facts from the engineers and architects who have told us our seawall is in disrepair and our docks are no longer safe or appropriate for today's boats and water depths. When you attend the meetings you will see we must do something, and there are much better thought out plans discussed than paving over the lake.

The Michigan Waterway Commission is willing to pay for a large portion of these renovations if that is what the community so chooses to do. If not, there literally is a list of communities asking for these funds and this window of opportunity may not present itself again in the future.

In three to five years, when we have no choice but to renovate our facilities, we could then be financially on our own. Yes, in order to get Waterway money we need to show some increase in numbers of slips. No, it does not have to be 111 and go 380 feet out into the lake. I don't think any of us want that. We currently have 17 docks for 34 boats and are the second highest in demand behind Mackinac Island. The architects in charge of this project feel they can come up with something between the two that stays much closer to the present shoreline. For those that have not attended any of the meetings, you might be interested in knowing that none of the Waterway money comes from the State General Fund; 100 percent of the money comes from registration fees from boaters and a fuel tax on boaters.

Personally, I have nothing to gain by wanting our park and marina to be improved and enjoyed by everyone. I live on Round Lake and do not want to see anything happen to our harbor that takes away from the reason that I came here.

What to do with the band shell, Charlevoix Area Chamber of Commerce, Harbor Master and associated facilities as well as the marina are all big decisions. If you would like to be part of the process, please come to the meeting on Thursday, Aug. 29.

Celebrate the Red Fox Inn at local chef's tribute dinner

The price for the complete meal is $25.

You can bet there will be a lot of reminiscing by those select few, who fondly remember. They will recall arriving by boat and being met at the dock on Lake Charlevoix and then being chauffeured up the hill to the front porch with the slanting floor. Here glasses and ice were set up for guests, who had to bring their own liquor! When dinner was announced, guests sat at tables with white table linen and fresh flowers. There was a separate dining room for the chauffeurs. Food was passed in bowls and platters again and again, until everyone had more than their fill. If children were present, they received a little Red Fox pin carved out of wood.

There's no way a restaurant business could be run today the way Mrs. Fox successfully ran the inn for so many years. The Health Department, for example, would not condone Mrs. Fox's method of testing the dishwater with her hand to be sure the water was hot enough!

Since she was a devout Evangelical United Brethren, she would not be willing to apply for a liquor license. She gladly took reservations, because no one ever dared not to show up! There were no credit cards then and cash or checks were freely accepted.

It's heart warming, for those of us who remember, to share this tribute on Sept. 8 to the Red Fox Inn.

Historical garden awarded grants

Both the Frey Foundation and the Oleson Foundation have recently awarded grants to the Depot Heritage Garden Club.

The Frey Foundation, based in Grand Rapids, is one of Michigan's largest family foundations. Grants are provided primarily to nonprofit organizations in western lower Michigan for projects to enhance children's development, protect natural resources, promote the arts and expand philanthropic and civic action. The Oleson Foundation from Traverse City funds diverse community projects in Charlevoix, Emmet and Grand Traverse counties.

These grants, $3,000 from the Frey Foundation and $1,500 from the Oleson Foundation, will help develop a historically accurate plan for a garden to the west of the Charlevoix Depot.

A landscape architect, in consultation with Patti Aikin and Rhea Dow, project organizers, is drawing blueprints for the placing of vintage shrubs and perennials for fall planting.

The grand opening of the garden is expected to be in the spring of 2003.

Eveline Township offers settlement to residents

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Eveline Township Board agreed to offer a proposal to a group of 30 residents who filed a lawsuit against it and the township planning commission claiming misrepresentation and unlawful actions.

"It would be a year before this would end up in court. With the settlement, we're trying to get somewhere. If they turn us down, we'll know where they are at and that it doesn't make any difference what we do, they're determined to sue us," Eveline Township Supervisor Dan Skrzeczkoski said.

The board made its decision at its meeting Aug. 13 after a 15 minute closed session discussion with its attorney Mark Bickel of the Traverse City law firm Smith and Rogie. The settlement details were not disclosed.

Bickel said, "Efforts are being made to resolve Cisne versus Eveline Township pending a resolution of Johnecheck versus Bay Township."

The Johnecheck case is pertinent in Eveline Township because it revolves around the same issue, the township's ability to zone out wind turbine generators.

The Bay Township case is currently pending in the United States District Court for Michigan's Western district.

In Eveline Township 30 plaintiffs want the administrators to prohibit wind turbine generators. And in Bay Township, the Johnechecks want to place wind turbines on their property and the township board denied their request for a special use permit to do so.

The Johnecheck case is expected to be heard in federal district court in the spring of 2003.

The Eveline Township plaintiffs claim their constitutional rights have been violated and the two township administrative bodies have acted on an invalid zoning ordinance.

While the settlement details are not being disclosed at this time, one of the Eveline Township plaintiffs, Linda Heierman, said the only way this lawsuit is going to go away is if the board rescinds the zoning ordinance currently in effect.

Petoskey attorney Jack Turner, who represents the plaintiffs, was not available for comment as to whether or not the group accepts the township's proposal.

The ordinance amendment being refuted in Eveline Township was adopted on Oct. 9, 2001 by the township board. It allows wind turbine electricity generators to be constructed in farm and forest zoning districts of the township, with a special use permit.

But township residents have since come forward with claims that notification of public hearings, which took place prior to the adoption of the ordinance, were "ambiguous and misleading." They further claim the board and commission didn't follow proper protocol in amending the ordinance.

The amendment procedure outlined in the zoning ordinance requires the public hearing notice be published twice prior to the hearing in a newspaper of general circulation in the township.

In making the wind turbine amendment, township clerk, Don Hayden, published the notice on July 31, 2001 and Aug. 21, 2001 in the Petoskey News-Review but did not include required information about the place and time the text and any map corresponding to the amendment could be viewed.

Hayden admitted the notice was missing that information.

The brief, drafted by Turner argues that because the public hearing notice did not indicate the hearing would be conducted by the planning commission and that zoning district information was not included it was "misleading and ambiguous and did not provide proper notice to plaintiffs that a public hearing would be held for the purpose of amending the zoning ordinance."

In February 2002, residents urged the township board to rule the ordinance is invalid due to improper notification.

However, Skrzeczkoski said that township attorney Bryan Graham of Bellaire told the board it could re-notice the ordinance and have another public hearing, but it wouldn't change anything because the township ordinance is valid.

The brief also explores the claim that allowing wind turbine generators in agricultural zones is in direct conflict with the township's master plan. It states the wind turbines are commercial and industrial uses and are allowed by the ordinance in many areas outside those identified in the master plan as desired commercial and industrial areas.

"The installation of wind turbine generators in the vicinity of the plaintiffs' property is a commercial/industrial use of property that is located in an agricultural zoning district where commercial/industrial uses are not otherwise permitted," it states.

In spite of the lawsuit, pending master plan and zoning ordinance changes and the approved special use permit for a wind monitoring tower to be located on the property of Dawson Way, it looks as though the Way property won't be the site of wind turbine generators after all.

The day after the settlement proposal was made, the planning commission met and Way presented a brief introduction to his plans to have his 150 acre parcel rezoned to R-4 if granted.

He plans to set the property up with lot fees and have manufactured homes built if the zoning change is approved.

Local townships relieved for veto override

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The State Senate and House decision to override Gov. John Engler's July veto of $845 million in state revenue sharing funds to local municipalities has Charlevoix County and its townships breathing a sigh of relief.

"It would have been a disaster statewide. The decision means a lot. We get more money from state revenue sharing than we do from our share of property taxes. It's a lot of money and it was a stupid thing for Engler to try and do," Norwood Township Clerk Doris Pearl said.

On Aug. 13, the House voted 105-1 and the Senate voted 36-1 in favor of the override. Both votes far exceeded the two-thirds majority required to reverse Engler's veto.

The Governor claims the veto was a reaction to budget constraints that could be faced if three potential proposals which may be on the November ballot pass. One would require more drug crime sentencing to emphasize offender treatment, another deals with bargaining for state employees and the third may require the majority of the state's tobacco settlement money to be spent on health care.

He estimated if these proposals pass a cost of $1 billion a year.

In spite of the costs at the state level, his budget veto of state revenue sharing dollars would have left small townships like Norwood, where more than 50 percent of its annual revenue comes from this, facing serious problems.

Pearl said the township's annual bills most likely couldn't be covered without this funding. Last year Norwood Township brought in $50,850 in property taxes and other fees and the state revenue sharing added $59,093 to its budget.

In Charlevoix Township, where the bulk of the revenue comes from property taxes, the lack of state revenue sharing would not have been as devastating, but still accounts for $80,000 of its income.

Charlevoix Township Treasurer Theda Williams said while her township is larger and less dependent on state revenue sharing dollars, it still would have been a big hit.

"It's a substantial amount and I believe in the program; I don't want to see that funding cut," Williams said.

She was pleased to see the Michigan Townships Association actively combat this issue.

"It shows that the municipalities have to stick together and when we do we can accomplish good things," she said.

According to Charlevoix County Treasurer Joan Balch, at the county level the cut would have meant a $537,000 loss. While this is only approximately 6 percent of the county's $9 million budget, Balch said it would have resulted in budget cuts.

Balch actively phoned county legislators to get them to commit to an override of the veto and worked with the Michigan County Association to achieve the same end.

So at the state level other programs may have to be cut and many officials are saying now it's time to work to defeat these proposals to make sure the money crunch doesn't threaten state revenue sharing once again.

But Pearl said she anticipates angry voters casting their vote in favor of the ballot proposals because of the crunch Engler attempted to hand down.

Engler is the first governor since Republican Gov. William Milliken to have his veto overridden.

Hawkeye Studio's dreams are in the movies

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Four Charlevoix men are trying to turn their movie dreams into reality with their independent film company Hawkeye Studios.

C.J. Winnell, Ben Macks, George Scholey and Nathan Dean all help run the studio, which has been busy lately creating several "shorts" for various independent film contests and public viewing. Hawkeye Studios previously filmed a feature length movie, called "Die Soft" — a spoof of the popular action movie "Die Hard" — and is working on filming another feature movie.

"It hasn't been about money and probably never will be. It is about making good movies," Dean said about the groups endeavor. "It would be great to see a sign, as you come into town, that said, 'Charlevoix, home of Hawkeye Studios,' instead of 'Charlevoix the Beautiful.'"

From their studio headquarters in a small office above Advanced Geomatics, in downtown Charlevoix, the group spends its time dreaming up new movies, new scenes to shoot and ways to get funding for them.

In the past, the group has paid for a lot of its filming out of their own pockets. In fact, Winnell said it cost him about $10,000 of his own money to make the film "Die Soft."

The film was shown at Charlevoix Cinema III during the 2001 Venetian Festival and is being sold on VHS.

This year, Hawkeye Studios showed a series of short films at the Charlevoix Cinema III, each about 3 to 4 minutes long, about various characters that have to "steal something or drive somewhere to do something."

"It is kind of old film noir...gangsterish," Dean said.

Currently, Hawkeye Studios is looking at new ways to get funding, either their grants from local art groups, by winning independent film contests and is even considering directing and filming commercials.

"We see so many commercials out there that are lame," Winnell said.

Just last fall the studio entered the IC Scary Movie Contest with the short movie, "The Graveyard Shift."

The movie is about a man that comes to work and "sees something strange with the building he works at." What he doesn't know is a killer is lurking in the shadows of the building, waiting to pounce.

This was the second film Hawkeye Studios submitted to the contest, but neither movie took top honors. "Graveyard Shift" took honorable mention.

But, money issues have not slowed down Hawkeye Studios. According to Dean, the studio has started a new movie and is looking for grants and donations to help fund it. The movie is a feature length film about a robbery of an art gallery.

"It's got that 1950s feel about everyone trying to be cool. But we spoof it," Dean said.

Macks added, "We can only be cool for so long."

The studio hopes to start shooting the movie this fall.

With this film, and more future feature length films in the future, Hawkeye Studios is hoping to catch the attention of the movie industry — a source of more film-making money for the group.

This will all eventually lead to Hawkeye Studios becoming a successful and legitimate movie company in the future, Dean said.

In the meantime, the men of Hawkeye Studios will continue their drive to get Charlevoix into the independent film business.

For more information on Hawkeye Studios, contact Dean at 409-2240 or Winnell at 409-2030. Or e-mail the studio at producer@Hawkeye-studios.com.

HEALTH

Keep your children healthy this school year

Patricia Fralick, R.N.

'Your health'

As families get their children ready for another school year they look at what items need to be replaced such as shoes and backpacks. It's also an important time to review a child's health record to see what immunizations may be needed.

Immunizations have been recognized as one of the 10 greatest health achievements of the twentieth century. Vaccines that prevent whooping cough, measles, mumps and polio prevent pain and suffering for children and their families. Children also miss fewer days of school as they are healthier. Children's immunizations need to be up-dated periodically from kindergarten through college.

Children entering kindergarten usually need a booster dose of Measles, Mumps and Rubella (MMR), Polio and Diphtheria, Tetanus and Pertussis (DTaP). They also need varicella (chickenpox) vaccine if they haven't had the disease.

Sixth graders may need a Tetanus Diptheria (Td) booster. It's also important to complete their series (three doses) of Hepatitis B vaccine if they didn't receive it as an infant. Sixth graders may also need the varicella vaccine if they haven't had chickenpox.

College freshmen, particularly those living in dormitories, have a slightly increased risk of getting meningitis, which is an infection of the brain and spinal cord coverings. The meningitis vaccine can prevent two of the three important types of meningitis disease. Immunization recommendations for college freshmen include meningitis, Tetanus Diphtheria and Hepatitis B if needed. Call your child's physician or the health department if you have questions about immunizations or would like to make an immunization appointment for your child.

A child's general health status and their ability to accurately see and hear have a tremendous impact on their ability to learn. Low cost and free health care coverage programs are available for many children, including those in working families. In Michigan these programs are known as Healthy Kids and MIChild.

Healthy Kids is a free health insurance program for pregnant women, babies and children under 19 years of age. Coverage includes doctor and dental visits, hospital care, lab and x-ray tests, prescriptions and most medically necessary health care needs. A family of four with an income below $2,263 per month qualifies for Healthy Kids. If the family includes a pregnant woman or a child under one year of age, the income guidelines will be higher.

MIChild is a low cost health insurance program for children up to 19 years of age who have no health insurance. A fee of $5 per month provides health insurance coverage for all children in the family. In our area, the insurance provider is Blue Cross. MIChild covers doctor and dental visits, hospital care, prescriptions, mental health and other health services. A family of four with an income below $3,530 per month qualifies for MIChild. Call the health department if you would like more information on health insurance programs.

Take the opportunity to utilize these community resources and send your children off to school healthy and ready to learn!

Teachers to participate in 'multi-age' classroom

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

This year, Charlevoix Elementary School is participating in an alternative style of teaching commonly referred to as "Multi-age Classrooms."

"This is just another choice and I think it's an awesome opportunity for parents and kids," elementary school principal Dick Swenor said.

Steering the program are Lynn Vollmer, who has taught at the elementary level for nine years, and 10 year elementary school teacher Shelly Novotny, who taught a multi-age classroom at Central Elementary School in Petoskey for four years.

They explained the program brings first and second grade students, ages 6 to 8 years old, into one classroom for two years.

"We feel kids are going to have more learning time by being with us for two years," Novotny said.

Vollmer agreed and added, "All the kids get the chance to be a leader, a role model and they all benefit from staying with the same teacher for two years."

Under this model elements of a second grade curriculum may be taught in the first cycle while elements of first grade curriculum could surface in the second year. Novotny stressed that this two year cycle is why it's vital for parents to make a two-year commitment to the program.

"We took the first and second grade curriculum apart and put it back together under the big umbrella of themes," Vollmer said.

The first multi-age group at Charlevoix Public Schools will start out with the family theme and will progress over the two year period through 20 different themes that will guide lessons and field trips. The themes follow the Charlevoix Core Curriculum for first and second grades and the teachers will also employ the Four Blocks Balanced Literacy Program.

Novotny said the benefit of the theme based curriculum is it organizes the classroom in a format that more resembles "real life" situations the students face.

In a packet of information the teachers sent to parents about the program it is stated, "In the future, we see our students in a mixed age occupation that involves cooperation and team problem solving among employees. By allowing children to develop these skills in early life, it is the hope that they will become successful in all areas of life."

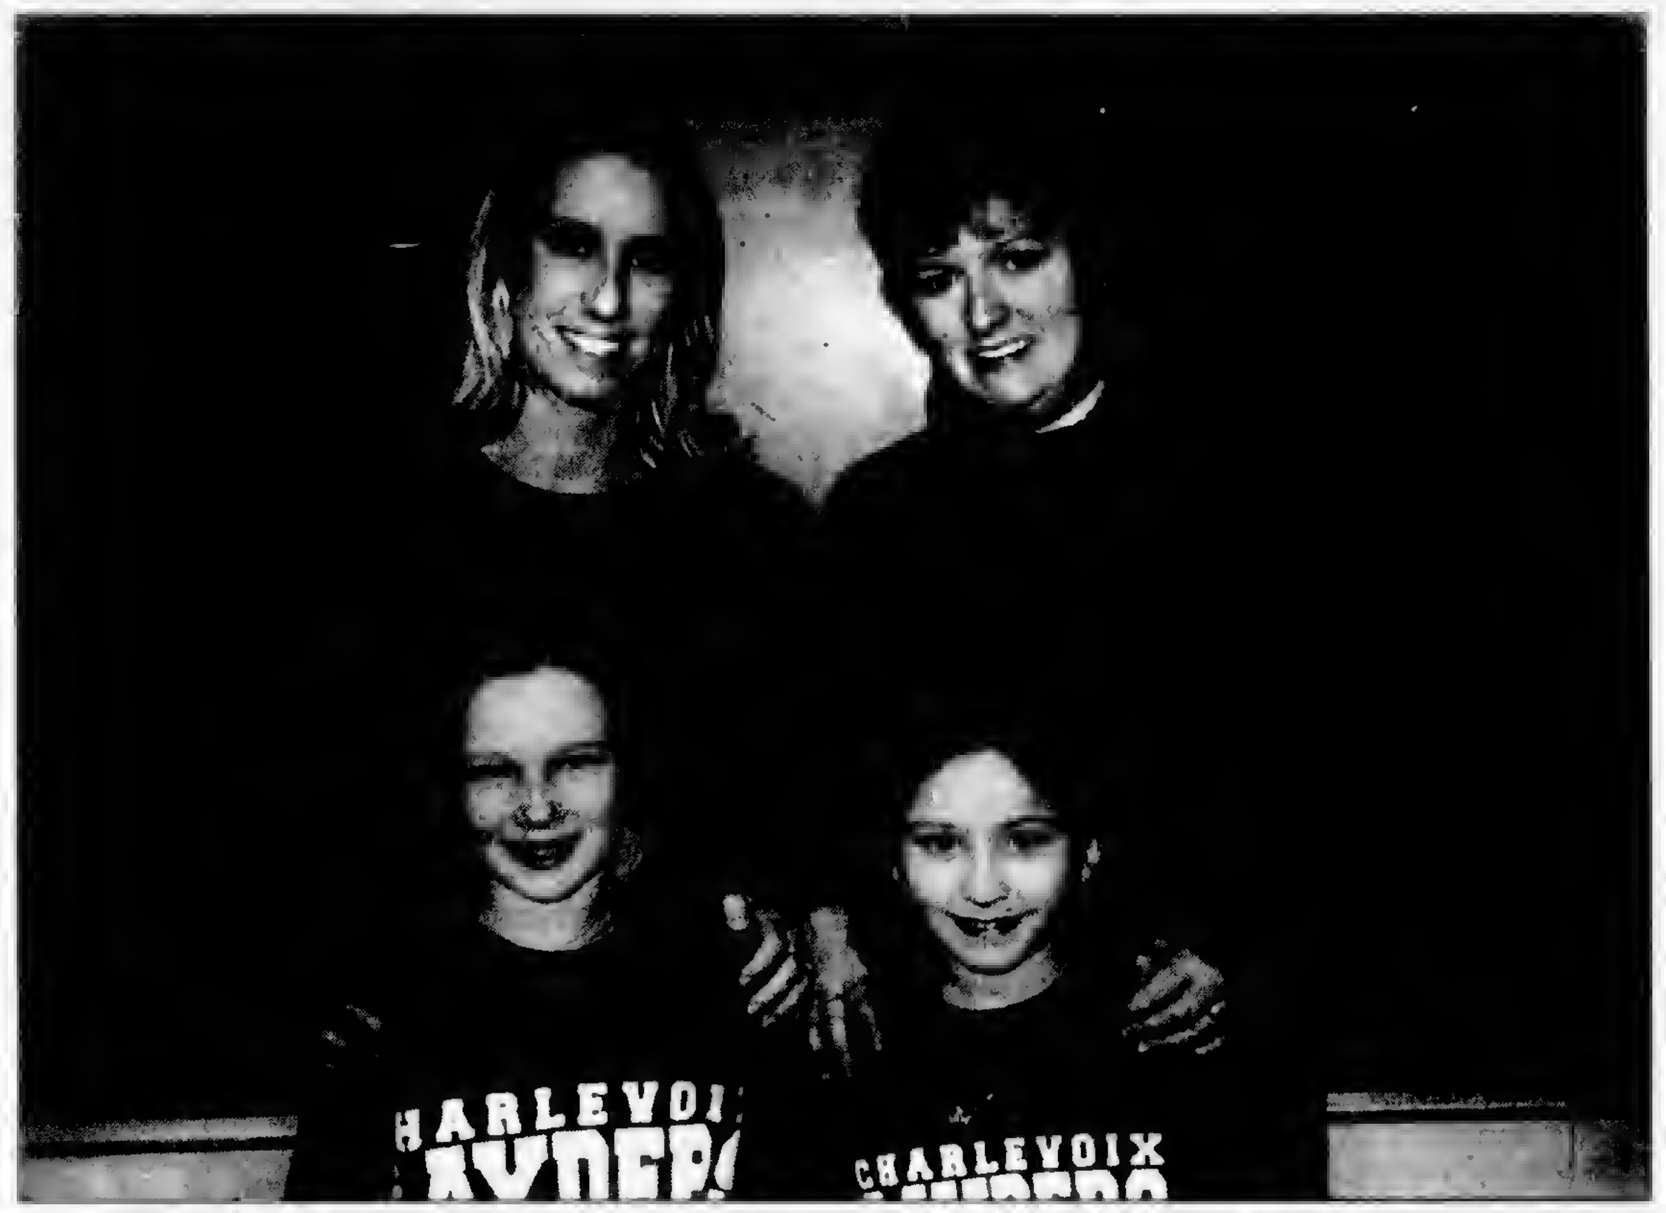
Both Vollmer and Novotny noted several benefits of this program for first year students. These include: Intellectual stimulation of young children by older children, longer relationships between teachers and parents, stability, flexibility, development of a learning community and peer learning opportunities

Second year students also benefit by developing leadership and responsibility skills by engaging in mixed age co-operative opportunities and through more learning time.

Each of the 41 students currently enrolled chose to be in the program. And both Vollmer and Novotny said the curriculum is developed for all students, there are no special characteristics that make this program work better for any individual.

Each of the 20 second grade students are Novotny's first graders from last year and there are 21 incoming first graders.

This is not something the district entered into lightly. Swenor said the school formed a committee several years ago to explore its multi-age options, reviewed research of the program's benefits and sat in on several multi-age classrooms in both northern and southern Michigan.



Lynn Vollmer and Shelly Novotny and two of their students, Kelly Greyerbeihl, who will be in third grade this year, and Sydney Carlson, who will be in second grade. (Courtesy photo)

The start of such a program took root in "looping," whereby teachers will move with students. Vollmer looped from first to second grade with students.

While the principle may seem different to parents, looping and the multi-age classroom are no new approach. In fact, the concepts date back to the days of the one room schoolhouse.

According to a study conducted by the Harvard Education Letter, this schoolhouse approach was abandoned in the mid-nineteenth century and revived again in the 1960s and 1970s in response to a focus on developmental education.

Novotny is a graduate of Central Michigan University with a bachelor of science in early childhood education and reading and has a masters in curriculum from Michigan State University.

Vollmer is a graduate of Northern Michigan University with a bachelor of arts in elementary education and a masters in early childhood.

Alcohol may have been factor in accident

A 29-year-old Charlevoix man was injured in an automobile accident around 5 a.m., Aug. 17 on US-31 South near Ferry Road in Norwood Township.

An investigation by the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office found that the man's 2000 Toyota Camry was traveling north on US-31 when he lost control. The vehicle crossed the center line and left the roadway striking a highway guardrail on the southbound side of US-31.

The vehicle damaged approximately 50 feet of the guardrail. A portion of the guardrail was driven through the drivers side of the vehicle from the front of the vehicle to inside the driver's side compartment.

The vehicle then caught fire.

The man sustained injuries to his lower feet and leg area and was transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix City Ambulance. The vehicle was a total loss due to the fire. The name of the driver is being withheld pending further investigation.

Speed and alcohol are considered factors in the accident.

Sheriff's deputies were assisted at the scene by Charlevoix EMS, Charlevoix City Fire Department and Antrim County Banks Township Fire Department.

An Open Letter to the Citizens of Charlevoix County from State Representative Ken Bradstreet

With the primary races over and the ballot confirmed for the November election, I want to take this opportunity to introduce myself. I will be on the ballot this November as the Republican candidate for State Representative.

Redistricting has placed Charlevoix County within the 105th House District beginning with the next term. I am excited about the opportunity to represent beautiful Charlevoix County, and I would consider it a great honor.

I have represented the seven counties of the 105th District for four years. I live in rural Otsego County near Gaylord. I am the Chairman of the House Energy & Technology Committee. I also serve on the Education, Conservation, and Health Policy committees.

I am conservative. I am pro-life. I am a strong advocate for the protections that our Founding Fathers enumerated in the Bill of Rights, and as such, I am a strong defender of gun owners rights (2nd Amendment) and of private property rights (5th Amendment). Believing strongly in personal freedom, I am not fond of "controllers" at any level of government that would superimpose their dream for your life and property over the dreams you have for your own life and property.

I am an enthusiastic supporter of term limits. I believe term limits have worked just fine, infusing the system with many competent and honest citizen legislators.

I have lived all my life in Northern Michigan other than a few years following my college years. I grew up in Crawford County just north of Grayling. A job transfer in my father's career led us to Pellston during my high school years. I attended and graduated from Pellston High School. I am a graduate of the Grand Rapids School of the Bible & Music (now a part of Cornerstone University), and attended an additional year of post-graduate seminary.

I served for two years as a youth minister in Ypsilanti, Michigan in the mid 1970s. Subsequent to that, I was a Gaylord businessman for 21 years. My wife of 32 years, Barbara, and I have six wonderful children and five grandchildren.

I am an outdoorsman, an avid hunter, I love fishing and camping in undeveloped, out-of-the-way places. Having enjoyed the north woods so much all my life, I am committed to preserving and protecting Michigan's beautiful lakes, streams and public recreational lands for my children and theirs. What a rich heritage we have to pass on to them!

I generally say what I believe, so I will not be evasive on issues. I do listen, and if I become convinced that a position I have taken is wrong, I don't have a problem admitting it.

I welcome your ideas. A representative may be your voice and your vote, but this is your government. I am looking forward to working with you and for you.

Paid for by the Committee to Re-Elect Ken Bradstreet, P.O. Box 1593, Gaylord, MI 49734 (989) 732-2883

Old Middle School to be placed on the market

FOR SALE

Sturock added the only other interest in the property has come from the city of Charlevoix, who would use it for parking but, "no one from the city has come forward and talked to us about it."

Telgenhof said another factor the district may face down the road is whether the property is worth more with the building down. But demolishing the school, which was dedicated in 1928, is not something the district is interested in and it will try to sell the site with the building.

"There will be people in the community who don't want to see the building torn down. We need to demonstrate that we tried everything we could to sell it. If it doesn't sell there is nothing else we can do to keep that building," he said.

Sturock said the bottom line for the district is that it doesn't get caught expending a lot of money on a vacant building.

Whether the middle school will become property of the library, the city or a vacant parcel is unknown, but what is known is that it will be for sale soon.

A realtor, terms of sale and the asking price have not been set.

Board votes to raise season ticket prices

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

In spite of opposition voiced at the Aug. 12 Charlevoix School Board meeting, the board voted unanimously to accept a $30 increase in family pass prices for athletic events for this year and an additional $20 next year and to increase single adult passes $25.

A family pass is now $100 and a single adult season pass is $65 for the 2002-2003 school year.

While this 43 percent increase in family pass rates and 50 percent increase in single adult rates may seem steep, it came after a lengthy compromise discussion from the board.

Charlevoix High School Athletic Director Jim Kanine set the proposed family pass price at $120. A motion by Scott Boss, that was supported by Barney Way, was on the table to accept this proposal when trustee Dennis Halverson said he disagreed with the hike.

Other board members agreed with Halverson and said they felt the school should have been stepping up the price all along.

"Our mistake probably was not raising these before," board secretary Larry Levengood said.

Halverson agreed and offered to amend the motion to an increase of $30 this year and an additional $20 increase next year.

"We wouldn't tend to raise lunch prices or other fees 40 percent. Maybe we should take two years to get there rather than all at once," he explained.

While the increase for this year was labeled a compromise by the board, Diane Kilkenny and Beth Teuscher, two Charlevoix residents and mothers of students in Charlevoix Public Schools who were at the meeting, don't agree with the decision.

"It's OK, but I'm not happy. I don't understand why they feel we have to be competitive with other schools. I don't feel the necessity for competition; it's our own families," Kilkenny said.

The competition concept was drawn from Kanine's aim to move Charlevoix from being the school that charges the least for athletic passes to somewhere in the middle.

Kanine proposed the increase in July after reviewing athletic event prices at other schools in Charlevoix's conference and looking at the athletic budget.

He said because the general fund allocates a large sum of money to high school athletic programs this is one way to ease the burden.

School Board President Allen Telgenhof said he agrees with Kanine's rationale.

"Sports do not make a profit, the increase will lessen the burden on academic programs. I support phasing that in so there isn't a sticker shock situation," he said.

Both Kilkenny and Teuscher said they have children in the athletic program and getting them to and from practices and games, going to away games, buying equipment and fulfilling mandatory concession duty at games is pricey. Both were disappointed to hear now, their passes to see their student athletes play would also add to those expenses.

They urged the board to consider other options than raising the family pass price, including "at the door or gate" fees.

But Kanine said changing the City fire department needs more personnel

The City of Charlevoix's Fire Department and Emergency Medical Service is recruiting firefighters and emergency personnel.

Fire Chief Doug Carver said openings are immediately available for mature, conscientious people who like the reward of working as part of a well trained team and helping their fellow citizens in emergency situations.

Openings include positions of ambulance attendant and recruit firefighter. EMS personnel work "on-call" shifts and firefighters are "on-call" 24 hours a day, when available.

Carver described the positions as exciting, interesting work under emergency conditions, 24 hours a day.

Training for firefighters includes State of Michigan Firefighter I Certification at no cost and ambulance attendants are trained within the department.

All personnel equipment and pagers are provided by the department. All members of the team are paid per call at an hourly rate which varies with an individual's level of training.

To be eligible you must be a resident of the Charlevoix School District and be physically able to do the job.

Carver said those interested can stop by the fire station at 210 State Street in the city of Charlevoix or by calling (231) 547-3279 for an application.

gate/door price was not an option. He explained that Charlevoix's $4 door and gate fee is part of an unwritten agreement the district has with other conference schools and is the general ticket price across the board.

The board's decision to charge $100 for a family pass and $65 for a single adult pass puts Charlevoix in the middle of the pass cost conference hierarchy.

The school sells approximately 200 family passes, 30 single adult passes and about 60 student passes, annually. The new charge for a family pass is higher than Boyne City, East Jordan, Grayling and Kalkaska. The charge is lower than Elk Rapids, Harbor Springs and Traverse City St. Francis.

Season tickets for the 2002-2003 school year are on sale at the high school office, 5200 Marion Center Road.

The first home varsity football game against St. Ignace is Aug. 30 and the first home varsity girls' basketball game against Gaylord St. Mary's is Aug. 27.

Taylor preliminary hearing postponed for negotiations

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The preliminary hearing for Ellsworth resident John Taylor, a member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority and the Venetian Festival Board of Directors, was postponed Aug. 13.

Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney Mary Beth Kur said Taylor had not yet retained an attorney and the preliminary hearing was postponed to allow more time for negotiation of a plea agreement.

Taylor is currently charged with two felony counts of resisting and obstructing a police officer and a misdemeanor for disturbing the peace following the incident that allegedly occurred July 22 in Charlevoix's East Park between Taylor and Charlevoix City Police officers Dale Meredith, Gerard Doan and Jim Schlappi.

Each felony count of assaulting/resisting/obstructing a police officer carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and/or a $2,000 fine. The disturbing the peace misdemeanor count carries a maximum penalty of 90 days in jail and/or a $100 fine.

The preliminary hearing was rescheduled for 3:15 p.m., Aug. 27 in Charlevoix County 90th District Court.

Community debates plans for city marina

MARINA

A vote by show of hands was taken and the majority of those in attendance agreed that creating transient docks instead of seasonal is more consistent with the goals of a public marina. But less of a clear direction from the estimated 60 people was given as to whether or not they would support any expansion.

Mary Nardle of the Michigan Department of Natural Resources said statewide comprehensive studies show Charlevoix has unmet demand and there is no magic number of additional docks the commission is looking for, but no expansion means no money.

While the need for some expansion does not mean docks have to extend 400 feet into Round Lake to get the state agency's aid, it does mean more. And some residents support more docks and others asked council and the DDA to draft a financial proposal for the city to go in alone.

Charlevoix resident Connie Saltonstall suggested when it comes time to lay out a financial plan that the city also include the cost of refurbishing what is currently in place with no additional docks.

But others disagreed that what we currently have is enough.

Former mayor Josh Barnes said, "We need a change of attitude here. We don't own this place outright and can't refuse to have people here."

The community has until April of 2003 to decide what it wants for the marina.

Nardle said the earliest the commission will be able to fund any project will be 2005 and to be eligible for this funding the city has to have a permit application in by April of 2003.

Pollack said a combined East Park and marina renovation project proposal is expected to be ready by late fall.

The dividing line between East Park and the marina renovation projects is the bulkhead. It is in disrepair and its shape doesn't facilitate marina and park planning.

Pollack said he and John Schlak of United Design Associates of Cheboygan, the marina engineers, met with Les Thomas, a representative of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality and Nardle in Lansing. They talked about cutting and filling and found those administrative bodies don't give a definitive direction to a project until the permit application has been processed.

It was his impression that land can be taken away and added, but no net loss of water can result. Ideally the permitting agencies like to see a new bulkhead built in front of the existing.

"The trend in permits is not in favor of large amounts of cutting and filling to change the shape of the shoreline," Pollack said.

From that discussion, United Design and Pollack developed three potential bulkhead alignments, all of which would be appropriate with the park plan he presented.

Those who were unable to attend the meeting and would like to review the marina planning goals and objectives or bulkhead alternatives can do so at the city manager's office at city hall, located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

Plans for new East Park buildings face criticism

PARK

In this revised plan, the performance venue is situated at the corner of the park at Antrim Street, in the vicinity of where the chamber of commerce and harbor master's offices currently are.

Pollack described the design as an amphitheater with both solid terraced seating and lawn seating. The terraces are shown to be 10 feet wide and 40-50 feet long and are expected to be made of a stone material. Pollack said that area is too tight for grass and would require expensive maintenance. He said the layout has more places for people to sit in close proximity to performances.

The design is an "S" shape that splits in the middle for discreet entrance and exit by performers; below there will be bathroom and changing rooms for performers, public bathrooms and storage space.

The harbor master and boater's facility is proposed to be underground in the area at the end of Clinton Street. The facility will stand 12 feet tall from roof to floor. This setup would require an exhaust stack like that at Bridge Park.

An overlook platform is proposed to rest on its roof. The fish pond is proposed for the viewing area above, the pond is expected to be designed to include a more naturalized setting than the current setup. This harbor master's building, would result in the loss of some parking.

Pollack said by putting the building underground the design takes advantage of the changing grade and allows for green, open space from Clinton Street to the music facility at Antrim Street.

The plan also shows modified terraces in the park so they will facilitate use for festivals and art shows. Pollack estimated the park accommodating 190-200 booth spaces after renovation.

The terrace closest to the water is 85 feet wide and would accommodate a ice skating area with the harbor master's facility as a warming hut.

"The terraces are historic, a beautiful, timeless landscape expression," Pollack said of the park's topography.

The plan also showed a Chamber of Commerce welcome center in Bridge Park. The chamber building is 400 square feet and is proposed to be a long rectangle, 15 feet by 36 feet.

Mitchell said based on input he has received, this placement and building are "necessary" to allow the chamber to market Charlevoix in a visible location.

But some who attended didn't agree with this "necessity." Charlevoix resident Birdie Whitley said it's just another building in the park and she is opposed to seeing any building constructed there.

"You bought buildings and tore them down, now God forbid you build more," she said.

Charlevoix resident Alvin Ranger suggested moving the welcome facility toward the channel in Coast Guard Park, a lower location, less likely to obstruct the view.

Other suggestions were to locate them in an open business on Bridge Street or possibly in the current Coast Guard location if the ACACIA moves out in 2006.

Pollack said East Park planning will be on hold while marina renovation alternatives are drafted. The two are expected to merge and be ready for presentation later this fall.

Those who were unable to attend the meeting and would like to review the park plan can do so at the city manager's office at city hall located at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

In the 12-to-13-year-old flight the boys' title went to Michael Parket and Kris Bartling who tied while Emily Yager won the girls. In the 10- to 11-year-old tournament Ryan Halloran captured the boys' title while Ellie McFalls won the girls. Harmon Grubbs won the tournament for 9-year-olds while Nolan Ager won the flight trophy for 8-year-olds.

In the Sunday night league, the Wolverines edged the Spartans for first lead by consistent scorers: Josh Wood, Ryan Graham, Andrew Whitley and Chris Wyniawsky.

Scholarship winners that received a free week of golf at Ferris State University's Golf Academy were recognized and included: Scott McFalls, Ryan Graham, Kyle Smith, Connor Louiselle, Matthew Novotny and Emily Yager.

Executive Director Dean Davenport, was especially pleased with the program's growth this year.

"Our mentor program had over 35 adults that committed to attending each session and that allowed for a safe teaching and playing environment. Both the Belvedere and the Charlevoix Country Club provided incentives which rewarded our mentors and as a result our program improved," he said.

Both courses allowed mentors special golfing dates.

Davenport also cited the teaching professionals that donate their time.

"Steve Braun and Marty Joy from the Belvedere, Joan Waha from Dunmaglas, Scott Blechel from the Municipal Course, Steve Good from the country club and Mike Steffens from Chestnut Hills.

"In addition, all these courses plus Antrim Dells provide course time for teaching and playing sessions even during the busy summer time. The Charlevoix Recreation Department and Director Ike Boss have provided us with administrative help which has enabled us to handle the tremendous amount of paperwork associated with having 192 golfers," he said.

In addition, Davenport said, "The secret to our success is simple, caring adult mentors, devoted teaching professionals and local courses willing to set aside prime time for youngsters, all have combined for an outstanding junior program, one for which Charlevoix can be proud."

Those junior golfers that did not pick up their framed picture and awards at the final session can do so at the Charlevoix Recreation Department office located in the city hall at 210 State Street in Charlevoix.

The Charlevoix Public Library Board of Trustees recently announced the formation of the Building Committee.

The Building Committee members include: Al Ranger, co-chair, professional engineer; Marlin Hall, co-chair, attorney and retired State Court administrator; Bill Dietrich, Realtor; Howard Horton, a chemist retired from the Medusa Cement Company; Valerie Meyerson, secretary and library director; Roger Postmus, retired from 35 years of practicing medicine; Connie Saltonstall, a retired teacher and computer consultant; Gordon Van Wieren, Library Board of Trustees Liaison; Traver Wood, a landscape architect with Site Planning Development, Inc.

Rotary Club to have golf tournament fund-raiser

The Rotary Club of Charlevoix will host its annual golf tournament Thursday, Sept. 5 at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course.

Billed as "The Affordable Golf Tournament," the entry fee is only $35 per person, the same as last year.

"After lengthy discussions with several financial consultants and reviewing our most recent retirement plan statements, my fellow Rotarians and I were convinced that the right thing to do was to keep the cost the same as last year," said tournament chairman Tim Petrosky.

The event is a four-person scramble. The entry fee includes golf, a dinner buffet at Giuseppe's, and a tournament trademark: Oodles of prizes. Prizes will be awarded based on skill, luck and random draw, and to teams that finish first, last and right in the middle.

"It is due to the generosity of area businesses and residents, who donate prizes for the event, that makes the tournament so much fun for everyone," said Petrosky.

Registration forms are available at the Charlevoix Municipal Golf Course pro shop. The event is limited to the first 20 teams that register. An optional skins game and "mulligan's" will also be available to teams. The shotgun start is at 4:30 p.m. Dinner follows at 6:30 p.m.

Rotary uses proceeds from the event to benefit the community with an emphasis on area youth.

Classic cars could be seen cruising down many of the streets in Charlevoix last weekend for the annual Street Legends classic car show. Over 100 cars registered, not including the host cars, specialty cars and race cars which brought the total to 130 vehicles. (Left) Area racer Pat Weeks entered this race car. It was one of three. (Below) This year, also including a race, entrants rolled a dice and whoever's number came up moved ahead one lap. The winner took home a $10 bill. Ribbon-cutting to officially open new school

SCHOOL

Charlevoix Public Schools started exploring its facility issue in the spring of 1999, kicking things off with an April community forum. Sturock said 120 people attended and while no one clear direction was given, it was plain to see something had to change.

A Facility Steering Committee then formed and looked at whether or not the district's best option was to build a new middle school or a new high school or to renovate and to also pinpoint what that meant long-term for the district.

The committee reported back to the hoard in June of 1999 and suggested building a new high school and in July of 1999 the board opted to accept that recommendation and signed a purchase agreement for the 74 acre site off Marion Center Road.

Then on Oct. 10, 1999 voters of the Charlevoix School District voted in a $18.8 million bond issue to fund the massive undertaking and renovate both the old high school for incoming middle school students and the elementary school, solidifying its acceptance of the new school and site and getting the ball rolling for the building project.

BETA Design Group of Grand Rapids was brought in to plan and engineer the project and well known school builders, The Christman Company, were hired as the general contractor. Representatives of both Christman and BETA will be at the ceremony to hand over keys to the new building to Sturock and the board.

A ribbon cutting and short comments from school board president Allen Telgenhof, high school principal Gary Grundman and senior class president Jodi Roloff will follow. After hearing from those guest speakers, the Rayder fight song will make its debut at the high school campus.

Following the ceremony, long awaited tours of the 131,000 square foot facility will be offered until 9 p.m. Then it's lights out until Sept. 3 when students will filter in for the first day of school.

The former high school at 108 East Garfield in Charlevoix was built in 1959 and will be used for grades five through eight. The former middle school will soon be for sale.

'A great day to be a Rayder'

By JULIE WITTHOEFT

The consensus was clear at the dedication ceremony for the new Charlevoix High School Aug. 26, it was a great day to be a Rayder.

The dedication was the culmination of three years of blood, sweat and tears for the community and the school district, but the focus of the evening was on the "first-class" facility that came of that work.

"It's fitting that we have this beautiful first-class building because we have a beautiful first-class community," Allen Telgenhof, President of the Charlevoix Board of Education, said.

Sirens are school bells for students

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Most students know its time for class when the bell rings, but for a unique group of seven students from Charlevoix, hands-on learning begins when they hear the scream of sirens and the ring of emergency tones over pagers.

These students are enrolled in traditional classrooms and are part of the City of Charlevoix's Fire Explorer Program.

"The goal behind the Explorer Program is to get the youth experience and exposure to a career in firefighting and emergency medical situations," the program liaison, Charlevoix Firefighter Jeffry Riley, explained. "This gives them the experience they need; they get to know the equipment and the procedure. If they want to pursue firefighting long-term, they have a leg up."

In fact, his son, Jeffrey, 17, a charter member of the explorers, has used the program to launch his career in industrial and residential firefighting with the United States Army. Jeffrey started his senior year at Northwest Academy this week and spent the summer at boot camp in Fort Jackson, S.C. to help accomplish this goal.

Erika Loucks

"I've really liked it (the explorer program). It's not every day you can help out at a car accident," he said.

The co-ed program was launched in October of 1998 and is affiliated with the Boy Scouts of America. Riley said it is rare in small communities like Charlevoix.

The explorers assist at fire scenes and car accidents by bringing tools to emergency personnel and coordinating cleanup efforts. When they aren't on the scene, they also facilitate and participate in training activities.

"As far as the department goes, they are a big help at fire scenes. They know what and where the equipment is and on the scene, this frees up regular firefighters," Riley, the liaison, said. "As young as they are, they can help and can be a big help to the community."

They may know the equipment inside and out, but Riley feels the department's explorers take away more than knowledge. He said they learn the value of team work and build self-confidence.

The explorers are not required to respond to all emergencies, but do carry pagers so, if and when they are available, they can participate.

Thus far, the group has assisted in several major fires, including two that occurred in January at Wojan Millworks off US-31 South in Charlevoix Township and the Silver Birch Motel fire in the city off US-31 South.

They have also been part of vehicle extrication efforts and ice rescues.

The team doesn't enter burning buildings, utilize sirens or wear the air packs commonly associated with firefighters, but the explorers said the adrenaline of rushing to the scene and the satisfaction of serving the community are part of each and every emergency event and training exercise.

Five of the explorers, Jeffrey and his brother Andy Riley, 15; Adam Whitley, 16; Trisha Talboys, 17; and Erika Loucks, 17, said the explorer experience has enriched their lives in many ways.

"It gave me some direction in my life. I had no idea what I wanted to do. It taught me a lot," Loucks, who is training to be a certified Emergency Medical Technician, said of her experience as a explorer.

The explorer program has three open positions for interested girls and boys ages 14 through 18 who live in the city of Charlevoix, Marion or Norwood townships and part of Eveline Township.

For more information about the program or to sign up, contact Riley or fire chief Doug Carver at (231) 547-3279. Adults interested in training to become a firefighter should also contact Carver at the number listed above.

Community proud of new high school

EDITORIAL

After all the endless lawsuits and angry community arguments, we finally have a new school that the community can be proud of.

On Monday night, Charlevoix Community Schools officially opened the new Charlevoix High School on Marion Center Road with a ribbon-cutting ceremony in front of a large crowd of onlookers. After opening the doors to the public, the community got its first chance to see a high class facility that will add to an already exceptional learning experience for Charlevoix students.

In this two story building was a brand new gymnasium, complete with more seating and a great new basketball court; a state-of-the art auditorium, with a wonderful sound system and comfortable seating for many school and community functions and brand-new classrooms fully equipped to help teachers create a future generation that will make Charlevoix an even better place to live.

It was a wonderful moment in the history of the Charlevoix School District and one that was a long time coming. In the beginning of this process, the district faced a hard fought battle for funding, then a recall election, then the lawsuits came, further complicated with many anti-high school newspaper advertisements.

It was as though the bitter feelings flowing through the community would never go away.

But, this was not the case Monday night. Everyone in attendance seemed impressed by the new school and excited for its future. The negative air over the community seemed to be gone, if at least for one night.

Adding to this wonderful occasion, it was announced that Charlevoix residents Bill and Ellen Schuiling donated an additional $200,000 to the new high school.

We would like to congratulate the Charlevoix Community School District and the citizens of Charlevoix for building such a grand building for its students. And, we hope that this ends the bitterness that has plagued this community for far too long.

Sometimes you just have to live with new species

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

What do Zebra Mussels, Purple Loosestrife and West Nile Encephalitis Virus have in common? They are all described as exotics, non-native species that represent a threat to the native plants and animals in our part of the world.

Exotic in the sense used here means foreign or from another country. The big question that such plants and animals raise is whether we should be worried about them.

The language used to describe the arrival and establishment of exotic or foreign plants and animals suggests that worry or at least concern is the proper response.

The West Nile Virus arrived in the United States only last year, but already it is found in most of the states and it has been found in Charlevoix County. Its spread is described as an invasion calling up images of foreign troops marching in and taking over. Most often we do not mention that other encephalitis viruses, more harmful than the West Nile one, are already here and cause the same disease.

Purple Loosestrife is worrisome because it is invading and taking over wetlands. And even though it is an attractive plant, there are a variety of plans afoot to eliminate it if possible, or at least prevent its further invasion of our wetlands. Zebra mussels are everywhere in the water, or soon will be.

It is difficult to know how to respond to such invasions. There are only a few historical cases of real problems caused by kinds of creatures introduced into the United States from other parts of the world. The Chestnut Blight, a fungus that killed most of what was the dominant tree species in the northeastern United States and the Sea Lamprey which almost eliminated the Great Lakes fishery are two examples of exotics that caused real and persistent problems.

A broader look at exotics suggests there may be little reason to fear the introduction of most, and that many such introductions may be beneficial. It is a case where clearly one size of response does not fit all situations.

The state of Michigan has about 2,500 kinds of plants. Probably one quarter of them were introduced by Europeans, who brought seeds or plants from their homes and planted them here, either by accident or by design. Almost every plant you see driving along Michigan's highways is one of those introduced plants. They are certainly at home here, as are the immigrants who brought them.

An even longer historical look tells us that the plants and people who were here before the Europeans arrived had come from eastern Asia thousands of years earlier. They were at one time also exotics. People have been hauling plants and animals around the world with them as long as there have been people. As we travel and transport more and more widely, it is likely that almost every plant or small animal will be present in every place on earth where it can survive.

Some control of exotics which have been demonstrated to be genuinely harmful may be desirable, but any attempt to eliminate or completely prevent the arrival of exotic plant and animal species is doomed to failure. Just as we live in a world economy, we live in a world plant and animal community. Excessive concern over the arrival or establishment of any and all exotic species has in it a hint of racism or overly powerful nationalism.

Most exotic species arriving here will change things, just as earlier human, plant and animal immigrants have. The change may be for the better or worse, there is no way of confidently predicting which will be the case.

Legislation to eliminate exotic plant and animal species should be viewed with great caution. We should be sure we are not just saying, "I'm here now, I like it the way it is and I don't want anyone else to come in and change it."

Students awarded scholarships are:

Obituaries

Gregory D. Linse: Sept. 27, 1956 - Aug. 24, 2002

Gregory D. Linse, 45, of Charlevoix, died Saturday, Aug. 24, 2002 at his home in Charlevoix.

A Mass of the Resurrection will be at 11 a.m., Wednesday, Aug. 28, 2002 at Saint Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix where friends may call from 9:30 a.m. until the time of the service. The Rev. Thomas Neis will officiate and burial will be in Saint Mary's Cemetery in Charlevoix.

Greg was born Sept. 27, 1956 in Casa Blancat, Morocco, the son of Edward F. and Joann (Lawter) Linse.

He graduated from Gaylord High School in 1974 and spent most of his life in Oklahoma City, Okla. He moved to Charlevoix in 1996. He was employed by Lexalite International and had been employed by CPI in Charlevoix.

Greg loved his step-children, his dogs and enjoyed horseback riding. On Oct. 26, 2001 he married the former Catherine Lutz in Charlevoix and she survives.

Greg is also survived by his step-children, Lisa and Heather Waltonen and Brittany Gibson; brothers, Patrick Linse of Albuquerque, N.M., Michael (Julie) Linse, Mark (Deborah) Linse, Robert (Minerva) Humphries all of Oklahoma City; sisters, Marcia (Chris) Coffman of Oklahoma City, Rita (Don) Reavis of Blanchard, Okla., Jackie (Chad) Fitzgerald of Dacula, Ga., Kim (Jason) Mahaffey of Yukon, Okla.; his father, Edward Linse of Charlevoix.

Greg was preceded in death by his mother, Joann. Memorial contributions may be made to Saint Mary's School or to NWMCH-Hospice.

Robert H. Klooster: Oct. 21, 1932 - Aug. 25, 2002

Robert H. Klooster, 69, of Charlevoix, died Sunday, Aug. 25, 2002 at the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

A funeral will take place at 11 a.m., Thursday, Aug. 29 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix. The Rev. Larry Grooters will officiate and burial will be in Atwood Cemetery in Banks Township in Antrim County.

Visitation will be from 7-9 p.m., Wednesday, Aug. 28 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

Bob was born Oct. 21, 1932 in Atwood, the son of Conrad and Catherine (Smith) Klooster. He graduated from Ellsworth High School in 1950.

Bob served as a medic in the United States Army infantry during the Korean War from 1952 to 1954.

Bob was a lifelong resident of Antrim and Charlevoix counties and on April 19, 1952 he married the former Eloise Marie Batchelder in Atwood.

He was co-owner of Klooster Equipment in Atwood, retiring in 1979. Bob was a member of the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix and was named to the national and Michigan Fast Pitch Softball Hall of Fame in 1996. A loving and faithful son, brother, husband, father, grandfather and friend to so many for 69 years.

From working his father's farms to the frozen bloody battlefields in Korea, Bob was there. Coming home, raising four beautiful daughters with his wife Eloise, working the family business, Bob could be counted on. Many have cheered him on whether on the mound or at bat and many more have prayed for him believing in God over and over again as Bob battled heart disease.

A big man, Bob knew where his real strength came from. From testing in war, in business, in family concerns and in health; Bob knew his source was Jesus Christ and the promises of our Lord in His Word.

Bob was a gentle giant, a brave fighter and a fierce competitor. A real salesman, always ready with a quick quip, Bob always left us laughing. Kind, compassionate and a quiet spirit, Bob allowed his life to be used by God as a "conduit" — a pipe through which others may know the Lover of his soul.

"I have fought the good fight. I have finished the race. I have kept the faith." II Timothy 4:7.

Bob is survived by his wife of 50 years, Eloise M. of Charlevoix; daughters, Roberta (Marrles) Moore of Denver, Colo., Andrea (David) Eakes, and Brenda (Michael) Washburne all of Charlevoix, Melinda (Scott) Lankford of Traverse City; grandchildren, Andrew Klooster, Samuel and Jameson Eakes of Charlevoix, Blaire and Morgan Moore of Denver, Colo. and Jack Lankford of Traverse City; brothers, James D. (Esther) Klooster of Cedar Springs, Conrad L. (Carolyn) Klooster of Charlevoix, Henry I. (Jacqueline) Klooster of Norwood; several nieces and nephews.

Memorial contributions may be made (in lieu of flowers) to the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters Association EMS-Ambulance Fund, Charlevoix Area Hospital or the Community Reformed Church music department.

Arrangements were handled by Winchester Funeral Home in Charlevoix.

New teachers start school in Charlevoix

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

David Greenough, Jayne Bennett and Jessica Martin will join the Charlevoix School District's teaching staff this year.

Greenough is replacing Don Richards in the high school's special education department. Richards started with the district late last year and resigned June 4, after finding an open position at East Jordan Elementary School.

Greenough, 35, is moving to the area from Grandville where he has taught at Orion Alternative Junior/Senior High School since 1999. Prior to accepting the alternative education position he taught special education for eight years with the Grand Rapids School District.

Greenough received his bachelor's degree in special education in 1990 from Western Michigan University in Kalamazoo and his master's degree in learning disabilities in 2000 from Grand Valley State University in Allendale.

At the Aug. 12 school board meeting when Greenough was officially hired, Charlevoix High School Principal Gary Grundman told the board, "Dave is going to fit in very well, we are very fortunate to get someone of his quality."

Jessica Martin

Jayne Bennett

Greenough said he chose Charlevoix because of the community's commitment to the school district. He said he was impressed with his findings in researching the district's programs and talking with colleagues.

"It's a beautiful area as well and we had other offers in the area, but Charlevoix looked like a leader," Greenough said.

His wife, Alicia, is also a teacher and will be employed at Petoskey High School starting this fall. The couple and their 1-year-old son, Anthony, are in the relocation process and will likely end up in Petoskey.

Greenough plans to implement Dr. William Glassier's methodology into his classroom. He explained that this stresses the importance of educators building relationships and trust with their students.

"Through their trusting you, they recognize that you value education and they value you and indirectly value education," he explained.

While Greenough breaks in one of the new classrooms at the newly built Charlevoix High School, off Marion Center Road in Charlevoix, Bennett will be busy in the music room.

Bennett was hired by the district in late June to replace Evelyn Wujcik as middle school and high school band director. Wujcik opted for part time retirement after 32 years, but didn't make a permanent move from the district and will be the half-time music instructor at both the middle and high schools.

"Hiring Ev gives us the opportunity to grow in that department which I think is well overdue," Grundman said.

Wujcik's full-time replacement, Bennett, has 22 years of experience in music instruction at almost every grade level. Last year she worked part time at the St. Francis Xavier School in Petoskey, at Blackbird Elementary School in Harbor Springs and in the Petoskey Band Program as director of the Symphony Band and eighth grade band.

She graduated from Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant with a bachelor's degree in music education in 1979 and returned to continue her music education and receive her elementary endorsement from 1985-1986.

Just across the bridge at Charlevoix Elementary School, Martin, a Charlevoix native, will be introducing kindergartners to education. Martin will be teaching 17 kindergarten students in the morning and 14 "beginnergarteners" afternoons at the school. She replaces Nicole Sterrett, who moved into a second grade position at the school.

Martin, 23, was valedictorian of the graduating class at Charlevoix High School in 1997 and graduated from Calvin College in Grand Rapids in 2001 with high honors and a grade point average of 3.933.

She was one of seven candidates for the kindergarten teaching job, but, according to a recommendation written to the school board by principal Dick Swenor, she outshined the competition.

He said, "Jessa (Martin) exhibited maturity, poise and knowledge throughout the interviews. She will make a great addition to our staff."

Martin was offered numerous other teaching positions, but chose Charlevoix because of her love of the area and desire to raise her family here.

"I'm looking forward to having fun with the kids and getting them motivated to learn," Martin said.

She is the daughter of Charlevoix residents Dennis and Diane VanGuilder and married fellow Charlevoix native Nate Martin in May of this year. He is employed by Ellsworth Public Schools as a science teacher at both the middle and high school levels.

Opening day of classes for these new teachers and students is Sept. 3. Classes at the elementary school start at 1 p.m. and the middle and high schools start at noon that day.

New principal named at Northwest Academy

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Northwest Academy, Charlevoix's Charter School, is operating under new direction.

Scott Cochran, 32 of Charlevoix, accepted the principal's position at the school Aug. 12.

Scott Cochran

Steve Bennett, the former principal who was at the school for six years resigned in July. He was a Northwest teacher for two years and the administrator for four years.

"It was time to move in a different direction," Bennett said.

While Cochran is a stranger to his new position, he is no stranger to the school's staff and students. He has been a Northwest teacher since 1996, when it opened.

Prior to accepting the principal's position, Cochran taught language arts and social studies at both the middle and high school levels.

Cochran is an Ann Arbor native who graduated from his hometown college, the University of Michigan, with a bachelor's degree in secondary education. In 2000, he earned his master's in education administration from Central Michigan University in Mount Pleasant.

Cochran said the late administrative turnover has made life hectic for him as he prepares to open the doors Sept. 3 for the first day of school. But he said he and Bennett worked closely together which facilitated a smooth transition.

"There are always challenges in running a school. But I love Charlevoix and Northwest Academy," he said. "I feel Northwest is an important part of the community; we provide specialized education in technology and the arts and provide a family atmosphere and high quality academics. I want to help the school continue to succeed."

Aside from teaching at the school, he has also coached the Northwest soccer team and will continue to do so. The team of 15 students is entering its third season and looks forward to following up on last year's success. In 2001 it made it to the class D schools district finals.

Off the soccer field, Cochran is excited about a program called "strands" that will be implemented this year and will open the door for intensive studies of choice at the school.

By the time a Northwest student reaches their sophomore year they must choose between intensive programs that include academic studies incorporating accelerated classes in core subjects, the arts or technology.

In order to offer their 80 students an extensive array of options within their field of study, or "strand" as the school calls it, the staff will offer new programs including dance.

"With the strand model, the focus is on applied learning and students aren't just sitting in a classroom every day," Cochran said.

Those involved in arts and technology strand programs will also be required to pursue traditional academic studies. Cochran said the school's academic standards are set higher than the state required benchmarks.

While Northwest stresses academic excellence it also encourages extracurricular involvement.

"The best student is a busy student," he said.

This year the school will supplement its extracurricular opportunities by offering two additional sports, cross country and tennis.

Cochran and his wife, Charlevoix native Kirsten (Joy), have lived in Charlevoix since 1996. They have a son, Austin, who is 3 years old.

Community Foundation offers Challenge fund

"I can do anything" is the Challenge Mountain motto — and now, with the establishment of a new fund to support the unique nonprofit program, that motto has taken on new meaning.

The Challenge Mountain Fund was recently created within the Charlevoix County Community Foundation. The fund will accept donations from individuals, families and organizations, building a permanent endowment that can benefit Challenge Mountain programs now and well into the future.

Established in 1984 at the old Walloon Hills ski facility outside Boyne Falls, Challenge Mountain offers free instruction, equipment and skiing to children and adults with handicaps. Volunteers who are specially trained to assist skiers offer one-on-one lessons and adaptive ski equipment helps physically and mentally challenged skiers enjoy a downhill experience.

"Challenge Mountain combines the fun of a daring descent and enjoyment of the outdoors with development of new skills, increased self-esteem and the freedom of independence," Mike Hurchick, president of the organization, said. "We've seen what this program can do to help individuals reach their full potential — and now, our fund will help us realize our future goals too."

Among Challenge Mountain's goals are a plan to become a year-round facility, offering camping, canoeing, hiking trails, water skiing and other summertime activities.

Hurchick said the organization hopes to build a fund sufficient to provide a supportive, neutral environment where all kinds of programs that are physically challenging will help the disabled lead a full life through outdoor recreation.

Gifts to the new Challenge Mountain Fund are fully tax deductible and qualify for a special State of Michigan Income Tax Credit. Donations should be directed to the Charlevoix County Community Foundation, with a notation that they're earmarked for Challenge Mountain.

The new fund joins 136 other funds held by the local community foundation.

Established by a group of civic leaders 10 years ago, the community foundation is a charitable organization that accepts donations of all sizes, allows donors to create their own funds to fulfill philanthropic ideals, invests and manages its assets and uses the investment income to make grants to a number of nonprofit programs and projects throughout the county.

Since its inception in 1992, the community foundation's assets have grown to $7.5 million and grants totaling $3 million have been distributed to assist the arts, education, environmental efforts, health and wellness initiatives, civic and economic development projects, youth programs, and recreation.

More information about the Charlevoix County Community Foundation and the Challenge Mountain Fund is available by calling the foundation, (231) 536-2440 or writing P.O. Box 718, East Jordan, MI 49727.

Crooked Tree Arts opens new photography exhibit

The Crooked Tree Arts Center announced the opening of Lost Wax: The Photography of Elaine Redmond.

This visual arts exhibition features photographs of mannequins, from antique to modern. Over 100 photographs are on display along with an antique wax French mannequin bust.

Redmond, an artist from Beverly Hills, had many encounters with Mario's Mannequin Studio, a Detroit landmark for over 52 years. Eight years and 1,000 photographs later, Redmond had created a tremendous portfolio.

"The moment I walked through the door I was stunned and visually overwhelmed by the unlimited combinations of 'still lives' to be captured in every room, on every floor and in every direction," Redmond said.

In 1990, she began shooting the mannequins, but could not move them within the studio. Redmond had to create her compositions from what she found, as Mario's was a working studio.

Designed and sculpted by artists, the mannequin has preserved the ideal of beauty from a specific era and area of the world for nearly 150 years.

"The mannequins from the 1930's capture that era's idea of beauty, the eyebrows, the eyes, the mouth," Redmond said.

Many of her photographs are cropped, depicting just the mouth or eyes of a mannequin.

"I do not crop the photos after I shoot them; I purposely cut-off parts of the face," Redmond said.

"What you see in each image, is what I wanted to show and no more."

The show opened Aug. 19 in the temporary location of the Crooked Tree Arts Center's exhibition space at 445 East Mitchell Street in downtown Petoskey. The arts center's visual arts exhibitions will be in the building next to the Art Tree Sales Gallery during the renovation and expansion of the arts center.

The exhibition runs through Sept. 27. The telephone number is (231) 347-4337. For more information about upcoming shows, visit the arts center web site, www.crookedtree.org.

Alcohol was a factor in crash on Klooster Road

A 23-year-old Charlevoix man was arrested following an automobile accident around 8 p.m., Aug. 21 on Klooster Road off Lake 26 Road in Marion Township.

When Charlevoix County Sheriff deputies arrived on scene, the driver had fled on foot. Deputies searched the vehicle and found two loaded, double-barrel shotguns and several boxes of ammunition in the vehicle.

Approximately 45 minutes later, the man was taken into custody after being located in the woods near the crash scene. Alcohol was a factor in the crash and the man remains in custody pending formal charges by the prosecutor's office.

Road work started on M-66

The Michigan Department of Transportation will be milling and resurfacing more than 12 miles of M-66, from M-32 to US-131, from Aug. 26 to Oct. 1.

One lane of traffic will be maintained with traffic regulators at the two-lane section of highway and traffic shifts will be used in sections with more than two lanes. Motorists are urged to watch for traffic-control changes and proceed with caution through the work zone.

This project will cost $765,000 and is expected to extend the life of the pavement by approximately five years.

Marina planning meeting scheduled

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Possibilities for the future of Charlevoix's Municipal Marina will be further explored at a public input meeting Aug. 29.

Peter Pollack, principal design engineer with Pollack Design and Associates of Ann Arbor, the firm hired by the city of Charlevoix to draft marina and East Park renovation plans, will offer three design alternatives for the community to critique.

The meeting will take place at 7 p.m. Thursday in city council chambers at Charlevoix City Hall located at 210 State Street.

Pollack plans to start the meeting with a presentation of the three alternatives using both computer generated Power Point technology and sketches.

Representatives of United Design Associates of Cheboygan, the project's consulting engineer, will also be on site to answer questions.

This meeting follows a July 29 public input session and an Aug. 15 goal setting session.

From this meeting will evolve a single concept that will also be presented at a meeting for review by the community. A date for this meeting has not been set.

Rollover crash on Aug. 22

According to Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater, alcohol and speed were factors in a one vehicle rollover crash that occurred around 3:30 p.m., Aug. 22 on Wilson Road, near Wood Street in the village of Advance.

The three occupants of the vehicle, a pickup truck, exited the vehicle immediately after the crash and left the scene, with only the driver returning to the crash site a short time later.

Robert Kenney of East Jordan, 22, was the driver of the truck involved in the crash.

Speed and alcohol were factors in this crash. The Boyne City Police Department and Boyne City Ambulance and Fire Departments assisted at the scene.

Beaver Island girl saved by vacationing police officer

A 3-year-old Beaver Island girl was saved by a vacationing Michigan State Police Detective around 5 p.m., Aug. 20 on Beaver Island after she nearly drowned at the public beach.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office, Hillary Rasch was in the shallow water with her sister at the beach trying to retrieve a lost toy that was floating away. She apparently lost her footing and fell into the water.

Rasch's father rushed to the area and retrieved both children and was trying to resuscitate the child. The girls' father turned her over to Detective Michael Morey of the Michigan State Police Ionia Post who got the child breathing again.

The sheriff's office stated the girl had not been breathing for about two minutes.

Beaver Island Emergency Medical Service rushed Rasch to the Beaver Island Rural Health Center for an initial evaluation. The girl was then transported to Charlevoix Airport and was taken to Charlevoix Area Hospital where she was treated and released.

District decides against crossing guards

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

While the Charlevoix School District thinks it is safer for students to ride the school bus, some Charlevoix residents and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) believe children should have the opportunity to walk or ride a bike to school.

Beth Teuscher and a group of other residents, including Charlevoix City Council Second Ward representative Gabe Campbell, recently urged the school board to look into stationing a crossing guard at the corner of Garfield and Bridge streets.

"The problem is the kids are younger, that school is going to serve fifth through eighth grades this year. If you watch those kids try and cross, it will give you a heart attack," Campbell said.

The board discussed this possibility at its meeting Aug. 12 and concluded the safest way for students in that area to get to school is by bus.

Board trustee and Charlevoix City Police Chief Dennis Halverson explained the situation is dangerous. He said children who live near the middle school, which is located at 108 East Garfield Avenue in Charlevoix, and want to walk or bike to school would have to cross through heavy traffic on Bridge Street.

Halverson has discussed the issue with middle school principal Keith Haske and observed the intersection at Garfield and Bridge streets carefully. He said this investigation solidified his opinion that, "The safest way to get kids across Bridge Street is not to put them across Bridge Street."

Teuscher and Campbell recognize the traffic problem and argue that the situation warrants placement of a crossing guard at the intersection before and after school and during special events.

Halverson said when he moved here 15 years ago he had a child in kindergarten and one in second grade. He was concerned and spoke with former superintendent Vane Smith about the school district's options in getting students safely to the elementary school.

Smith promised the community no child would have to navigate Petoskey Avenue.

This meant that each child who would have to cross the street to get to school would have the option of taking the bus, regardless of their proximity to school.

But Campbell said regardless of the bus service, kids are walking and biking to school and navigating Petoskey Avenue. He said an optional safe route should be provided to the students on Bridge Street.

Campbell's suggestions for creating this safe route include implementing a crossing guard, building a walkway over the road or constructing a traffic light at the intersection.

"A crossing guard, a walk over or a light make more sense than buying more buses and busing everybody in town," he said.

Bus routes have been changed and four stops have been added to service all students.

Halverson feels in terms of safety this is the best way to go. He said the crossing guard isn't as safe as a school bus. He maintains that the only way to ensure safety is to keep the kids out of the street altogether.

"Those are high accident intersections, no crossing guard or police officer can take the inherent danger out of crossing Bridge Street. The only way to address it is to eliminate it," he said. "There are numerous things that happen on that street that a crossing guard couldn't prevent."

Additionally, while the district offers bus service to address concerns of students' physical safety, some argue that students are done a disservice by eliminating that exercise from their routine.

A recent study by the CDC found that only a quarter of American children walk or bike to school and concluded this may contribute to the country's growing problem of childhood obesity and Type 2 diabetes in adolescents.

In its first national survey to look at why children aren't walking, the CDC asked parents why they don't send their kids to school on foot. Top concerns include: distance, weather, traffic and crime.

In Charlevoix the district wants to get kids on the bus, but the study prompted the CDC to get kids off the bus. Its goal is to get at least 50 percent of children who live less than a mile from school walking or biking by 2010.

But this goal won't meet its mark locally.

Halverson said the district can address the physical fitness in other ways, like physical education classes and sports, but doesn't feel it is necessary to find ways for the kids to walk or bike to school to meet that need.

"Safety is our aim and I think the safest way to get across that street is in a school bus. With the physical fitness goal, I suppose you have to be aware of the actual negative things that may be in the way of that and that highway is one of them," Halverson said.

New regulations make it easier to install child seats

A new regulation will go into effect Sept. 1 that should make child safety seat installation much easier.

Federal regulators will require all new passenger vehicles to have the Lower Anchors and Tethers for Children (LATCH) system. AAA Michigan is also reminding parents and caregivers that the auto club is available as a resource for information on the new LATCH system or on the current passenger restraint system.

LATCH enables child safety seats to be installed without using the vehicle's safety belts. It consists of two metal bars that are located in the seat bight (the spot where the seat back and the seat cushion meet) of a vehicle's rear seat and a top tether for forward facing seats. The car seat is attached to the metal bars by hooks located on the back of the car seat.

All new child safety seats are also required to have MATCH attachments that connect to the anchors.

Does the requirement mean that you should replace your child's current car seat if you have a new vehicle equipped with the LATCH system?

"Not at all," Richard J. Miller, manager of Community Safety Services at AAA Michigan, said. "You can continue to use your current car seat with your vehicle's seat belt system. Or you can purchase a retrofit kit that will allow you to use your current car seat in new cars, which may be particularly helpful for families that frequently switch their car seats between vehicles.

Miller added, "If you opt to buy a retrofit kit, buy the kit that's manufactured for your child's particular car seat. And be sure to consult your vehicle's owners manual for important information about using the LATCH system correctly."

With this system, parents and others who transport young children will have an easier time installing child seats correctly, thereby cutting down on the high percentage of seats that are misused.

"It won't affect, however, the multitude of children who are still riding unrestrained in motor vehicles on our highways today," Miller said. "The new system will also not solve the problem of children being restrained in the wrong seat for their age and weight, as well as children who are not properly secured within their seat."

The National Highway and Safety Administration (NHTSA) recently released statistics indicating that the number of traffic fatalities for children under 15 had dropped 8.6 percent in 2001. Increased education, coupled with improved child passenger restraint laws, have contributed to the decrease in these injuries, but traffic accidents are still the leading cause of death for children.

AAA estimates that if all children under 15 were properly restrained, over 5,200 lives could be saved in the next 10 years.

Braun battles to play 100 holes in one day

Over the years there have been some terrific golf matches at the famous Belvedere Golf Club in Charlevoix.

But the battle seen recently rivaled any of those in the past.

It was Belvedere professional Steve Braun, 57, playing 100 holes against his opponents: Fatigue, back spasms, heat, Achilles' tendon, exhaustion and father time.

Starting at 6:30 a.m. and playing for nearly 12 hours, the local favorite emerged victorious. However, it wasn't easy and almost didn't happen. It was on his fourth round of 18 holes, on the hole 72 when to reduce back spasms he had to go to the clubhouse and lay flat on his back for 20 minutes before he emerged, determined to win his match. And he did so in style, shooting the next 18 holes with a score of 75. His last nine was two over par and he birdied and parred his ninety-ninth and hundredth hole.

But Braun is quick to point out that the real winners are the 200 plus group of youngsters that have enrolled annually in the Charlevoix Junior Golf program. Braun's 100 holes in a day is a challenge for friends of Junior Golf to pledge so much for each hole he plays.

He has done this for four years, raising needed funds to enable the program to remain one of the top in the United States. He already has a pledge total of over $8,000. A large portion of that amount is from Belvedere members and their families.

Dean Davenport, executive director of the 6-year-old program, had the privilege of driving the cart for Braun's hundredth hole.

"I'd be lying if I didn't tell you of the effort it took for Steve to finish, yet his focus and obvious golf skills prevailed over all the opponents he faced. He finished with a great par on a tough par five hole. This revenue has enabled us to send 48 deserving youngsters over the years to the famous Ferris State University week-long Golf Academy," Davenport said.

"Here they polish their skills, but more importantly are introduced to a great educational experience of being on a college campus, away from home and parents and coping with the emotions that go along with the experience. We've had nothing but great reports from all the youngsters we've seen over the seven years we've done so. Steve has been an inspiration to our program, and besides volunteering his teaching expertise, raises the extra money to make our program more unique and more than just golf instruction."

Contributions can still be sent for the program and should be addressed to the Belvedere Club, Belvedere Avenue, Charlevoix, MI 49307; attention Steve Braun.

IN MEMORIAM 071

In Memory of Larry Swanson

They say the streets are made of gold, And perhaps that is so,
But I wonder, if in Heaven,
There are lawns for you to mow?

Jesus told of many mansions
In His Father's house up there,
But maybe in a corner
There's a pole barn built somewhere.

With a place for saws and tools
And a place for odds and ends,
A warm fire in the wood stove,
Circled 'round with loving friends.

There probably are no fire trucks
Or yellow "turn-out" gear,
But perhaps there is a hunting blind
And a license that lasts all year.

Do you go for walks with Jesus,
As you're standing strong and tall?
(There's no wheel-chair in heaven, no hospital bed by the wall!)

We know there are children in heaven,
Jesus said...the kingdom is of such...
I hope you found kids to talk to,
You'd enjoy each other so much.

You'd tell them of "hopper-grasses"
And beautiful "flutter-bye" wings,
They'd giggle as your grand kids did,
When you "mixed-up" such things.

Among the saints and angels
Did you find three little boys?
Did you teach them to wrestle and rough-house,
Fill the mansion with happy noise?

Do you go camping in heaven?
Do you sit by the camp fire's glow,
And listen as angels play music?
Or just chat with the folks that you know?

Filled with God's beauty and presence,
It must be a wonderful place!
Where we sit at the feet of our Savior,
And look on His wonderful face.

For those that you had to leave here,
We love you, and miss you so,
Heaven just grew dearer,
When you went there, a year ago.

His wife, sons and families

New high school opened at ribbon-cutting ceremony

"A long and winding road brought us here today and I'm not talking about Marion Center Road," he added as he accepted the building from general contractors, the Christman Company and engineers BETA Design Group on behalf of the board.

Telgenhof was talking about the many battles the district faced in building the facility located at 05200 Marion Center Road in Charlevoix, including multiple lawsuits, heated debate over the extension of the city of Charlevoix's sewer to the site and opposition to the board's choice of the site in general.

However, the focus of the evening was anything but those sharp turns and Telgenhof spoke of the light at the end of the tunnel.

"Someone once said if you want to see the rainbow, first you have to put up with the rain. Well we've had our rain, today's our rainbow," he said.

Telgenhof also made a point of thanking Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock who started with the district in 1998 and immediately got to work to bring the district's facilities up to par.

"The superintendent saw a need and it wasn't about politics it was about doing what was right. He advocated a plan that wouldn't be a Band-Aid on our facilities needs. He advocated a plan that would create a better learning environment for all our kids," Telgenhof said.

On behalf of the board Telgenhof thanked Sturock for his vision and leadership.

He then urged those in attendance to take a tour of "your school, because it truly is your school."

Hundreds of adults toured the 135,000 square foot school and many commented that the facility was so nice it made them want to return to high school.

Students will filter in for their first day at the new school at noon Sept. 3.

Coveted Stanley Cup coming to East Park

HOCKEY

Stanley Cup by photographer Marrel Staffel for $50 per person or family. All of the proceeds from these pictures will go to Charlevoix Area Hospital for equipment in its new emergency department.

"This will be an opportunity for anybody to come and take a look at the cup," Ilitch said. She added a time limit for the public viewing in East Park has not been set because it "depends on the crowd."

"This is kind of a gift from our family to the Charlevoix community," she added.

According to Sebastian, this will be the only public viewing of the cup in northern Michigan. The cup may go to Traverse City during the Red Wings training camp later this year.

The cup will be coming from the Detroit area to Charlevoix. On Sept. 3, the Stanley Cup will be put on an airplane in Traverse City, where it will fly to Chicago to be with Red Wings player Chris Chelios.

The Stanley Cup came to hockey when it was purchased by Lord Stanley of Preston, the Governor of Canada in 1892 for 10 guineas — about $50 — to be competed for by hockey teams in Canada, according to the Web site www.nhl.com.

The first winner of the cup was the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association hockey club, champions of the Amateur Hockey Association of Canada for 1893, the site said.

Amateur teams competed for the cup until 1910, when the professional National Hockey Association was formed. In 1917, this association became the National Hockey League.

Since its inception, each team that has won the cup has its name and year it won the cup engraved on a silver ring fitted on the bottom of it. The cup travels nearly 300 days a year and around the world.

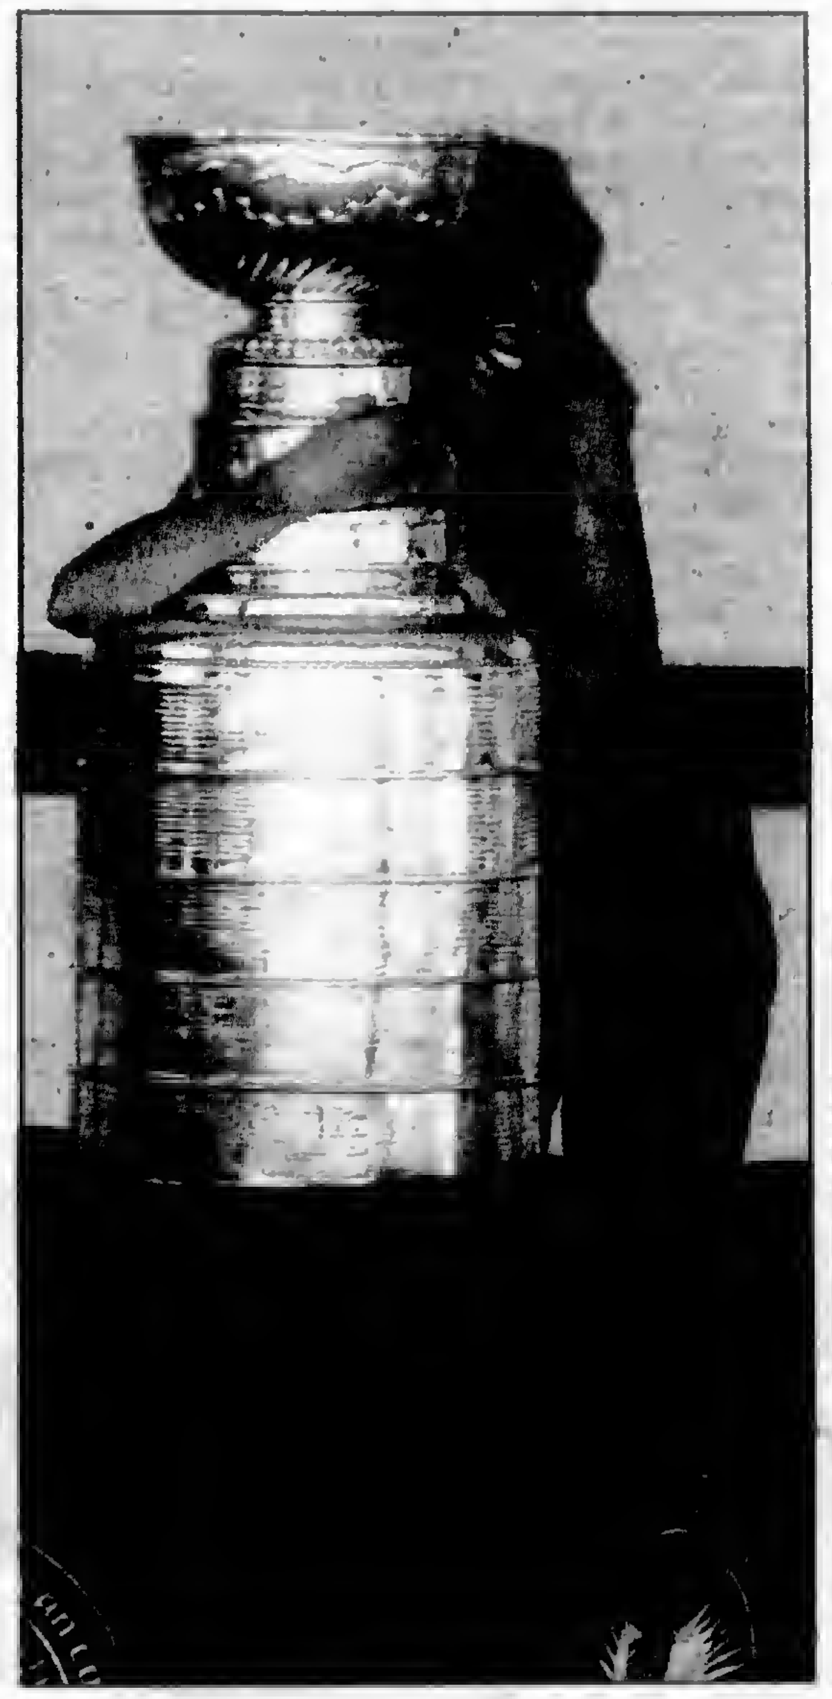
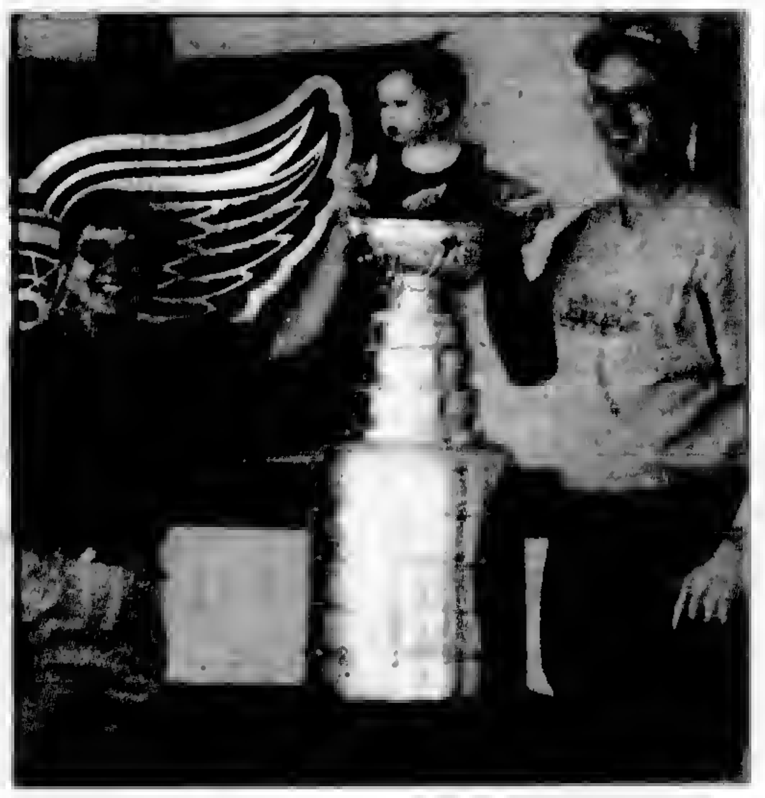
Cup crazy in Charlevoix





Charlevoix residents and visitors came by the dozens Monday to East Park to take advantage of their chance to see and have their pictures taken with the hockey trophy, The Stanley Cup. The Ilitch family — who owns the champion hockey team the Detroit Red Wings — brought the coveted cup to Charlevoix to raise money for Charlevoix Area Hospital. According to preliminary figures, over $18,000 was raised from the event. (Left) Beth Krakowski, of Charlevoix, gives the cup a big hug. Agency wants air cleaner at Cemex

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix's Cemex Inc., the local cement manufacturing company is working hard to rectify the issue of Lake Michigan mixing with cement kiln dust, but while these water quality issues have been addressed, some say air quality issues have continued to be a problem.

Emissions at the site have repeatedly exceeded those allowed by the state and may pose health risks, as attested to by a thick stack of letters of violation from the Air Quality Division of the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality (MDEQ) to Cemex Inc.

"The same problems are happening again and again and again," said Dave Thorley, environmental engineer with the Air Quality Division of the MDEQ.

Cemex administrators say they have addressed some of the problems and have responded in writing to the Charlevoix Courier: "Cemex takes very seriously each of the issues raised by the MDEQ and has worked closely with the agency to resolve these matters. While most of the issues were corrected immediately, a few have reoccurred on occasion in

Citizens want different marina plans

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Charlevoix residents who attended the municipal marina renovation planning meeting Aug. 28 sent United Design Associates, the project engineers, back to the drawing board to draft a plan without mooring for the Coast Guard.

"There is much political reluctance to discuss the fact that the ACACIA will be gone. I suggest you develop a plan that doesn't extend as far as this and covers the area the ACACIA now occupies. There would be less intrusion, additional docks and improved facilities," Charlevoix resident Alvin Ranger said.

At previous meetings Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner had suggested the planning process include docking space for a new Coast Guard cutter to show Charlevoix's commitment to continuing its local presence. The current buoy tender, the ACACIA, is scheduled to leave Charlevoix, with no replacement, in 2006.

Since this future move was announced earlier this year, the city and other political entities have gone to bat to continue to have the boat in town. But, several people who attended the meeting, including John Winn, a Round Lake resident and one of seven Waterways Commissioners, said maybe it's time to get real.

Winn said keeping the boat here is a "pipe dream" and marina planning should include a layout without accommodations for a Coast Guard boat.

The decision to have United Design return with a marina layout void of a Coast Guard presence came after Charlevoix residents reviewed four plans drafted by the engineers and concluded that docks extending 235 feet into Round Lake are an intrusion and maneuverability issue.

However, to receive Waterways funding for the project which could pay for 50 to 75 percent of marina renovations and construction of a comfort facility, more transient docks are required. If the community refuses a plan that extends out, to receive financial assistance the plan may have to extend down.

Winn said the commission may be more apt to accept a proposal if it shows more docks could be added

Area prepares to honor Sept. 11 victims, heroes

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

Uncertainty, shock and sadness blanketed America on Sept. 11, 2001 as citizens witnessed barbaric terrorist attacks that consumed over 2,000 lives and left many wondering what tomorrow would bring.

The following days and months brought intense sadness, anger and a rescue effort every American can be proud of. Patriotism hit a high as red, white and blue splashed across businesses and homes and American cohesion flexed its muscles.

Now, those days and months have melted into a year and next week, on Sept. 11, the anniversary of those attacks, America will pay homage to the lives lost, the families ripped apart and the scars carved into the country.

The first wound to be inflicted on the nation came at 8:47 a.m. that day when hijacked American Airlines flight 11, en route from Boston to Los Angeles with 92 passengers on board, tore through one of the World Trade Center's 110-story towers. The second tower was impacted, at 9:05 a.m. by a second plane, American Airlines flight 77 traveling from Washington to Los Angeles carrying 64 people.

Then, a third jet struck our country's defense hub, the Pentagon at 9:40 a.m. and a fourth, United Airlines flight 93, a Boeing 757 en route from Newark, N.J. to San Francisco, Calif. crashed 80 miles southeast of Pittsburgh, Penn.

By 10:30 a.m. both towers had collapsed and horrifying clouds of smoke blanketed lower Manhattan and people worldwide started questioning who did this and why.

The world later learned who was to blame, known Islamic militant Osama bin Laden in search of holy war of jihad. The hunt for bin Laden was on.

As weeks started to pass America's thirst for bin Laden's blood was quenched not by vengeance but through the generosity of fellow Americans nationwide. This financial, spiritual and selfless generosity allowed the sun to shine its rays through the evil cloud bin Laden created overhead.

And while the economy lagged American strength grew.

Now, one year later, people across the globe are planning to gather and pay tribute to the victims and to the heroes and to recognize the significance of those attacks on the world.

Locally, on Sept. 11 area residents will congregate at churches, schools and places of business to take a moment of silence, pray together, offer one another support and remember.

Several area churches are planning special services and prayer opportunities including: Charlevoix's First Congregational Church, Charlevoix's St. Mary Catholic Church, The Charlevoix Community Reformed Church, Charlevoix Christian Science Society and Beaver Island's Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church.

Morning services will take place on Beaver Island as three island congregations gather at 9 a.m. at the Holy Cross Roman Catholic Church for an ecumenical service located at 73860 Kings Highway on the island.

On the mainland Charlevoix's St. Mary Catholic Church will host a remembrance day service at noon and the First Congregational Church UCC will have an open sanctuary from noon to 1 p.m. at 101 State Street in Charlevoix.

Officials at the Congregational Church said the gathering will allow participants time for prayer and meditation and will also include a brief liturgy.

See HONOR, page 24

Pure joy makes $50 seem like a small price

Jeremy McBain

'Just a thought'

It is amazing the reactions you can get from just one inanimate object such as a trophy.

For the teams who win them, the only words that can describe their excitement is "extreme happiness" as they lift it high into the air. The athletes have fought hard for the trophy they now possess. It is a symbol of their dedication and shows they are the best in the business.

But, they are not the only ones to experience joy from these shiny objects that are lusted after. Just watch a fan's elation over seeing, touching or even talking about some sports trophies that will equal — if not surpass — that of the athletes.

This was evident Monday in Charlevoix as the coveted hockey trophy, The Stanley Cup, was displayed in the bandshell in East Park. The cup was won by the Detroit Red Wings in June and was brought to Charlevoix by the Ilitch family — the owners of the Detroit Red Wings — to help raise money for Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The slightest mention that this trophy would be in the area, brought people to downtown Charlevoix in droves, all eager to see and touch this symbol of hockey greatness.

Since I am a rabid hockey fan, I was among those excited for its appearance. I wanted to see this shiny symbol of the icy sport of hockey with my own eyes; to touch it would be outstanding.

But, I quickly learned that there was more to the joy of this trophy than just seeing it or touching it for me.

I realize that some people may think of me as a grump or someone that is too serious at times. This comes with the job of editor, when you have to make tough decisions and face sometimes ruthless criticism on a weekly basis. But, it brings great happiness to every part of my body whenever I see people smile, especially in groups.

I love the feeling of joy in the air; I love to watch people who are truly happy. Their happiness feeds my own.

And on Monday afternoon in East Park, I was well-fed. This trophy brought so much joy into Charlevoix that my mind will be satiated with joy, regardless of the criticisms I get due to my job.

I loved standing back and watching the reactions on people's faces to this hockey trophy. When they stood next to it, some seemed afraid to touch it, as if it were a dream and would vanish at contact. Others eagerly stroked the silver cup and its rings, like they were trying to etch its smooth feel into their minds forever.

All of them had the biggest grins on their faces a human being could possibly have.

For me, the best moment came, not when I touched the Stanley Cup myself, but when I saw the reaction of one little boy to it.

Brandon Clark, 8, of Alanson had been in his wheelchair since he was a year-and-a-half, according to his grandparents Joyce and Roger Clark. But, he was crazy about sports, especially hockey.

And when the Red Wings won the cup, Joyce and Roger promised him wherever it was, they would take Brandon to see it. Thanks to the Ilitch family and their support of Charlevoix Area Hospital, Brandon and his grandparents didn't have to travel far.

I saw Brandon that day, along with his brother Craig, 4, posing with the beloved Stanley Cup. This small boy had the biggest smile of any in line that day and the twinkle in his eyes was not created by a reflection off the trophy, it was pure, unrefined joy. I was waiting for him to raise up out of that wheelchair at any moment and give the Stanley Cup a hug or hoist it triumphantly over his head.

I spent $50 that day on a picture of my wife and I with the Stanley Cup. All of the proceeds from my $50 went to the Charlevoix Area Hospital.

So, now I have a lasting picture of my visit with the trophy, but I also have the memory of Brandon's smiling face and many others to look back on when I am having bad days. All due to a hockey trophy and the generosity of the Ilitch family.

It was the best $50 I ever spent.

Letters to the editor

Listen to the residents

Editor:

After reading the articles in the Aug. 21 issue of the Courier regarding the plans for East Park and the marina, I am more concerned than ever about the directions in which these projects are heading. Residents are attending the meetings and expressing their views, but the planners seem to have selective hearing and no one seems to be getting the message. I applaud Shirley Gibson for asking the council to see the contract the city has with Pollack Design and asking how much they have paid for services to date. I would like to know who chose Pollack Design and who is requesting all the items that are being incorporated into these designs. The designs are out of touch with reality and do not reflect the wishes of the citizens who attend the meetings.

Regarding the park:

1) We recently spent a lot of money to add stairs and walkways and to re-contour and re-landscape the area near Antrim Street and now we're planning a "performance venue" that would replace green grass with "stone material" terraces and below that "bathroom and changing rooms for performers and public bathrooms and storage space." What happened to the view? There used to be a charming stone fish pond there, incorporated nicely into the landscaping.

2) A performance venue at Antrim Street would negatively impact the residences on the south shore who derive much of their taxable value from the proximity to and the view of the lake. Because many of these residences are second homes, they are paying taxes at the much higher nonhomestead rate. Talk about "biting the hand that feeds!"

3) Do we need to go to the dramatic measure and expense of modifying the terraces to accommodate "190 to 200 booth spaces" for festivals for a few months of the year? Edith Gilbert, the Petoskey News-Review, and the Courier have all written editorials stating that this is not what the public wants.

4) Locating the ice rink on the "terrace closest to the water" is very poor judgment. Children can fall into the lake. The city must be mindful of liability exposure.

Regarding the marina:

1) Is our main goal to apply for grant money with strings attached and spend it or is it to have a carefully planned, long term renovation that acknowledges the natural beauty of the lake and its navigation issues? Even with grant money, the taxpayer is responsible for a big expense.

2) We are led to believe that unless we have an application approved by April 2003, there will never be funding available in the future. This is false. Let us not in haste be strong armed into a decision that is unwise and that we will regret. Keep in mind that these docks are vacant nine months of the year.

There is a recurring theme that Charlevoix has unmet demand.

1) The park is bordered on the east by Round Lake, on the west by a U.S. highway with all its traffic, on the north by Pine River and on the south by Antrim Street. It cannot expand.

2) Round Lake is a finite size. Short of an act of God, it cannot expand.

3) To address the unmet need by cramming more docks into Round Lake and filling the park with structures, runs the risk of turning downtown Charlevoix into Little Singapore. This will not attract the type of boater that John Winn claims spends $300 a day on shore.

We are the owners and conservators of this town which we support with our tax dollars. We have the responsibility to create the character and guide the growth of our community.

I applaud the concerned citizens who have made the effort to attend the meeting and state their views. It's too bad they're being ignored. It's time to demand that their concerns be taken into consideration.

Remember Sept. 11

Editor:

"One word best describes America: Freedom," Dwight D. Eisenhower, in an address to Congress, Jan. 9, 1959

On behalf of the Charlevoix Veterans Affairs Office, it would be appropriate to remember by a special moment of silence, those who lost their lives in the Terrorist attack of Sept. 11, 2001. This Wednesday morning of Sept. 11, 2002, remember and reflect on the attack and the brave men and women that serve our country.

I will always remember being at Charlevoix Area Hospital, with a World War II veteran on the morning the terrorists struck. This will obviously be a sober day for our country, as we remember together what happened that tragic day.

The Veterans Affairs Office's desire is to honor those who serve our community daily and make our homes and work places in northern Michigan a much safer place and to commemorate the ones that lost their lives.

This freedom that makes America so strong comes from the diversity of people, whose faith and patriotism have given us the opportunity in this country. The opportunity to go out and vote on election day and speak freely on capitalism and about the most powerful country on earth.

As Americans we are ambassadors of freedom, around the world. It is indeed our duty and privilege to keep fighting for diversity, faith, patriotism, capitalism, opportunity and the right to vote. Those ideals are so important to maintain our precious freedom.

That is why today, a year after the attacks that shook the free world, our nation is back at war against those who dare threaten the values that we hold most dear — "freedom."

The Charlevoix Veterans Affairs Office appreciates you and hopes you can make time in your busy schedule to recognize and give thanks for those who have lost their lives or may have been injured on Sept. 11, 2001.

Increase OPEC tariffs

Editor:

I have read and also listened to recent opinions of international news media from both Europe and the United States. It certainly seems that there is unanimous public opinion against attacking Iraq in the immediate future.

I would suggest that the United States by congressional and presidential action increase tariffs on OPEC oil, By gradually increasing costs, members will realize that they must spend their oil dollars to benefit their own constituents, instead of spreading propaganda and terror against the United States and our friends. Perhaps, we can at least avoid a shooting war.

This increase in U.S. duties will cause the price of gasoline to increase, which will answer many environmental problems and reflect positively on our negative status in world opinion.

MARINA

in this Coast Guard docking area, north of the current marina, at a later date.

Winn didn't even feel the four layouts presented by Jim Muschell of United Design Associates, which offered between 61 and 63 slips, would be a shoe-in for assistance. He said he hopes plan B, without the Coast Guard, would meet the commission's need for more slips.

While the size of the piers is the community's focus of strict scrutiny, these same piers are the least expensive undertaking in a possible renovation. However they could end up funding the big cash hog, the bulkhead.

Muschell said the steel sheeting currently in place should not have been used and is failing. A study conducted two years ago by the city estimated the cost of replacement to be $4 million.

First ward councilman Norm Carlson explained that bulkhead repairs alone would not qualify the city for Waterways funding and would likely cost it more than its share of renovating the total marina, including docks and constructing new marina facilities in East Park.

City manager Mike Wiesner said the city's share of the cost will require a bond sale.

But Winn urged those in attendance to establish a project plan now and worry about money later.

"If we don't get off our butts, we're on our own and where we are going to get $4 million to just replace the sea wall, I don't know. Come up with a plan and do it soon or this whole thing is a moot point," he said.

To be eligible for Waterways funding for its 2005 budget period, Charlevoix has to be in the permit application process by April 1, 2003.

The number of actual docks was increased in each of the four United Design proposed layouts, but the number of total boats to be accommodated wasn't increased much.

Harbormaster Hal Evans said currently there are 17 piers and 34 slips that are often "doubled up." He said at capacity the marina hosts between 55 and 60 boats.

Muschell explained the renovation plans he presented, which allow for one boat per slip, were drafted in accordance with the standards set forth by the Department of Natural Resources (DNR).

United Design plan A received the most attention and extended 235 feet out into Round Lake from the existing shoreline. But residents said this extension, which is 160 feet further than the current docking system, is too much.

When asked why United Design felt an extension of this size was warranted, John Schlak, an engineer with the company, explained while "stacking" or doubling up is currently a common practice, any renovation should abide by the DNR's standards.

"The DNR doesn't want boats sticking out further than the pier," he said.

Marina layout A offers 12 slips, 30 feet in length; 20 slips, 38 feet in length; 16 slips, 45 feet in length; 9 slips, 60 feet in length; 3 slips, 80 feet in length and one 100 foot slip.

The plans presented by Muschell, who has designed over 400 marinas on the Great Lakes, showed a head pier, 12 feet wide, running parallel to the bulkhead and floating promenade mooring perpendicular to that.

This perpendicular mooring which would run east to west would offer 70 feet of public walk access between private "finger" slips running north and south. Muschell said the setup would encourage clear Round Lake viewing from Bridge Street and East Park.

Peter Pollack, principal designer with the firm Pollack Design and Associates of Ann Arbor, the firm hired by the city to plan both marina and East Park renovations, explained the current marina only allows for Round Lake viewing when smaller boats are docked there.

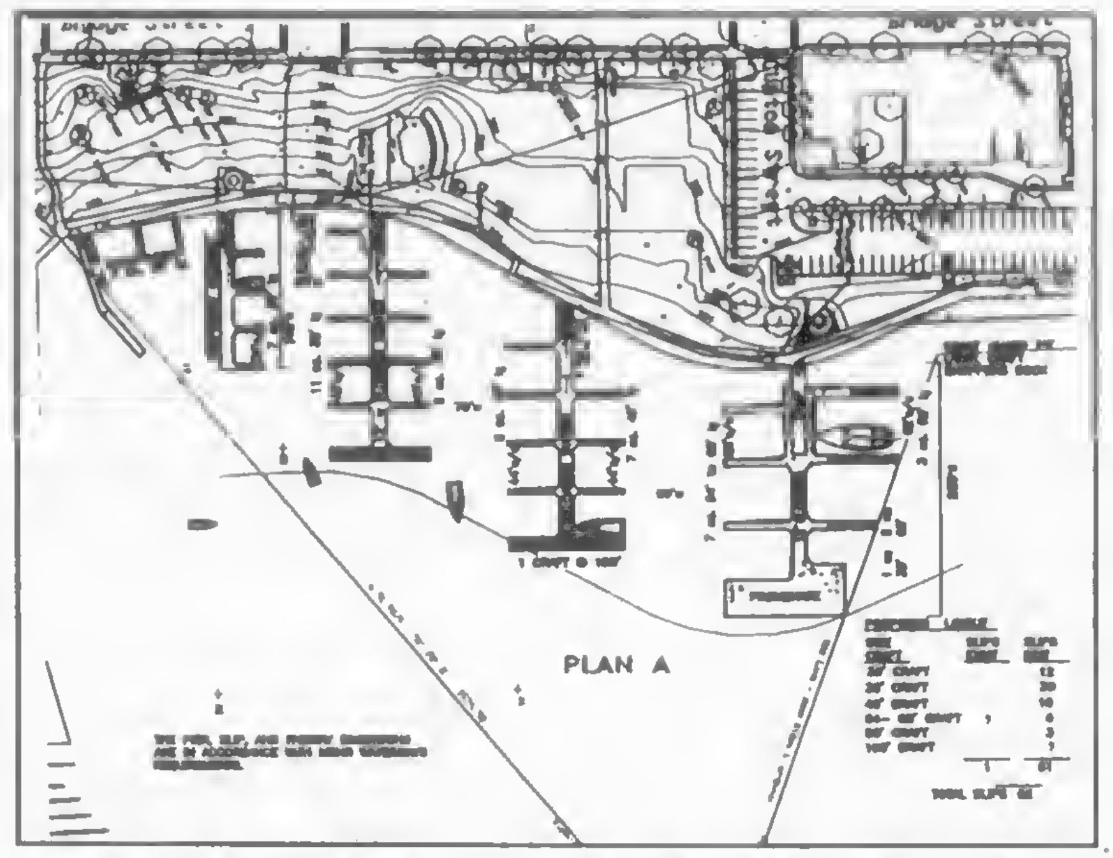
"By going out further we bring the water closer to shore," he said.

But many of those in attendance weren't interested in bringing the water to shore, they want to see a design that brings the docks closer to shore — a possibility that may be opened up by the use of the Coast Guard mooring area which is 240 feet long.

Aside from aesthetic concerns residents also mentioned maneuverability issues that may be created if the docks are extended into the lake.

Don Ward, co-owner of Ward Brothers Charter Boats Inc., the fueling station at the southwest end of Round Lake, said the design would infringe on his company's ability to service boaters.

Pollack said an exact survey of the city's riparian rights on Round Lake had not been completed, but that the planning goal is to ensure easy access to the fuel stop and to facilitate movement by the Beaver Island Boat Company and the United States Coast Guard.



A copy of plan A, which was discussed the most by residents at the meeting. (Courtesy graphic)

Charlevoix resident Josh Barnes, who also submitted a proposal, said those presented by United Design may extend to the point of possibly eliminating the Venetian Festival Boat Parade and stadium fireworks.

The presentation included overlays of the Barnes plan, but Schlak and Muschell said the cut and fill proposed along the bulkhead in his layout would likely be refused by the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality and the Army Corps of Engineers, the permitting agencies.

Muschell said all the United Design plans closely followed the current bulkhead because of preliminary indications from those permitting agencies that have encouraged this approach.

The next meeting at which marina and park renovations will be reviewed is scheduled as a joint Charlevoix City Council and Downtown Development Authority review of the combined possible plans. This meeting is expected to take place in late September, but no definite date has been set.

Klooster remembered as great athlete, kind man

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Robert Klooster was known as a good friend and an excellent athlete. (Courtesy photo)

Charlevoix lost an icon in the softball world and an all-around kind man Aug. 25, 2002 in the death of resident Robert "Big Bob" Klooster.

Klooster, who had lived through years of heart troubles, died at Charlevoix Area Hospital. A funeral was given Aug. 29 at the Community Reformed Church in Charlevoix.

Residents, friends and family of Klooster knew him as a wonderful husband and father, a man with a good sense of humor and who was easy to speak with, loved his Christianity and was a phenomenal athlete.

"He always fought the good fight and was very upbeat all the time," said his wife of 50 years, Eloise.

Klooster was also the first man from Charlevoix to be inducted into the Michigan Amateur Softball Association's Hall of Fame in 1996.

"He loved softball. He loved the game. He was one of the top pitchers I have ever seen," said Charlevoix Recreation Department Director Ike Boss.

According to Eloise, he started playing softball with his brothers when he was young. Klooster played with the first softball team from Charlevoix, before he joined the army.

He took his love of the game with him when he went to Korea as a medic in the United States Army from 1952 to 1954.

While in Korea, Klooster's team won the National Softball Championship.

When he came back, the statistics continued to pile up for him. According to an article in the Petoskey News-Review, written in 1995 just before his induction, Klooster was in on over 900 victories, hit close to 550 home runs and batted around .350, recorded about 7,200 strikeouts, threw between 30 and 40 no-hitters, played on five state championship teams and was inducted into the Cheboygan Sports Hall of Fame in 1981, among many others.

On top of his sports achievements, Eloise said he was the kind of guy who could sit on a park bench and talk with just about anybody on any subject.

"He was just wonderful," she said.

Klooster is survived by his wife, Eloise, of Charlevoix; daughters, Roberta (Marrles) Moore of Denver, Colo., Andrea (David) Eakes, and Brenda (Michael) Washburne all of Charlevoix, Melinda (Scott) Lankford of Traverse City; grandchildren, Andrew Klooster, Samuel and Jameson Eakes of Charlevoix, Blaire and Morgan Moore of Denver, Colo. and Jack Lankford of Traverse City; brothers, James D. (Esther) Klooster of Cedar Springs, Conrad L. (Carolyn) Klooster of Charlevoix, Henry I. (Jacqueline) Klooster of Norwood; several nieces and nephews.

Memorial contributions may be made (in lieu of flowers) to the Charlevoix Volunteer Firefighters Association EMS-Ambulance Fund, Charlevoix Area Hospital or the Community Reformed Church music department.

Kiwanis teams up with Head Start Preschool

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Chapter of Kiwanis International is working on a fall program closely tied to its goal to serve the children of the world for Head Start Preschool in Charlevoix Township.

"The Kiwanis International motto is 'serving the children of the world.' We're looking to meet and exceed that objective on a local basis," said Bill Lovett, former president of the Kiwanis Club and current chair of the club's committee called Young Children Priority One.

A one-on-one reading program is being coordinated by the club in conjunction with Charlevoix Public Library for Head Start. It will bring Kiwanis members and student club members from Charlevoix elementary and high schools and Northwest Academy to the school for reading sessions.

"It's exciting for preschoolers to have early reading preparation, it will help them look forward to kindergarten and first grade. And it provides an opportunity for Kiwanis members and support clubs to interact with young children. There are benefits all around," Lovett said.

The full-day, full-year pre-school for students, ages 3 to 5, opened its doors at the Early Education Building in Charlevoix Township Oct. 9.

The proactive Kiwanis plan took root last winter when some of Lovett's committee members visited the school and searched out its unmet needs.

After the visit the group reported back to the entire committee. Val Meyerson, a new club member, sat in on the meeting and suggested the club steer a reading program at the preschool.

"She had a familiarity that none of us had. We were immediately excited," Lovett said.

He then contacted Head Start program coordinator Phyliss Hess and met with both Hess and lead instructor at the school, Ambre Flynn.

Together they molded a vision that starts with books. On Aug. 28 Meyerson ordered 40 different titles through the library for the program.

The next step will be training readers which will include volunteers from the Kiwanis Club's 45 person membership and students in the K-Club at Charlevoix Elementary School and the Key Club at Charlevoix High School and Northwest Academy.

Weekly or bi-weekly visits to the school will then be scheduled.

From a professional standpoint Meyerson pointed out the numerous benefits a program like this brings to both the reader and the child.

> "This will give them a sense of self esteem and courage to have books be a part of their lives...."

She said one-on-one programs like this help introduce children to books, literature and reading.

"This will give them a sense of self-esteem and courage to have books be a part of their lives, it provides a comfort level and builds their independence," she explained.

For the readers, Meyerson said they gain a sense of accomplishment and pride in their ability to serve the community.

Lovett is excited to see the program starting to take off. He explained that the concept was a natural progression for the club which has focused its efforts on assisting early education and has done so through Head Start in the past.

Other projects have included providing clothing, goods and services to students.

The club is also working on projects with the Northwest Community Health Agency to encourage prenatal to preschool immunization and with the County Juvenile Court system to look at ways to help child victims of neglect and abuse.

The Head Start Preschool serves families who fall under designated poverty guidelines. Where the students live isn't a factor. The site will serve any eligible families from Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmet counties who are able to provide transportation to the site. The school is open from 6:30 a.m. to 6:00 p.m.

To be eligible students must be between the ages of 3 and 5, be at the school a minimum of six hours each day and have up-to-date immunizations.

The program does accept special needs children. The full-day, full-year program is currently at capacity with 15 students enrolled.

For more information about the school or to place your student on the enrollment wait list, contact Sarah Rose at the Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency at (231) 547-3973.

To offer assistance in the reading program contact Meyerson at (231) 547-2651.

BUSINESS

Students will make your party 'rock'

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Two Charlevoix students are using their love of music and electronics to make a little extra money with their new business Fugitive DJ Light and Sound.

After becoming interested in the business through a mutual friend at the BASES Teen Center in Charlevoix, Andy Riley and Devin Toten started offering DJ services to school dances and small parties about a year ago. They have since formed a partnership and business in Fugitive DJ Light and Sound.

Riley said he likes the job because he, "can play music real loud and get paid for it" as well as meet cool people. Toten agreed.

They own their own equipment, with a large set for large venues, such as school dances, and a small set for small venues, such as private house parties. Riley and Toten said they are not set up to do weddings, though.

"We are DJs that make your party rock," they both said. "If it is too loud, you are too old."

As for experience, the Charlevoix youths have played music for about five school dances at Northwest Academy and one at the East Jordan Middle School.

Fugitive DJ Light and Sound will travel to Boyne City, East Jordan, Ellsworth and other cities near Charlevoix if needed. And they have music to suit the tastes of any listener, from edited versions of songs for school gatherings to more explicit shows for mature audiences.

For more information about Fugitive DJ Light and Sound, contact Riley at 547-9067 or Toten at 237-0679.

Speed limit remains at 55 near new school

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The 55 miles per hour speed limit in effect for the portion of Marion Center Road, where the new high school is located, won't be reduced any time soon and may never change.

As of Sept. 3, the first day of classes at the new school, no speed reductions had been put in place and some residents feel this is a dangerous situation.

"This road has had all sorts of traffic accidents over the years and about five people have died on this road since I've been here. Now there will be an extra 200 students rushing to school every day. I'm already planning alternate routes to avoid an obvious safety risk," Marion Center Road resident Joe Seidel said.

Others agree that a reduced speed is needed, including Charlevoix County Sheriff George Lasater, who earlier this year requested a speed reduction and the placement of various signs near the school.

But Lasater was told by the Michigan State Police, who conducted a study, that the change wasn't necessary.

Lasater said he was disappointed to find the study's results did not merit a speed reduction or a school zone designation. He thinks anything less than 55 miles per hour would be a change for the better from the stretch that extends from the US-31 and Marion Center Road to the site of the new high school.

Lasater would like to see it between 35 and 45 miles per hour from that intersection and even slower as you approach the school with signs indicating congested traffic ahead.

Charlevoix County Road Commission Manager Pat Harmon said the commission will place school ahead signs near the site.

But, in spite of the setback, the quest for a reduced speed hasn't slowed down.

Lasater made a request for a second study to be conducted now that school is in session. This request was granted and Bill Sholten, a Traffic Services Sergeant with the Michigan State Police district headquarters in Williamsburg, will conduct the second study in mid-September.

The study will include research of crash history on the road.

Sholten said one possible outcome is a school speed zone that would extend 1,000 feet from the school and would be in effect from at least a half hour before and after school.

However, he said this outcome is unlikely as the state police have found school zones to be ineffective.

"Sometimes the solution is speed zone, but often times its not," he said.

Before any decision is made Sholten said the study will help him find the problem, if there is one.

"Just because a school was built doesn't mean there will be a crash problem. If they built it right, there should be no reason people can't blend with traffic there," he said.

Sholten explained that acceleration and deceleration lanes near the school's access points should facilitate this blending.

Superintendent of Charlevoix Public Schools Dr. John Sturock is also an advocate of reduced speeds and a school zone designation, but believes in the engineering done at the school's access points and said any further changes are out of the district's hands.

"Obviously we want to see it slowed down, but we also built in a traffic reduction right and left lanes. We don't control the speed of the road out there and would like to see it slower but it will take the appropriate authorities to control that," he said.

Another possible outcome would be a speed reduction on the road in general.

Sholten said this solution would take some time to happen and added that no solution will be reached any time soon. Sholten said he covers 19 counties and the Marion Center Road study will have to wait in line.

While the new high school is complete and housing students, traffic on Marion Center Road Is still traveling at 55 mph. (Photo by Julie Witthoeft)

But Sholten said there is a third solution he has seen to be effective — increased enforcement in that area and that Lasater is already on top of it.

"We've been out there every day; we're making a lot of stops," Lasater said.

The sheriff's department will continue patrolling Marion Center Road before and after school and throughout the day.

Lasater's officers spent eight hours there both Aug. 26 and 27 and he was at the site himself for two hours Aug. 26.

"We will be concentrating our efforts on issuing citations. We want the public to know that's a critical area to us and safety is our main concern. If we have to issue a lot of tickets we will, to slow traffic down. We are putting the public on notice, we will be patrolling heavily," he said.

HEALTH

Diving and good health offer new summer options

F. James Stewart, M.D.

'Your health'

Americans have taken up recreational diving in numbers never before realized.

It is estimated that nearly 500,000 new divers become certified each year, joining the 3.5 million Americans currently enjoying the sport.

Using a Self-contained Under Water Breathing Apparatus (SCUBA), recreational divers may safely dive to a maximum depth of 130 feet. SCUBA training is designed to prepare the diver, both knowledgeably and physically for the experience of safe diving.

Many of the SCUBA training courses can now be completed in a week or less. Prior to entering the training program, the potential student is required to complete a medical form that lists a number of medical conditions that might disqualify the applicant. The applicant then is required to have a physician certify that he/she may safely participate. There are no federal, state or local laws governing medical fitness for recreational diving.

The following is a list of medical conditions that should probably have physician certification:

1) Any significant exercise-limiting problem (i.e., Angina pectoris, chronic asthma, cardiac rhythm disturbances or respiratory insufficiency).

2) Bullous emphysema.

3) Air embolism from ruptured lung.

4) History of spontaneous pneumothorax.

5) Serious ear problems such as perforations or chronic middle or inner ear infections.

6) Psychiatric or emotional instability.

7) Epilepsy requiring drug treatment to prevent seizure.

8) Insulin dependent diabetes mellitus.

9) Asthma requiring drug treatment for control of symptoms.

10) Alcoholism or drug-dependency.

11) Sickle cell disease.

12) Scarring disease of the lungs (sarcoidosis, idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis).

Despite the appearance of being a placid, relaxing sport, SCUBA diving can involve substantial physical exertion and physiological stresses. Thus, if you have a medical condition that limits physical exertion or may result in sudden incapacitation, reconsider whether you want to take that weekend course at the pool.

The air tank, regulator and hoses, mask and fins and buoyancy compensator are heavy and can be awkward to adjust prior to entering the water. Wet suits may be necessary due to water temperatures and breathing must be controlled during diving maneuvers to avoid pulmonary complications.

Body air spaces, such as the middle ear and facial sinuses must be properly ventilated to avoid pressure injury during ascent and descent and even psychological stresses such as unexpected encounters with sea life may limit participation. A sudden incapacitating medical event could result in drowning or an uncontrolled ascent that could product decompression sickness.

Turkeys cause accident

A group of wild turkeys caused a two vehicle accident around 11:30 a.m., Aug. 28 on US-31 near the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club.

According to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department, Wilma Krausse, 71, from Central Lake, was driving on US-31 north of the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club. She had two passengers, Ingeborg Koenig, 81, from Grant's Pass, Ore., and Kai-Peter Koenig, 58, from Montclair, Va.

Krausse was driving a 1998 Pontiac Bonneville. She slowed her car down to stop for a group of wild turkeys that were crossing the road.

A 1998 Ford Windstar van was being driven north on US-31 behind the Krausse vehicle. The driver of the van, Kildred Stanek, 76, from Glennie, did not notice the vehicle ahead of her was braking until it was too late.

When Stanek realized the brake lights of the vehicle ahead of her were on, she tried steering to the right. The Stanek vehicle struck the rear of the Krausse vehicle and then went down an embankment on the right side of the road. The crash resulted in serious damage to both vehicles. It appears passengers of both vehicles had been wearing seatbelts. A passenger of Mrs. Krausse's car, Ingeborg Koenig received a laceration above her left eye. Stanek reported having chest pain. The turkeys were killed.

The injured parties were transported to Charlevoix Area Hospital by Charlevoix Ambulance. The accident was investigated by the Charlevoix County Sheriff Department and assisted at the scene by the Charlevoix Township Fire Department. (Photo by Jeremy McBain)

Some things to think of before your diving classes

HEALTH

tics regarding death and injury from recreational diving reports that approximately 100 Americans die while engaged in recreational diving each year.

Many of these deaths occurred in persons who exceeded depths or time at depths as shown on dive tables or who entered overhead environments (cave or shipwrecks) without proper training or equipment. Each year there are a few persons who attempt diving with medical conditions that should have precluded it as their sport and they pay the ultimate price.

DAN reports nearly 1000 non-fatal injuries yearly in which decompression chambers are necessary for treatment.

It is expected that your physician, even if he/she is not a certified diver, will understand the physical and psychological demands of SCUBA diving and will work with the prospective diver to insure that participation is safe and enjoyable.

That local pool course coming up next winter may be your ticket to enter a new realm of summer aquatic pleasure.

DDA member pleas to reduced charges

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A plea agreement was reached between Charlevoix County Prosecutor Mary Beth Kur and John Taylor, 44, an Ellsworth resident and a member of the Charlevoix Downtown Development Authority.

Two felony charges of resisting and obstructing a police officer and a misdemeanor charge of disturbing the peace were brought against Taylor following an incident that allegedly occurred July 22 in Charlevoix's East Park between him and Charlevoix City Police officers Dale Meredith, Gerard Doan and Jim Schlappi.

At the preliminary hearing which took place at 3:15 p.m., Aug. 27 in Charlevoix County 90th District Court, Taylor pleaded guilty to two lesser misdemeanor charges of disturbing the peace. He was represented by Charlevoix attorney Scott Beatty.

At the hearing, the two felony charges were dropped and one misdemeanor count of disturbing the peace was retained and another added.

Each felony count of assaulting/resisting/obstructing a police officer carries a maximum penalty of two years in prison and/or a $2,000 fine. But the lesser charges to which he pleaded guilty resulted in $630 in fines and costs and a mandated letter of apology to be written to the city police.

Taylor declined to comment about this incident.

Committee to discuss location of new library

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The Charlevoix Public Library is taking its first big step forward in planning its future expansion.

The nine member Library Building Committee and architect, Bill Williams from Engberg-Anderson of Milwaukee, Wis. will meet in the library basement at 6 p.m., Sept. 5 to discuss whether it will renovate its current location or will relocate to another downtown site.

The library is currently located at 109 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

If the committee concludes which expansion option will best suit the community's needs, it will make a site recommendation to the Library Board of Trustees.

Charlevoix Public Library Director, Val Meyerson said the committee is close to choosing a site.

The library's board of trustees will then meet at 4 p.m., Sept. 12, in the library basement at which time the expansion issue will also be discussed. This is the board's regularly scheduled monthly meeting and the expansion is a standing agenda item.

The committee will meet every other week to facilitate planning.

Meyerson encourages all interested members of the community to attend building committee and board meetings to offer input and follow the process.

For more information call the library at (231) 547-2651.

What is coming from the stacks at Cemex?

CEMEX

spite of our efforts to correct them. We believe that recent changes to the plant's operation will address any remaining issues. Regardless, we are committed to solving these problems once and for all."

From Feb. 6, 2001 to the present, the state environmental watchdogs have cited Cemex for 17 air related violations, some of which include multiple offenses.

Several of the raised concerns stem from routine visits Thorley makes to Charlevoix to monitor the site and others are discovered by Cemex and are documented in monthly required state reports.

Thorley said Cemex is the primary air quality issue he deals with in his northern Michigan coverage area, which includes Crawford, Charlevoix and Emmet counties.

The most recent letter of violation was drafted by Thorley on July 1, 2002 and pertained to the company's most common violation since February of 2000 — excess air emissions.

According to Thorley, the problems at the site stem from two sources. One source is combustion within kilns where clinker, the primary ingredient in cement production, is created. The other is dust at multiple locations around the Cemex site, being reintroduced into the air.

Thorley said, in 2001, combustion at Cemex led to the emission of 3,520 tons of nitrogen oxide, 3,897 tons of carbon monoxide and 4,175 tons of sulfur dioxide while 271 tons of particulate matter were accounted for in dust emissions.

Some of the pollutants are emitted through "stacks" that extend from areas where combustion takes place.

Thorley said at Cemex there are several stacks, including: the main stack, the bypass stack, stacks at each Finish mill, stacks at some storage silos, a stack at the secondary crusher and at the conveying systems.

The stacks emit a cloud and often what people are seeing is steam, not smoke, he said. One way to tell them apart, is the steam dissipates and the smoke leaves a trail for a long distance, carrying these pollutants.

According to Thorley these stack emissions may pose health risks locally and as far away as Alpena, Gaylord and Canada.

Emissions from the main stack are sometimes high enough in the air to enter into the atmosphere and are carried away. This means, while sometimes fallout in Charlevoix is minimal, those communities further away may be impacted.

The air quality textbook, "Air Pollution Control: A Design Approach," written by C. David Cooper and F. C. Alley, supplied to the Charlevoix Courier by Thorley, explains that two pollutants emitted at the Cemex site, nitrogen oxide and carbon monoxide, make it difficult for people to breathe and may result in other health effects.

"Nitrogen oxides contribute to smog, are injurious to plants and animals and can affect human health," the authors write.

Brown clouds emanating from the stacks indicate the presence of nitrogen oxide, Thorley said.

The human effects of nitrogen oxide can include nose and eye irritation, swelling, bronchitis and pneumonia. However, the authors indicate usual concentrations of the pollutant are below the levels that would result in these human health effects.

Thorley doesn't know what concentration level the Cemex site is at for nitrogen oxide emissions.

When mixed with other contaminants the nitrogen oxide can create ozone.

Thorley said as our ozone layer is depleting many may feel this is a positive thing. In the atmosphere, it is. But here, at sea level, it can attack synthetic rubber, textiles and paints and discolor plant leaves.

The authors of the text write that carbon monoxide doesn't affect plants and animals, but can have "significant effects on human health." The problem occurs as it reacts with hemoglobin in blood, preventing oxygen transfer.

"Depending on the concentration of carbon monoxide and the time of exposure, effects on humans range from slight headaches to nausea to death," the text reads.

One of the other major pollutants present in emissions at the Cemex site is sulfur dioxide, which enters the atmosphere and is a known precursor of acid rain.

The emissions in general can reduce visibility by creating smog and haze, may soil buildings and can be corrosive and erosive subsequently damaging materials. And the emissions can even alter local weather patterns, according to the text book.

The text's authors noted, that sulfur effects are intensified by the presence of other pollutants including particulate matter. Particulates are one of Thorley's major concerns at the site.

While enclosures have been built to minimize the reintroduction into the air of CKD, one of the particulates that is a problem at the site, Thorley said more enclosures are needed. CKD in the landfill also has to be wet to inhibit it from blowing in the wind.

CKD and other particulates are referred to by the MDEQ as particulate matter (PM) and particulate matter 10 (PM-10), the 10 is a reference to the size of the particles which are less than 10 microns in diameter.

Thorley said PM-10 are of greater concern because they have more of an impact on lungs as a result of their small size.

According to the environmental textbook's authors, particulate effects are similar to those of sulfur. Particulates can also damage human and animal health and retard plant growth.

Thorley said some changes Cemex has introduced that have helped, including a better enclosure at the North Conditioning Tower, but even there, emissions need even better controls. He added that the new clinker cooler at the facility has also probably helped reduce emissions.

The 17 air quality violations that have been recorded over the last year, are cited in two documents the company is required to abide by — a consent order and consent judgment it entered into in May of 1994.

The emission limits were established after the company changed its cement making process from wet to dry by adding a preheater tower. Thorley said it still operates under those early permitting rules and that if the process was updated, Cemex would be subject to new emissions limits.

Cemex changed hands in 2001 from the former Southdown Cement Manufacturing to its current name. At that time, the consent order the MDEQ had with Medusa was transferred and it has also undergone some revisions.

Thorley said the consent order's teeth are financial penalties to the violator and required corrective actions.

If the company installs new equipment used in the burning process it is required to notify the MDEQ. If it fails to do so a $10,000 penalty is handed down.

If emissions reach above the allowed state level a $3,000 fine per day of violation is levied.

While the number of violations the company has accumulated over a one year period may indicate the rules are unreasonable, Thorley said he doesn't feel the consent order is impossible for Cemex to fulfill.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency is currently working toward a new consent order for Cemex, which Thorley feels is needed.

He said remedies for most of the 17 violations are not addressed in the current consent order.

"A new consent order would make them do something to correct these problems," he said. "I would like to see them install air control equipment to address all the problems they have. I would like to be able to walk out there on an inspection and not find violations on a consistent basis."

Those who feel they may have a related air quality complaint can contact Thorley at (989) 705-3409.

Ceremonies planned for Sept. 11 in area

HONOR

They said all are welcome to come on their lunch hour to mark the day with community, silence and prayer.

The Christian Science Society will open its doors from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and church member Frances Lahde said during those hours it will provide a quiet room for prayer and a church representative to speak with for those in need of fellowship. The church is located at, 205 Clinton Street.

The Charlevoix Community Reformed Church will host a community service from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at 100 Oak Street in Charlevoix.

Charlevoix United Methodist Church will host a candlelight service from 7 to 8 p.m. at 104 State Street in Charlevoix.

Throughout the day at Charlevoix Public Schools, students and teachers will remember the victims in their individual classrooms through activities as well as through district wide red, white and blue clothing day. Members of the American Legion and Veterans of Foreign Wars will also be at the schools.

Like Charlevoix students, employees at Harbor Industries will be encouraged to wear patriotic apparel. The local industrial leader will conduct, "A Day of Caring" that afternoon by volunteering time at both Charlevoix Area Hospital and Boulder Park.

In a written statement, Debbie Kelts, a human resources representative of the company said this day of caring is the company's way of giving back to the community and commemorating the lives lost and affected by the tragedy.

"We encourage other businesses in the area to take a few moments out of their day and pay tribute to those who lost their lives and those who survived as heroes," she added.

Those needing a a reprieve from work and looking for a dose of quiet reading time can visit the Charlevoix Public Library where a Sept. 11 tribute book display will be offered to patrons. The library is located at 109 Clinton Street in Charlevoix.

Machines broken into

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office is investigating the breaking and enterings of six pop machines located outside of four businesses in Charlevoix Township.

The incidents occurred the night of Aug. 28.. Machines outside of K-Mart, Performance Plus Oil Change, Dry Harbour Motor Sports and Russell's Auto Body were all broken into by unknown suspects who concentrated on the "dollar bill" change area.

An undetermined amount of money was stolen, but each machine had over $500 damage and lost revenue until they are repaired.

The incidents are believed to be related to other vending machine breaking and enterings in the Grand Traverse area over the last several weeks.

Anyone who may have witnessed suspicious persons "casing" these areas is asked to contact Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater or D/Sgt. Don Sproul at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Office at 547-4461.

Football team will keep it on the ground

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

With four players returning to the Charlevoix High School varsity football team that have excellent capabilities running the ball, coach Todd Klinger expects the team to keep things on the ground this year.

Klinger said those four players he will be counting on to move the ball through the opponents defensive line will be Jeff Urban, Nick Pizzuro, Matt Killkenny and Todd Carey.

Helping them out will be new quarterback sophomore Will Kautz.

"He shows great poise and toughness," Klinger said.

Kautz is taking over for regular quarterback Nate Teuscher. Teuscher is sidelined this year due to an injury.

"The biggest thing is for him (Kautz) to get more time at quarterback," Klinger said.

He added the Rayders will have a great offensive line protecting Kautz and opening holes for those running the ball. The line is a good mix of players with size and players with starting experience.

At offensive tackle will be Marshall Bakker, Nick Potter, Hal Foster and Luke Whitley. At guard, will be Matt Kochanny, Josh Carter and Jon Reid. At center will be Dustin Dutcher and Matt Burke.

On the ends of the offensive line will be Donovan Swanson, Taylor Fisher, Troy Coen, Mike Rosen and Brandon Anderson.

The only downside to the Rayders offensive game is its ability for "big plays," Klinger said.

"This is where you would throw a pass 50-60 yards for a touchdown. The players this year are move the ball and grind it out players," he said. "The strength of the team is there are more guys that run the football than guys that are in the open field and catching the football."

Along with a team that can run the ball and get touchdowns, the Rayders also have a team that can keep opponents from scoring touchdowns with its defense.

Leading the defense will be inside linebackers Swanson and Foster, along with Reid and Coen. In the outside linebacker positions will be Urban, Pizzuro and Matt Burke.

On the defensive line will be Potter, Bakker, Carter, Kochanny, Mike Curiel, Mark Baldwin, Dutcher and Luke Whitley.

In the secondary will be Carey, Fisher, Killkenny, Josh Scott, Rosen and Brandon Anderson.

Klinger said there are 22 players on the team, creating some good depth for him to pick from. For every two positions — such as the guard and tackle slots — Klinger has three people to rotate. This will also allow him to keep a good number of fresh players in the game.

He added overall the team had a good couple of weeks of practice before the season.

"We are a little behind after losing Teuscher, but I think we are going to blend well offensively," he said.

The Rayders will need this when they face some of the strong non-league teams on the schedule this year, such as Benzie Central. As for the league, Klinger said the teams to look out for are Traverse City St. Francis and Boyne City.

While the Charlevoix High School girls' basketball team is young — there is only one senior on the team — coach Jim Parrish said it has a good base to build on.

"This is a rebuilding year. I lost five good seniors last year, but I think the program is looking real nice," Parrish said. "I think the future is real good for girls' basketball in Charlevoix. I have a lot of height and speed and some real basketball-minded kids."

This knowledge of the game is what Parrish said will keep his team acting professional and not making those rookie mistakes.

"Once they see it is a different level, they will come around," he said. This means Parrish will have to get all of the girls some playing time to build experience.

"I figure every game will be a challenge," he said.

Parrish's only senior is Catherine Sheldon. Sheldon has never played organized basketball since eighth grade, but Parrish said she brings a certain toughness to the game that is fantastic.

After Sheldon, Parrish has six juniors on the team and four sophomores, giving him a solid start on next year's program.

Other standout players include returning sophomore 6 footer Grace Farrell, — and another 6 footer — Sarah Cross. Cross and Farrell have played basketball together since second grade.

Additionally, the Rayders will be returning Alyssia McDonough, who has a great mid range shot; Rachel Wyniawskyj, who is an excellent three point shooter; Rebecca Kanine, who is coming back from an injury and Shayna Drost, who is "flat out fast."

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross country teams preparing for state

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the Charlevoix High School boys' cross country team is facing a rebuilding year, the girls' cross country team is ready to take on any team that comes its way.

With two-time all-state, three time all-conference and regional champion Liz Ulrich leading them, the girls' team has eight of last year's nine starters back.

"I have a solid pack," Coach Mary Plude said of her team. "They are going to be real tight all season."

In this pack is Ulrich, Natashia Klieber, Lorna Kilburn, Michelle Rowe, Sonya Plude, Elizabeth Madison, Theresa Martin and Brenna Bergmann. Among them, Mary said she has four great leaders in Ulrich, Klieber, Kilburn and Rowe.

"They all work hard. These are just people who work really well with all the girls," Mary said. "They called people and worked with them all summer. They are just really fantastic."

And they are being supported by a good young group behind them, Mary said. This will make the team a running force for at least a few more years.

Mary will be looking for these skills as the team takes on tough opponents such as Harbor Springs, Elk Rapids and Boyne City.

"The girls want to go to state. They have been driven by that for nine months; that has been their focus," Mary said.

"We have to be patient and try to put it all in at the end."

Ken Plude,
Boys' coach

The experience of the girls' team is in contrast to the boys' team who, while it will be a competitive team, it has lost nine of its top ten runners from last year to graduation.

However, Coach Ken Plude is very optimistic. He has an all-state returning runner, Peter Gorkiewicz and 24 runners to pick from. This gives Ken a nice amount of depth on the team, but depth that is inexperienced.

Ken said he will be looking to the skills of Gorkiewicz and his number two runner Tom Apelbacher. Additionally, he has a potentially good pack in Brian Christianson, Mike Castiglione, Caleb McCary and Jason Westenbroek.

The Charlevoix boys' team has four seniors on it: Gorkiewicz, Castiglione, Will Barrett and Eric Bourassa.

Ken will be taking his team into a tough conference though, that includes Harbor Springs who was third in the state finals last year and good runners from Elk Rapids and Benzie Central.

"The big thing is trying to get to state. Our region has a history of being tough, so we have to beat those teams to get to state," Ken said. "We won't be any paper hounds at the beginning; we have to be patient and try to put it all in at the end."

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Charlevoix soccer coach Josh Block thinks this will be one of the best years for his team.

"Realistically, I am hoping we have our best season ever. With this team, that is very obtainable. If we can get out of our district, we will do really well," he said. "We have a real good shot at our conference."

Block can say this because of many solid and experienced players he has on the team this year.

"We only lost four of our players last year. So we have every one else pretty much back," he said.

He said the only big loss the team has taken this year is a defenseman had to move to Traverse City.

"We are pretty solid," Block said.

Among those players, he said he has some great seniors to pick from, who will be the key to the offense.

Those seniors are Trevor Kline, Spencer Bryan, Travis Smith and Scott Friske. Adding to this fearsome foursome with be a fifth offensive player, Jon Dean.

In the goalie position, Block said junior Jake Pace has had a great start. Pace is being helped with stopping goals on the Rayders by Bryce Daly, Ezra Bakker and Mike DuPuis in the defensive back positions.

For the holes on defense and offense, Block is not concerned.

"We have a lot of young people that are going to do a great job. It's just finding which one for those spots," he said. "My incoming people are real good."

These players are also a good mix of seniors with experience and younger players willing to learn.

There are currently 23 players on the varsity team. Block said there will not be a junior varsity team this year, which is one of the few downsides to the Charlevoix program.

"If I could get up to 28, then I would have enough for a junior varsity team," he said. "A junior varsity team is essential for a good program."

But, Block is looking past this problem and is currently concentrating on the strong teams he will face in the Rayders' quest for the conference title.

In the conference, Block said he is looking out for Houghton Lake and Roscommon. For regionals, he said Elk Rapids is the team the Rayders have to beat.

"Realistically, I am hoping we have our best season ever. With this team, that is very obtainable."

Varsity soccer coach

Golf team to be a force on the links

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

While the Charlevoix High School golf team may be young with only two seniors, they are not to be reckoned with.

The team is led this year by senior golfer David Shearer, who has consistently been one of the best golfers on the team since his freshman year. As a freshman, Shearer was an all-conference and all-regional golfer. Then in his sophomore year, he was named all-conference, all-regional and all-state, which he repeated in his junior year.

And, already this year, Shearer has broken a school golfing record with a score of 67 from the Bulldog Invitational Aug. 28 at Indian River.

"He is coming into his senior year and he is playing better golf than in his whole life," coach Jim Glynn said of Shearer.

He added Shearer is a very hard worker, who is constantly staying after practices to further improve his shooting, sometimes until dark.

But, Shearer's hard work ethic is not unusual for the golf team, according to Glynn. Every member of the team also works very hard and is very dedicated to improving their games.

In the team's number two slot is junior Jordan Nystrom, one of those players Glynn says has a very good work ethic.

"He will just keep getting a lower score and get better (as the season progresses)," Glynn said.

In the number three slot is junior York Smith. Glynn said Smith has "not broken out yet," but will very soon.

"I am just waiting for him to lower his score. It will come. It just takes time," he said.

In the number four slot is junior Ryan DeYoung, also a hard worker. He is followed in the number five slot by the second senior in the group, Kreg Wager, and then by Jake Burns.

Glynn said all three of these players are key to the team's overall success. Whether the team wins or loses is based on these three students getting low scores.

To help them achieve this goal, they are also in a competitive battle for each other's slot on the team. Glynn said this competition is good for the individual players and the team.

In addition to these top six players, Glynn has a host of sophomores and juniors to pick from that are all very good golfers. He attributes this to the Charlevoix Junior Golf program.

"They are a true feeder system to the high school," he said.

Additionally, this should mean good things for the future of the team.

"When they (ninth and tenth graders) are seniors, by logic, we should have a tough team," Glynn said.

All of these skills the Rayders bring to the course will come in handy when they face some of the tough teams, like Harbor Springs — who Glynn believes is the team to beat this year — as well as Elk Rapids and Traverse City St. Francis.

"There is a lot of parity in the league," Glynn said.

Charlevoix remembers

Piece of history given to island

By JEREMY MCBAIN
Editor

Thanks to a seasonal resident of Beaver Island, this area of Charlevoix County is home to a piece of one of the World Trade Centers.

Beaver Island seasonal resident and Michigan State Senator Phil Hoffman, of the Jackson District, brought pieces of the World Trade Center from New York City, N.Y., to Beaver Island and Jackson. The World Trade Center was destroyed by a terrorist attack on Sept. 11, 2001.

"The impact of Sept. 11 was on everybody," Hoffman said.

The Beaver Island piece weighs about 600 pounds and is currently located outside of McDonough's Market in the village of St. James on Beaver Island. It has been on the island since Aug. 14.

Hoffman said he was unsure which of the two World Trade Center towers the piece came from.

The piece that he took to Jackson was from World Trade Center tower two. The two ton steel beam was

Security tight at Big Rock facility

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

The terrorist attacks that occurred Sept. 11, 2001 drove a hole in America's sense of security and made communities across the nation inspect and revise their approach to defense.

Locally, as residents learned of the attacks, the thoughts of some immediately turned to two places Charlevoix could be vulnerable, Big Rock Point nuclear power plant and the Charlevoix Municipal Airport.

While residents were worried about a possible attack at Big Rock, the plant's employees were hard at work ensuring security was airtight.

Tim Petrosky, Big Rock Point Public Affairs Director, said he remembers that morning well.

"One of the ironies of last Sept. 11 was that when we became aware of the terrorist attacks, we were conducting a practice emergency exercise," he said.

He explained that these practices have been in place for many years to respond to and prevent any abnormal activity, including an attack on the plant.

See SECURITY, page 11

Memorial activities to be throughout day

Charlevoix residents can honor the heroes and victims of the terrorist attacks Sept. 11, 2001 at many locations today.

The following is a brief listing of tribute activities and services taking place this afternoon, Wednesday, in the Charlevoix area:

- A remembrance day service is scheduled for noon at Charlevoix's St. Mary Catholic Church located at 1003 Bridge Street.
- The First Congregational Church UCC will host an open sanctuary from noon to 1 p.m. at 101 State Street in Charlevoix.
- The Christian Science Society located at, 205 Clinton Street in Charlevoix will open its doors from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. as a prayer and fellowship location.
- The Charlevoix Community Reformed Church will host a community service from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at 100 Oak Street in Charlevoix.
- Charlevoix United Methodist Church will host a candlelight service from 7 to 8 p.m. at 104 State Street in Charlevoix.
- Charlevoix Public Schools, will remember the victims and heroes in their individual classrooms as well as through a district wide red, white and blue clothing day.

Corrections

In the article titled "Kiwanis teams up with Head Start Preschool," that was published in the Sept. 4 edition of the Charlevoix Courier, the school's hours of operation were incorrectly listed as 6:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. The school is open from 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m. Also in that article the enrollment contact number for Sarah Rose, was incorrect. Rose can be reached at 547-1141, extension 18.

Also, in the supplement for fall sports, a name in the cross-country story on page 4 was wrong. Coach Mary Plude said one of her leaders is Lauren Siberhorn.

Designers: Plan may not be done in time

By JULIE WITTHOEFT
Staff Writer

A special meeting of the Charlevoix City Council and Downtown Development Authority (DDA) was called to keep the East Park and Charlevoix Municipal Marina renovation planning process rolling but, marina engineers don't think they'll be able to make the April 2003 deadline.

"Based upon the current permit agency project review history for similar projects of this type, and the time needed to properly complete a project, it is unlikely that the stated next April schedule can be achieved," stated United Design Associates Inc. engineers James Muschell and John Schlak, in a memo written to Charlevoix City Manager Mike Wiesner.

At the Sept. 6 special meeting, Michigan Waterways Commissioner John Winn, a Charlevoix resident, reiterated the need for Charlevoix's project to be in the commission's 2005 budget period, which means plans have to be submitted by April 1, 2003.

Waterways may fund up to 75 percent of the marina renovation cost and may pick up a percentage of East Park renovations that pertain to boaters. Costs of just renovating the marina have been estimated at over $4 million and Winn has "guaranteed" funding for Charlevoix if he is on the commission.

But Waterways commissioners are appointed by the governor and Winn's seat is not necessarily secure.

In spite of comments from DDA member John Kurtz that the process is moving too quickly, council moved forward at that meeting.

In order to keep the ball rolling, council motioned for two plans to move to the next stage in the planning process. These are United Design's plan B and Charlevoix resident and former mayor Josh Barnes' plan.

Winn has stressed on several occasions that Waterways funding is contingent on more transient docks being offered to boaters. At the meeting Aug. 28, he suggested an alternate plan that shows docks in the current area where the United States Coast Guard buoy tender ACACIA is located.

The ACACIA is scheduled to be decommissioned in 2006 and Charlevoix is not guaranteed a replacement vessel.

Residents at that meeting said United Design's plan B, which showed docks extending 235 feet into Round Lake, was intrusive and use of the Coast Guard area could give Waterways its docks while minimizing dock extensions out into the lake.

Many residents at that August meeting agreed to plan docking for this Coast Guard area and suggested to Muschell that he engineer the plan.

However, in spite of the indication by community members, Charlevoix's City Council and Downtown Development Authority decided to move forward with the two plans that won't include this area.

"I talked to representatives of the Sept. 11 teaches change is instant

EDITORIAL

Only one year ago today, the world changed instantly.

Only one year ago, we sat in shocked silence as we watched those horrible images on our televisions. Only one year ago, we cried as a nation as the death toll rose. Only one year ago, hundreds of firefighters and law enforcement personnel proved to the world what it means to be a true hero.

Only one year ago, those shades of gray between black and white were erased as we discovered what evil really was. Only one year ago, terror came to our door and took the lives of American citizens.

Only one year ago, we came together, regardless of political affiliation, race or religion and comforted each other. Only one year ago, there were no fierce debates over controversial topics, because time was better served by coming together as a nation. Only one year ago, our freedom was not taken for granted and American pride was seen once again.

Only one year....but, time marches on.

As the grief slowly subsides, the people start to move on with their lives. The old political debates are returning and it seems as though things are getting back to normal.

But, things have changed. As we argue the issues, perform our tasks at work and spend time with our families, we do so with the knowledge our nation comes together when it is needed and we will not be deterred in our love of United States of America.

On the anniversary of those horrible attacks, let's take a day to forget about politics, controversy and those other little things in life. Let's honor the memory of those extremely brave firefighters and law enforcement officers, as well as the victims they gave their lives trying to save in New York City, N.Y. and Washington D.C. by celebrating our own lives and our freedoms.

On this day, honor the dead by showing love to your family, your neighbor, your country and our cherished freedoms.

After all, only one year ago today, American lives changed instantly.

It's the season of corruption

Roger Knutson

'Ear to the ground'

We are fast approaching the season of corruption.

No, I am not talking about the upcoming political campaigns and elections. Most of the corruption we see around us is from the activities of molds and fungi. Political corruption is different from fungal corruption. Political corruption costs us time and money; fungal corruption makes the world a better place.

Webster's Unabridged lists as a definition for corruption: "Decay or decomposition of matter, as by rotting or oxidization" before it lists "inducement by means of improper considerations (as of political officials)."

Fungal corruption is certainly much older than the political kind, but is probably about equally universal. I don't think the founding fathers had the season of maximum fungal corruption in mind when they set elections in the fall, but the coincidence is worth noting.

What sets off this annual festival of corruption? The abundance of dead and nearly dead things and parts of things. In tropical climates, death and decay are more or less constant, but here they are likely to reach a peak as summer winds down and all that dead and dying stuff follows gravity to the soil surface.

A parenthetical reminder here to those of you who watch or care about your Norway Maple trees. Every year at this time the leaves of Norway Maples (not other kinds) reveal dime-sized black spots. The condition is called Tar Spot of Norway Maple and looks exactly like its name.

For reasons of spring and summer weather conditions, the number of spots on such maple leaves is larger this year than in any year of the last decade. With enough such fungal spots on a maple leaf, the leaf may give up its summer job a few weeks early and fall to the ground. A severely afflicted tree may lose nearly all its leaves before the surrounding Sugar Maples even begin to color up for fall.

The kind of Norway Maple with leaves that are dark red all summer also has the tar-like spots. They may not show up so prominently as on the green leaves, but they are still there.

Even the worst year for Maple Tar Spot in living memory causes no harm to trees. The leaves are already nearly dead after a summer's work and their early falling is not a problem. The trees are fine and healthy. A deciduous tree losing its leaves is like you having a haircut or trimming your nails. In evolutionary terms, the tree expects the leaves to die and fall off, and whether sooner or later is of little consequence.

The early growth of an easily visible fungus on the maple leaves is just an obvious sign that the corruption of the leaves is under way. A microscopic look at the leaves would reveal dozens of kinds of less apparent fungi already at their corrupting work. The process speeds up once the leaves are on the ground.

The only thing that limits the decomposing activity of fungi is the lack of material to decompose. More leaves on the ground means more and faster decay. Political corruption also tends to expand to fill the available coffers.

At this time of year it is probably worthwhile giving some thought to all kind of corruption. A monetarily corrupted politician speaking from a fungally corrupted, dead stump provides a nice overall image for the season.

Grief continues

Editor:

A number of recent events related to Sept. 11 have revealed for us the importance of rituals in our lives. Our society is comprised of people with religions and beliefs from all over the world and so we lack a consistent way of responding to death. One thing we all have in common however is ritual and grief. Rituals are milestones on the path of life, marking happy or sad occasions.

A national moment of silence at 8:46 a.m. the morning of Sept. 11, 2002 was a poignant ritual for Americans to join together in grief and remembrance. But it will not be the end of our grief. Grief continues with us in some form always throughout the course of our lives. How we deal with it, individually and as a society, is what's important.

In our society we are urged to hurry everything, including grief. We get three days of bereavement leave from work and are expected to resume life without disruption. Most of us are uncomfortable being around someone feeling the pain of grief, as if it were contagious. We want them to just get over it and move on — often so we don't have to feel our own pain from losses we have avoided acknowledging.

The terrible tragedy of Sept. 11 is a collective opportunity for us to develop a deeper awareness and compassion surrounding death and loss. The crash site memorial service in Pennsylvania followed by Rudolph Guiliani's high school commencement speech, the ceremony recognizing completion of the cleanup at ground zero, the pillars of light, the time capsule in the last stone placed at the Pentagon, candlelight vigils, community gatherings and the national moment of silence are all healthy ways of collectively honoring the reality that nearly 3,000 lives ended that day.

Life continues for all of us and we are all bereaved. Those we have known and those we have loved continue to live on in our lives in new ways. We carry them with us and there are times when their absence hurts deeply, other times when the memories are sweet. The best we can do for each other is to let each of us grieve in our own way and let that be all right. To encourage our own personal and collective rituals that honor important people in our lives who have died. To understand that grieving is part of what it means to be human.

The National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization offers a series of guides that may help in better understanding grief in our personal lives and at work. These guides are available online at http://www.nhpco.org.

Locally, Hospice of Northwest Michigan, formerly Charlevoix County Hospice, Inc., offers a Grief Recovery Series three times a year, the next one to start Oct. 1 in Boyne City. In November they also offer a Handling the Holidays program and an annual Memorial Service. All of these programs are open to the public, without charge. No war with Iraq

Editor:

Do you want to stop forest fires? Solution: Cut down the forests, according to the president. Do you want to stop weapons of mass destruction? Take out Saddam Hussein by going to war with Iraq without the approval of Congress. Who needs a Constitution anyway, especially one that clearly states that the power to declare war belongs to the Congress! Certainly not the Bush Administration.

If we truly want to get rid of weapons of mass destruction, we must first insist on intrusive weapons inspectors and if Saddam Hussein denies their entry, then take out the 700 sites that have been identified as weapon manufacture areas with air power.

Maybe then the people of Iraq, who should do the job of ousting Saddam, will take the action necessary to get rid of their infamous leader.

Road issues

Editor:

Unfortunately, macadam (a type of asphalt) nor any viscous asphalt paving material can withstand the braking forces of heavy trucks on US-31 north between Hurlbut and Antrim streets. The ripped road surface is unsafe for trucks and increasingly for lighter vehicles as well. Those of us who live within one half mile can hear the effects of the degradation. When responsible engineering specifies a suitable surface, we'll have reconstruction noise and inconvenience as well.

Thank you

Editor:

I'm sending a huge "thanks" to Charlevoix for its generous support of the Muscular Dystrophy Association on Labor Day weekend! Because of your help, our MDA Telethon raised a record $58,276,118 in contributions and pledges.

It was heartwarming to see people across the country — from celebrities to unsung heroes — coming together to help families affected by neuromuscular diseases. As our nation marks the first anniversary of Sept. 11, it's clear that we remain true to our most cherished values.

I want to thank you not only for calling in pledges, but for supporting MDA programs throughout the year, including Shamrocks Against Dystrophy sales, MDA Lock-Ups and Fill-the-Boot drives by fire fighters.

Your support makes it possible for MDA to keep the engines running at full speed on worldwide research seeking treatments and cures. We've made so many significant gains in recent years! Besides research, your donations fund other vital programs, including some 230 clinics, help with medical equipment and — the favorite of "my kid" — summer camp.

If you'd like to get involved with these great MDA programs year-round, call your local MDA office, call our national headquarters at (800) 572-1717 or visit our Web site at www.mdausa.org.

Charlevoix, you're the best! Thank you from the bottom of my heart!

Tillers in area

Editor:

Tillers International, a non-profit organization, has been farming with oxen and horses, building timber frame barns, and traveling overseas to teach people skills in draft animal power, blacksmithing and water and soil conservation for over 20 years. Last winter, Tillers acquired a beautiful farm in Norwood Township to use as a satellite training facility.

To begin rebuilding the historic farm site, we are building a timber framed cottage on Ferry Road just down the hill from the red schoolhouse art gallery beginning Monday, Sept. 9, and working through Saturday, Sept. 14.

Tillers International would like to invite people to stop by and see the construction process and get to know us. Work will be from 9 a.m. to about 5:30 p.m. Looking forward to meeting you.
